

NATIONAL WEEKEND – 4, 5, 6 October 2013

“Science is knowledge. In action it is the research and documentation of natural law. For that job there is one essential besides training and common intelligence and that is integrity, i.e., singleness of purpose. The “single eye” that Christ said is the only means to enlightenment. In that sense the scientist is truly religious in spirit and it is only in that obedient, impersonal, selfless spirit that Truth, his objective, can be attained.”

Friday 4th October: New Times Dinner

Guest Speaker, Anne Bressington, MLC

Saturday 5th October National Seminar

“Down to Earth: an Orderly Approach to Truth”

Whether it is in the art of composting with organic matter, the rebuilding of our soils according to organic/biodynamic methods, to the rotten decomposing-politics of the UN Agenda 21, we are all seeking to deal with various aspects of Truth.

Speakers:

- Adam Voysey, Roseneath Organics, Mylor South Australia.
- Ann Bressington, MLC, South Australian Parliament
- Matthew Quinn, B. Sc. (Biological Studies) Churchill Fellowship 1997, Director SA Composters, Lonsdale South Australia.

Adam Voysey of Roseneath Organics: “Born Out of Personal Experiences”

Roseneath Organics combines modern peer reviewed medical research with old fashioned herbal folklore, as passed down to us over millennia by wise persons, sages and mystics. They are bio-organic growers and have a keen desire to promote the sustainable use of the sanctuary we all share.

A healing herbal philosophy was born out of a personal sickness, an eclectic blend of unpleasant doctor experiences, an urgent need to resolve personal health problems and the passion to make affordable all-natural products that really truly help. Adam originally attended Peter Bennett’s Organic Gardening Course.

Ann Bressington MLC will speak on: “The Growing Tentacles of Agenda 21: Are Coming to a Place Near You!”

Ann was elected to the Legislative Council of South Australia as an Independent Member on 18 March, 2006. She is the first female Independent to be elected in the history of that parliament. Ann has done her homework on Agenda 21, which she first heard about in 2008, at first dismissing it as a ‘conspiracy theory’. Later she noticed a legislative pattern emerging with laws being created that were consistent with Agenda 21. Ann noted: “Australia signed the Lima Agreement and 100s of other agreements with the support of all major political players, Whitlam, Fraser, Hawke, Keating, Hewson, Howard, Rudd, the Democrats, the Greens, and even the Nationals. It has been put to me that all of these treaties were the foundation for the roll out of Agenda 21.”

Matthew Quinn, B. Sc., on “Why Compost?”

After completing a Biology degree and an Organic Gardening course with well known organic gardener and author, Peter Bennett, Matt started SA Composters. It started from his organic home garden, but soon demand for the high quality compost out-grew the backyard and after undertaking a Churchill Fellowship world tour where he studied composting operations in America, UK and New Zealand, SA Composters was born. SA Composters have been making quality compost since 1990.

Sunday 6th October 2013

Divine Service
Action Conference

Accommodation Addresses

The South Australian League members and supporters are looking forward to hosting this annual event and welcoming interstate visitors into their midst. The advance notice will help you plan a holiday along with attending our New Times Dinner, National Seminar and Action Conference.

The Friday evening New Times Dinner will be held at the Public Schools’ Club (within Adelaide proper). The Saturday and Sunday events will be held at Lothlorien, Happy Valley (in Adelaide’s south). The following accommodation addresses are within reasonable motoring distance of Lothlorien, Happy Valley. These are only suggestions, you may already know where you would like to stay.

- Tollgate Motel, Glen Osmond: Conveniently situated between the scenic hills and the shopping district of Glen Osmond Road. Tollgate Motel accommodation from $68 single. Phone Number 08 8379 1651 Website: <http://www.tollgatemotel.com/>

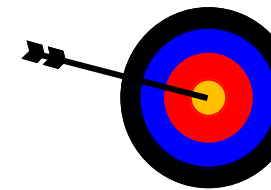

- Glenelg Lake Holiday Units, Glenelg North: Glenelg Lake Holiday Units are situated in the pleasant seaside town of Glenelg in South Australia. From $77. Address: 1 George St, Glenelg Nth. Ph: (08) 8322 6007.

- Mick O’Shea’s Hotel/Motel, Main South Road, Hackam. Phone 8326 2939. $110 per night. Discount for early bookings.

- St Francis Winery Motel at Reynella. Closer to Lothlorien than the others. Early bookings: at this stage, rooms can be booked on line for $90 for a standard room. Phone them for more options if desired 08 8322 2246.

The Internet-Google is very helpful for viewing the various accommodation venues.

The South Australian State Weekend will be replaced by the National Weekend in October 2013. Please note the changes.

ON TARGET

A WEEKLY COMMENTARY

- NEWS HIGHLIGHTS
- BACKGROUND INFORMATION
- COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Print Post Publication Number 100000815 The Price of Freedom is Eternal Vigilance —

VOL. 49. No. 35

6th September 2013

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Obama set for holy Tomahawk war: The "responsibility to protect" (R2P) doctrine invoked to legitimize the 2011 war on Libya has just transmogrified into "responsibility to attack" (R2A) Syria. Just because the Obama administration says so...

What happens next requires concentric crystal balls - from Tomahawks to a barrage of air strikes to Special Ops commandos on the ground to a sustained air campaign lasting months. In his long interview to Izvestia, Assad gives the impression he thinks Obama is bluffing.

What's certain is that Syria won't be a "piece of cake" like Libya; even depleted on all fronts, Gaddafi resisted for eight long months after NATO started its humanitarian bombing. Syria has a weary but still strong army of 200,000; loads of Soviet and Russian weapons; very good anti-aircraft systems; and full support from asymmetrical warfare experts Iran and Hezbollah. Not to mention Russia, which just needs to forward a few S-300 air defence batteries and relay solid intelligence.

So get used to how international relations work in the age of newspeak. General Abdel Fattah al-Sisi's army in Egypt can kill hundreds of his own people who were protesting against a military coup. Washington couldn't care less - as in the coup that is not a coup and the bloodbath that is not a bloodbath.

No one knows for sure what exactly happened in the chemical weapons saga near Damascus. But that's the pretext for yet another American war - just a few days before a Group of 20 summit hosted by Putin in St Petersburg. Holy Tomahawk! R2A, here we go.

-- Pepe Escobar, The Roving Eye, Asia Times, 27 August 2013

http://www.atimes.com/atimes/Middle\_East/MID-01-270813.html

- 2 Letters Written to the Press/ Politicians
- 2 The Collapse of the Modern Romans
- 3 Does Obama Know He’s Fighting on Al-Qa’ida’s Side?
- 3 Psychopathic Old Men Wage War from Comfort of Arm Chairs
- 4 Not ‘Market Failure’ – It’s A Costs/ Just Price Financial Failure!
- 4 Cutting Loose: Hungary Pays Off IMF Debt
- 4 Sweet, Sweet Justice?
- 4 Elysium: Liberal Immigrationists in Space
- 5 Family First: Majority LNP Candidates Support Gay ‘Marriage’
- 5 The Spiritual Vision of J.R.R. Tolkien
- 5 More on TTP: Public Citizens ‘Global Watch’
- 6 Made In Australia Campaign - Food Security
- 6 And What of Kevin Rudd?
- 7 History Repeating Itself: For We Who Will Not Learn...
- 8 New Times Dinner and Saturday Seminar

TARGETS FOR THE WEEK

This is the last time we can remind you to lodge your ‘immigration protest’ when you vote in the Federal Election. Write ‘reduce immigration’ on the top margin of your ballot papers and it will be read by scrutineers and election officials. If enough voters take this action it will be noted.

Start thinking about writing letters to the new Senators and MHR Members; make their acquaintance and be polite as you ask them how they will use their vote to return ‘national sovereignty’ to the Australian people by opposing the external treaties foisted on Australians by bodies like the unrepresentative United Nations. Wise them up to UN Agenda 21... we don’t need it. Prepare for the National Weekend in South Australia [see page 8] ND

Letters of the Week

A MESSAGE TO TONY ABBOTT ON THREAT OF WAR AGAINST SYRIA

To: 'Tony.Abbott.MP@aph.gov.au' -
Subject: Syria, 28 August 2013:

Use of chemicals in warfare is certainly reaching the limit, however Australia must certainly be very careful before it commits to any action in Syria. At this stage, according to ABC radio broadcasts, there is no proof as to who may have been responsible for the use of chemicals. Was it the Assad regime, the rebels or even another force wishing to create grounds for the West to be involved.

Consequently, which group would be the target in any action from outside of Syria?

Whichever group was chosen, the result would inevitably affect a wider group meaning loss of life for innocent people. Looking back at Iraq, Afghanistan, Libya and Egypt, has the involvement of the West delivered anything like peace? Of course not! It has only delivered massive loss of life for local civilians, local soldiers and Western troops and converted cities and towns to rubble heaps.

Australia does not want to be a part of any more of these exercises. Please do not offer a commitment from Australia. -
- Ken Grundy, Naracoorte SA 5271

To the Editor, The Age, 28 August 2013

It is encouraging to know that a recent poll found 60 per cent of American respondents opposed to US intervention in Syria ('Washington hardens but war-weary public says no', 28/8). It is not war weariness, though, but disbelief in the ethical credibility of the project. The claim that the Assad government must be 'punished' for an alleged chemical weapons attack rings as hollow as the past 'weapons of mass destruction' excuse for an unjustified attack on Iraq. It has been clear for some months that powerful interests have become frustrated by their failure to bring down Assad, using 'rebels' (funded by whom?) as proxies. Your editorial assertion that 'the world cannot stand by and allow Dr Assad to remain in power' also rings hollow. Why not, then, a crusade against Robert Mugabe and all the other brutal rulers around the world, to say nothing of US aggressors?

- - Nigel Jackson, Belgrave Victoria

LETTER TO THE PRESS

The Editor, The Chronicle:

The explanation by Rural City of Wangaratta Mayor Roz Parisotto and Victorian Local Government Minister Jeanette Powell MP that the referendum on Constitutional Recognition of Local Government will not be held with the Federal election is welcome (Chronicle 7th August 2013.)

The controversial appointment of a representative of the Australian Local Government Association on the Council of Australian Governments is still an issue. The role of the Council of Australian Governments is an issue for the Federal Election.

Originally a discussion meeting of the State Premiers and the Prime Minister a format of Council of Australian Governments (COAG) has developed. Control is held by a secretariat in the Office of the Prime Minister, the Prime Minister calls the meetings, sets the agenda and chairs meetings. A Local Government Portfolio was given to a Federal Minister, usually combined with Regional Development.

When Rudd Government NO I began, the profile of COAG was lifted to introduce the Labor Party Social Inclusion policy. A process of using COAG to channel funding from Federal Government to introduce policies without parliamentary scrutiny has developed.

There have been threats from State Governments, particularly West Australia, to withdraw from COAG. A COAG Reform Council has been established. John Brumby former Victorian Labor Premier is current President.

This is an issue for the Federal Election. Major political parties' research and debate issues to form policy, The Katter Party policy is based on historical research of Government and parliamentary experience presented in the published book "An incredible race of people". Clive Palmer is paying to have his policy presented to electors. A vote for an Independent Candidate with no policy is like a gamble on a poker machine.

- - Alison Walpole, Whorouly South, Victoria.

THE COLLAPSE OF THE MODERN ROMANS

By Brian Simpson

At the tail end of the Roman Empire citizenship was awarded for money. Roman society did not attempt to expand the number of Romans, but instead incorporated by immigration, non-Romans, into a multicultural, multiracial empire. How did that work out for them? According to our multicultural lobby, pretty well. However according to history, this was one of the forces that led to the decline and fall of Rome. John Man in "Attila the Hun: A Barbarian King and the Fall of Rome", (Bantam, 2006) says:

"With continual barbarian incursions across the Rhine and Danube, Rome... tried to defend itself with a range of strategies from outright force, to negotiation, bribery, intermarriage, trade and finally, controlled immigration. This last was in the end the only possible way to stave off assault, and yet it also led inexorably to further decay. Barbarians were good fighters; it made sense to employ them, with confusing consequences for both sides. Enemies became allies, who often ended fighting their own kind. Peace came always at the price of continued collapse: the army was strengthened by the influx of barbarians, but taxes rose to pay for them; faith in government declined, and corruption spread. By the late fourth century the empire's borders resembled a weakening immune system, through which barbarians crept in direct assault or temporary partnership, while the army – the ultimate arbiter of political authority and guardian of the frontiers – were like the blood platelets of this aging body, always rushing to clot some new wound, and never in sufficient numbers." (p.34)

Replace "barbarians" with "Immigrants" in the above argument and we have an accurate description of the plight of the West. At the mercy of Globalism because of our demonic financial system, the West replicates the endgame of the Roman Empire. With endless migration, National identity is lost. Globalists, of course, want just that, to deliver them more power and profits. But because these power elites are criminally insane they refuse to see that the long term consequences of their actions will be the destruction of the societies in the West that they now feed off of. When we go, the global elites go too, but that is small consolation.

HISTORY REPEATING ITSELF: FOR WE WHO WILL NOT LEARN...

Here at the League of Rights, folk ring us to talk of their personal plight, or we hear reports of families in distress, of farmers in such debt they see no way out. Why just this morning a businessman phoned. He needed to release some of his stress by conversing with someone who understands his plight and doesn't see him as a failure, but sees the system weighted against him succeeding, no matter how hard he tries. This is not the first time in history that Mammon ruled and a civilisation collapsed because of it. I could point to a number of historical references to reinforce the truth of it, but will be content with the Roman Civilisation. - - Betty Luks.

An Essay on History: The Law of Civilization and Decay" In 1895, American historian Brook Adams set out in "what happened to the Roman Civilisation. "The Romans, when they first appeared in the light of history, were a race of land-holders, already owning property in severalty, and, as the right of alienation was fully established, the formation of large estates had begun. The ordinary family, however, possessed about twelve acres and, the land being arable, and grain the staple, the population was relatively dense. These husbandmen were essentially martial, and yet, though supremely gifted as soldiers and administrators, they were ill-adapted to endure the unrestricted economic competition of a centralized society. The consequence was that their conquests had hardly consolidated before decay set in, a decay whose causes can be traced back until they are lost in the mists of fable.

The Latins had little economic versatility, and lacked the aptitude of the Greeks and Carthaginians for commerce, and of the Syrians and Hindoos for manufactures. They were landowners by instinct, and when endowed with the acquisitive faculty they turned usurers. These last, early developed into a distinct species, at once more tenacious of life and more subtle of intellect than the farmers, and the fate of all subsequent civilization has hinged on the disparity between these two types of man.

At a remote antiquity Roman society divided into creditors and debtors; as it consolidated, the power of the former increased, and the pressure on the weak augmented, until at last reproduction stopped, the centralised mass, which reached its greatest density under the Caesars disintegrated and the Middle Ages began...

It seems reasonably certain that the expulsion of the Tarquins was the victory of an hereditary monied caste, which succeeded in concentrating the functions of government in a practically self-perpetuating body drawn from their own order.

Lucius Tarquinius Superbus was the legendary seventh and final King of Rome, reigning from 535 BC until the popular uprising in 509 BC that led to the establishment of the Roman Republic.

Law of debt framed by the creditors for protection of creditors

"The ruling class in Rome was a monied class, and it made and administered the laws with a view solely to its own interest. Thus the relation between lender and borrower was mixed up with the relation between sovereign and subject. The great men held a large proportion of the community in dependence by means of advances at enormous usury. The law of debt, framed by the creditors, and for the protection of creditors, was the most horrible that has ever been known among men. The liberty, and even the life, of the insolvent were at the mercy of the patrician money-lenders. Children often became slaves in consequence of the misfortunes of their parent... The weakness of the monied class lay in their very power for they not only killed the producer, but in the strength of their acquisitiveness they failed to propagate themselves... With the peasantry the case was worse. By the second century barbarian labour had to be imported to till the fields, and even the barbarians lacked the tenacity of life necessary to endure the strain. They ceased to breed, and the population dwindled. Then, somewhat suddenly, the collapse came. With shrinking numbers, the sources of wealth ran dry, the revenue failed to pay the police, and on the efficiency of the police the life of this unwarlike civilization hung..."

Important reading "The New and the Old Economics" by C.H. Douglas.
First published in 1932 it was republished in 1947.
A PDF version can be freely downloaded here
<http://douglassocialcredit.com/resources/resources/New%20and%20Old%20Economics--C%20H%20Douglas.pdf>

The New Times Survey

Published by
The Australian League of Rights,
G.P.O. Box 1052, Melbourne, 3001.

A monthly journal — subscription $30.00 p.a.

Editorial: Betty Luks, P.O. Box 27,
Happy Valley, S.A., 5159.

E-mail: bluks@alor.org Website: www.alor.org

(The views expressed in articles in this journal do not necessarily reflect those of the publisher.)

*****

Election comment authorized by
Louis Cook
National Director
Australian League of Rights
145 Russell Street
Melbourne Vic. 3000

*****

The League's Book Services carry a range of books, DVDs and other information not usually found in the mainstream media.

The League also publishes a weekly journal, On Target, available for $45.00 (posted) per annum. Order from Melbourne address.

MADE IN AUSTRALIA CAMPAIGN - FOOD SECURITY

Survey finds widespread support among Barker (SA) candidates for Australia's Food Security
Barker will be contested by 7 candidates listed here in alphabetical order:

Phil Golding, Aust Labor Party

Miles Hannemann, Nationals

Balwinder Jhandi, Palmer United Party

Mark Keough, Greens

Kristin Lambert, Family First

Tony Pasin, Liberal Party

Richard Sage, Independent

Each candidate received a questionnaire containing three questions concerning Australia's future food security and ultimately its national security. Candidates were asked to respond with a YES or NO and then offer their commitment, if elected, to work in the House to achieve the results according to their answers.

The campaign director, Ken Grundy from Naracoorte believes the signed commitment to be essential in discovering genuine candidates. His campaign offered to give as much publicity as possible to the survey results.

Questions:

1. Will you work for and vote in the House, for accurate labelling, including country of origin for all ingredients on all foods?
2. Will you work for and vote in the House, to prevent any imports which may potentially threaten Australia's Bio-Security?
3. Will you work for and vote in the House, to permit land sales only to Australian citizens or corporations?

Results:

Greens and Palmer United candidates had only a short time to reply due to their late nomination which may explain their failure to reply.

Mr Pasin, (Liberal) also failed to respond even though he had several months to do so.

As a result, the campaign can give no publicity to the views of these three candidates.

Phil Golding, ALP* : YES to questions 1 and 2. NO to 3rd.

Miles Hannemann, Nationals: YES to all 3 questions.

Kristin Lambert, Family First : YES to all 3 questions.

Richard Sage, Independent *: YES to all three questions

Note:

*Mr Golding wishes to leave it to the Foreign Investment Review Board.

**Mr Sage will legislate to stop foreign farm sales "if it is legally possible".

(One presumes the MP's pass legislation which is legal -- editor).

It has been refreshing to discover many candidates concerned about our future food and national security as well as our self-sufficiency. Their signed commitment to work for the policies shows they are genuine and they deserve consideration on polling day.

Splitting the vote - a myth! Voters may vote for one or more Independent or Minor party candidates ahead of their desired Major party candidate. If they are unsuccessful, under our preferential voting system, the voter's preferences then flow to the their chosen Major party candidate. Every effort has been made to present the survey in a fair manner.

Election comment authorised and distributed by Ken Grundy, 34 Martin's Rd., Naracoorte SA 5271. 0458 624 701 August 14 2013

AND WHAT OF KEVIN RUDD? ACCORDING TO JANET ALBRECHTSEN...

It's not my words – in 2010 Labor MP Steve Gibbons called Rudd a "psychopath". Janet Albrechtsen (The Australian 21 August 2013, p.14) explores that theme and the artwork to her article has a cartoon of Rudd look like a Hannibal Lecter type from The Silence of the Lambs. Drawing on books about corporate psychopaths, she notes that a psychopath "relies on superficial charm, makes great first impressions, is glib and grandiose, callous and manipulative, adept at conning people, refuses to accept responsibility for mistakes, is armed with an impressive supply of excuses, hates monotony preferring constant stimulation, and – most critically – has no empathy."

Does Albrechtsen call Rudd a psychopath? No, not exactly. But the article and the art work would lead an ordinary reader like myself to draw that inference. I certainly don't like Rudd or Abbott as politicians, and from what I have seen of their personalities, as people too. Yes, the latest story about Rudd being rude to a make-up artist before the People's Forum in Brisbane is another blotch in his copy book. But it is unjustified to make some sort of medical diagnosis of a person, one, without being medically qualified, and two, with only second hand evidence, if that. Albrechtsen's remarks quoted above pretty much sum up almost all politicians; it seems that modern politics produces this sort of person.

I have no sympathy for Rudd but we should be aware that he is right in saying that the Murdoch press has basically declared open season on him. Could it be that the vessel of big business dislikes Rudd's mild restrictions on 457 visas and prefers Abbott's even more open borders approach? The Australian has produced much good critical material on asylum seekers, but I feel that this is a smoke screen to take away attention from "legal" migration which is socially and ecologically destroying us. Asylum seekers are but a drop in the bucket compared to the massive population movement and demographic shift, which is being undertaken with no democratic consent.

Listen to Denis McCormack discuss the population issue with David Suzuki

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yxKSIZ15drE>

Don't forget: 'Reduce Immigration' on ballot papers - have a close look at: www.reduceimmigration.wordpress.com

DOES OBAMA KNOW HE'S FIGHTING ON AL-QA'IDA'S SIDE? asks Robert Fisk

The Independent (UK) 27 August 2013.
'All for one and one for all' should be the battle cry if the West goes to war against Assad's Syrian regime. "If Barack Obama decides to attack the Syrian regime, he has ensured – for the very first time in history – that the United States will be on the same side as al-Qa'ida. Quite an alliance! Was it not the Three Musketeers who shouted "All for one and one for all" each time they sought combat? This really should be the new battle cry if – or when – the statesmen of the Western world go to war against Bashar al-Assad.

The men who destroyed so many thousands on 9/11 will then be fighting alongside the very nation whose innocents they so cruelly murdered almost exactly 12 years ago. Quite an achievement for Obama, Cameron, Hollande and the rest of the miniature warlords.

This, of course, will not be trumpeted by the Pentagon or the White House – nor, I suppose, by al-Qa'ida – though they are both trying to destroy Bashar. So are the Nusra front, one of al-Qa'ida's affiliates.

But it does raise some interesting possibilities.

Maybe the Americans should ask al-Qa'ida for intelligence help – after all, this is the group with "boots on the ground", something the Americans have no interest in doing. And maybe al-Qa'ida could offer some target information facilities to the country which usually claims that the supporters of al-Qa'ida, rather than the Syrians, are the most wanted men in the world.

There will be some ironies, of course. While the Americans drone al-Qa'ida to death in Yemen and Pakistan – along, of course, with the usual flock of civilians – they will be giving them, with the help of Messrs Cameron, Hollande and the other Little General-politicians, material assistance in Syria by hitting al-Qa'ida's enemies. Indeed, you can bet your bottom dollar that the one target the Americans will not strike in Syria will be al-Qa'ida or the Nusra front.

And our own Prime Minister will applaud whatever the Americans do, thus allying himself with al-Qa'ida, whose London bombings may have slipped his mind. Perhaps – since there is no institutional memory left among modern governments – Cameron has forgotten how similar are the sentiments being uttered by Obama and himself to those uttered by Bush and Blair a decade ago, the same bland assurances, uttered with such self-confidence but without quite enough evidence to make it stick.

In Iraq, we went to war on the basis of lies originally uttered by fakers and conmen. Now it's war by YouTube. This doesn't mean that the terrible images of the gassed and dying Syrian civilians are false. It does mean that any evidence to the contrary is going to have to be suppressed. For example, no-one is going to be interested in persistent reports in Beirut that three Hezbollah members – fighting alongside government troops in Damascus – were apparently struck down by the same gas on the same day, supposedly in tunnels. They are now said to be undergoing treatment in a Beirut hospital. So if Syrian government forces used gas, how come Hezbollah men might have been stricken too? Blowback?..."

Read further here... <http://www.independent.co.uk/voices/comment/does-obama-know-hes-fighting-on-alqaidas-side-8786680.html>

PSYCHOPATHIC OLD MEN WAGE WAR FROM COMFORT OF ARM CHAIRS

Nations are alleged to have waged the first world war, but the casualties both of life and property fell upon individuals. There is no such thing as an effective 'national responsibility' – it is a pure abstraction, under cover of which, oppression and tyranny to individuals, which would not be tolerated if inflicted by a personal ruler, escape effective criticism.

-- C.H. Douglas in Social Credit - Relation of Group to Individual.

While the psychopathic old men make war from the comfort of their armchairs, the young men of the nations do the fighting for them, with such horrible personal physical and psychological consequences.

"ON TARGET" is printed and published by The Australian League of Rights, 145 Russell St., Melbourne.

Postal Address: GPO Box 1052, Melbourne, 3001. Telephone: (03) 9650 9749, Fax: (03) 9650 9368.

Subscription $45.00 p.a.

NOT 'MARKET FAILURE' – IT'S A COSTS/ JUST PRICE FINANCIAL FAILURE!

Queensland dairy farmers are getting 51c to 53c/L for their milk at present, compared with 47.5c/L in 1992. "The amount people are being paid has only gone up 10 per cent in 20 years," Mr McInnes said, explaining why there was a shortage of fresh milk in the state as dairy farmers went out of business. "Everything is in limbo - there has been a real market failure," he said. - The Land

People in rural Queensland are staring down the barrel of having no choice but to drink long-life or UHT milk, according to a dairy farmer and milk supply board chairman.

John Cochrane chairs the board that supplies Parmalat in Queensland, and says that the state is 100 million litres short of the milk it needs to supply demand. "As the fresh milk disappears out of Queensland, processors will find it impossible to supply the bush," he said. "As a result, bush people will get nothing but long-life milk."

As well as putting the blame on the supermarket milk price war for forcing producers to sell up and leave a shortage of supply, Mr Cochrane said that UHT milk suited supermarkets and transport companies. "It's happening right now," he said. "The biggest growth sector in milk in Queensland has been in UHT milk. UHT milk can be transported on a pantech without any refrigeration, and you can sell it for less." At Blackall last week, a litre of fresh full-cream milk was selling for $2.20, while the cost of a litre of long-life full-cream milk was $2.23. The vice-president of the Queensland Dairyfarmers Organisation, Ross McInnes, agreed that there was a risk of rural Queenslanders seeing less and less fresh milk on their shelves, because UHT milk could be discounted. "Shopkeepers can sell it for $1.30 versus having to sell fresh milk for $2.30," he said. "As margins get tighter, fresh milk will get less competitive. It will be driven by smaller outlets saying it's not worth their while having fresh milk available." He said that while there was nothing nutritionally wrong with long-life milk, nothing beat fresh food. (Lots of folk would not agree with that statement... ed) Mr Cochrane said it stopped people from having a choice, and said that some had issues with the palatability of long-life milk. Queensland dairy farmers are getting 51c to 53c/L for their milk at present, compared with 47.5c/L in 1992. "The amount people are being paid has only gone up 10 percent in 20 years," Mr McInnes said, explaining why there was a shortage of fresh milk in the state as dairy farmers went out of business. "Everything is in limbo - there has been a real market failure," he said.

Source: <http://www.theland.com.au/news/agriculture/livestock/cattle-dairy/milk-runs-dry-in-the-west/2668527.aspx>

CUTTING LOOSE:

HUNGARY PAYS OFF IMF DEBT

Cutting Loose: Hungary pays off IMF debt, may eye EU exit. Hungary is about to pay off its debt to the International Monetary Fund and then wants the creditor gone. The country was 'saved' by Washington-based group with $25 billion loan five years ago but isn't renewing the aid in order to avoid closer scrutiny of its policies. Alexey Yaroshevsky looks at how Budapest is cutting loose.

-- <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BzToBNKVwBs> Aug 18, 2013

SWEET, SWEET JUSTICE?

Homeowner forecloses on Bank of America.

A bank foreclosure story you've got to see to believe. A Collier County couple turned the tables on Bank of America, the bank that tried to foreclose on their home. The family foreclosed on the bank! Even bringing trucks and deputies ready to seize the bank's property.

The foreclosure nightmare started when Warren and Maureen Nyerges paid cash for a home owned by Bank of American in the Golden Gate Estates. They never had a mortgage whatsoever. But, the bank fouled it up and wound up issuing a foreclosure through their attorney.

The couple took their case to court and after a year and a half nightmare the foreclosure was dropped. A Collier County judge said Bank of America had to pay the couple's $2,534 legal fees for the error. After more than five months the bank still hadn't paid up. So, the homeowners' attorney did just what the bank would do to get their money, legally seize their assets. -- <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fwj3QYcba5Y>

ELYSIUM: LIBERAL IMMIGRATIONISTS IN SPACE

By Peter West

Elysium is a science fiction movie showing at cinemas at present. It shows a dystopian future of Los Angeles in 2154. As expected Los Angeles is virtually Mexico – in fact the movie was shot, so to speak, in Mexico City. The once City of Angels is rundown, decaying and approaching post-apocalyptic proportions. Violence is widespread and brutal robot police attempt to maintain some shape of order. Pretty much like today, only worse.

Elysium is a space station floating above the decaying Earth. It is largely inhabited by White people. Elysium is upper class, civilised and clean; LA is lower class, barbaric and dirty. The capitalist class live in Elysium and fly down to Earth to exploit the poor Brown proletariat, then return home to Elysium.

The masses want to get into Elysium and some of Elysium's elites want this, but most do not and willingly repatriate "boat people". But in the end the pinkos who believe that the non-white masses have a right to Elysium win out, and open migration rules the waves.

The film does not detail the long-term future of Elysium. No doubt the space station will ultimately crash from lack of maintenance. If LA has become a decaying ruin from the dying city of today, then why should a space ship be any different? For anti-immigrationists the unintended meaning of Elysium is that ultimately there will be nowhere on Earth, or in space, for the elites to hide from the multiracial juggernaut that they have created. Equalitarians will rejoice that we will all be equal, on the bottom of the wheelie bin. Immigration will also come to an end because there will be no place worth migrating to.

FAMILY FIRST: MAJORITY LNP CANDIDATES SUPPORT GAY 'MARRIAGE'

Family First to issue split tickets. Family First plans to issue split tickets in most Queensland electorates as the majority of LNP candidates have indicated they will support gay marriage in a conscience vote. Less than one third of LNP candidates have stated they will vote against gay marriage in a conscience vote.

They are:

- Ross Vasta – Bonner
- George Christensen – Dawson
- Stuart Robert – Fadden
- Bert van Manen – Forde
- Keith Pitt – Hinkler
- Rod McGarvie – Lilley
- Malcolm Cole – Moreton
- Luke Howarth – Petrie
- Scott Buchholz – Wright

Family First will preference Labor before the LNP in the seats of Blair and Fairfax. In those seats, ALP candidates Shane Neumann and Elaine Hughes support Family First's position, while the LNP candidates have indicated support for gay marriage.

Queensland senate candidate, Aidan McLindon, said that it was a concern so many LNP candidates support gay marriage. "The LNP cannot be trusted on gay marriage. The LNP are pretending to oppose gay marriage when it is clear that the majority in the party room support it," Mr McLindon said.

"As such, it is very concerning that the LNP will only commit to working out their position on gay marriage after the election. Given the majority of the LNP candidates in Queensland support gay marriage, Family First will not directly preference the LNP across the board."

"This is the same LNP that went to the state election opposed to civil unions. Three months after the election they voted unanimously in favour of civil unions. The only way to send a message to the LNP that you don't support gay marriage is to vote for Family First and then issue your preferences to the poison of your choice after that."

"Family First will only encourage voters to support a major party candidate in seats where Family First has received an assurance from that candidate that they will vote against gay marriage in a conscience vote."

Family First wrote to all ALP and LNP candidates asking their position on gay marriage early last week. Family First preferences have been decided based on each response.

THE SPIRITUAL VISION OF J.R.R. TOLKIEN by James Reed

Sometimes it is good for the soul to take a little "time out" and immerse oneself in great literature and the literature about those who write, and have written, great literature. I have just worked through two books on J.R.R. Tolkien (1892-1973), philologist and author, of among other works, "The Hobbit" and "The Lord of the Rings". Humphrey Carpenter's "Tolkien: The Authorised Biography", (Houghton Mifflin, 1997) is a fascinating journey through Tolkien's life, a life of Christian humbleness and devotion to scholarship. There are none of the affairs with women, as in Bertrand Russell; there is just the passion for writing and for truth. Tolkien played a role in converting C.S. Lewis to Christianity. In one such debate between Tolkien and Lewis, as both men puffed away at their pipes, Tolkien summed up his philosophy of life and literature:

"We have come from God, and inevitably the myths woven by us, though they contain error, will also reflect a splintered fragment of the true light, the eternal truth that is with God. Indeed, only by myth-making, only by becoming a 'sub-creator' and inventing stories, can Man ascribe to the state of perfection that he knew before the Fall. Our myths may be misguided, but they steer however shakily towards the true harbour, while materialistic 'progress' leads only to a yawning abyss and the Iron Crown of the power of evil." (p.147) Stratford Caldecott in "The Power of the Ring: The Spiritual Vision Behind the Lord of the Ring" (Crossroad, New York 2005) locates the Lord of the Rings in the great romantic heroic traditions of literature, weaving a modern mythology. Tolkien himself felt that the mythology of the Nordics (Northern European man) had been lost or buried by Celtic and French influences and one of his goals in "The Lord of the Rings" was to recapture living myths. As Tolkien said in one of his letters: "Legends and myths are largely made of 'truth'." Tolkien attempted to capture a spirit of Northern man and the mystique of "Northernness," as seen in the Icelandic sags of the "Elder of Edda". Through mythopoeic thinking, appealing to universal constants in human nature,

Tolkien produced a modern work which was very much opposed to the moral relativism, absurdism and nihilism of much of the literature of the 1950s and 1960s. His world is one of moral absolutes, where good and evil clearly exist. Christian virtues are embodied in his characters such as Aragon and Frodo – integrity, sacrifice, justice, courage and mercy. All of this in sharp contrast to the anti-Western, anti-Nordic literature of today.

It is not surprising that the Peter Jackson film version of "The Lord of the Rings" which, apart from the different (and vastly inferior ending), captures some of the spirit of Northernness, produced something resembling moral panic among the multiculturalists. Cultural diversity, it seems, is fine, so long as we Nordics, have none. If you are in need of having your spiritual batteries recharged from the grinding psycho-political warfare, there is always the work of Tolkien to turn to, a power source for the spirit!

MORE ON TTP: PUBLIC CITIZENS 'GLOBAL WATCH'

TPP deal could monopolize pharmaceuticals and police the Internet, 19 Aug 2013: www.citizen.org/trade/ The Trans-Pacific Partnership is the proposed trade deal between 12 countries. Since the Bush administration, leaders of these 12 countries have mostly met in secret to discuss and on Thursday another round of talks will take place. If the TPP deal is completed it could have alarming effects on people's access to medicine, online freedoms and financial regulations. Melinda St. Louis with Public Citizen's Global Trade Watch has more. Watch: www.youtube.com/watch?v=NCAOPHTs-MU