WHAT DOES ISLAM HAVE TO DO WITH ABORTION? by Bernard Gaynor

Earlier this year a flurry of news reports proclaimed that Germany's population had reached 83 million – the highest in the country's history. This occurred even though Germany's birth rate has been amongst the lowest in Europe for half a lifetime. Since 1975 its birth rate has been well below replacement levels and, as a result, the population of native Germans will both decline and age rapidly over the next half a lifetime. So how does a nation with an ageing and diminishing population reach record population levels?

The answer is simple: with someone else's babies.

Remember these headlines? Number of Refugees to Europe Surges to Record 1.3 Million in 2015

A record 1.3 million migrants applied for asylum in the 28 member states of the European Union, Norway and Switzerland in 2015 – nearly double the previous high water mark of roughly 700,000 that was set in 1992 after the fall of the Iron Curtain and the collapse of the Soviet Union, according to a Pew Research Center analysis of data from Eurostat, the European Union's statistical agency. From President Angela Merkel down the Germans have outsourced reproduction to others. So much so, that people are now Germany's biggest and most required import. Indeed, this is how the International Monetary Fund spun Germany's requirement for 'human resources' just under a year ago:

“The projected decline in the labour force due to ageing after 2020 calls for measures to boost labour supply in the medium term. Additional policies to integrate the current wave of refugees into the labour market, to broaden opportunities for full-time employment of women, and to extend working lives, would be important in this regard. These reforms would not only counter the projected growth decline in the medium term but also stimulate private consumption and investment in the short term.”

In other words, if Germany wants to keep its economy, after all the current Germans have spent everything on themselves before collectively kicking the bucket at the end of the post-sexual-revolution-orgy, then it will need workers and consumers. And they don't drop down each time the stork flies by. As Germany literally screws itself to death it's more than ironic that this fact of life needs explaining.

Germany's future will belong to those who are there to live in it. Increasingly, these people will be Islamic. They are there because the Germans have aborted their own future off and then mortgaged everything else to millions of Muslims walking across the border.

And they were always going to come. They aren't in Germany because of the Syrian civil war. They're in Germany because a human vacuum has been created by the nation's decision to prioritise instant gratification over, not just the next generation, but any further generation. That's what Islam has to do with abortion. The former fills the hole left by the latter.

It has not gone unnoticed. In fact, just this week the Turkish President, Recep Erdogan, has urged Muslims in Europe to have at least five children:

“Go live in better neighbourhoods. Drive the best cars. Live in the best houses. Make not three, but five children. Because you are the future of Europe. That will be the best response to the injustices against you.”

If you are concerned about the growth of Islam in the West, then you need to come to grips with this.

Australia, like the rest of the Western world, is headed in the same direction. It will not be able to withstand Islam in the long run if it is relying on Islamic families to provide the next generation. In other words, the arrival of Islam in the West is not the problem, it is the symptom of a deeper problem of our own making. It is here because of our own bad habits. And killing off the next generation is one hell of a bad habit.

Of course, anyone who spends more than a few moments truthfully examining what happens during an abortion knows that abortion is a moral failure. Every single abortion results in the death of living human being and it always occurs because those involved in it prioritise fear over love.

I'm not denying for a second that love is always an easy choice to make. I'm not denying for a second that an unmarried uni student with a deadbeat boyfriend might find the thought of pregnancy tremendously difficult.

But that's just the problem with evil. It often is the easy choice. So next time you see a single mother give her a hand: she might not be perfect but she is certainly courageous and she's investing far more in the future than the childless President of Germany.

WELCOME TO RANDOM CERTAINTY (or don't mention Islam) by Bernard Gaynor

It is madness. Absolute madness. I'm not talking about the London attack. That is as predictable as the religion that spawned it. I'm talking about our response. Or, more appropriately, lack of it.

This morning four people died and another 40 were injured after another 'incident', this time outside the UK parliament. According to the 'experts' on ABC radio, it is too early to say anything about the motive or, indeed, the mental state of the person involved. All we know is that the vehicle he was driving lost control and then the knife he was wielding also lost control. And then four people lost control of their lives and another 40 lost control of their health. It's all very regrettable really.

On September 11, the world was shocked. It was the attack no one saw coming. Today, no one is startled by a random 'incident' that has nothing to do with Islam. Indeed, Fairfax Media's most read story on the incident that we all saw coming started out just like this: "London: This is an attack everyone saw coming."

Just as everyone knew that this attack was coming, so no one can be the least bit surprised that an article pointing out the predictability of the attack could also, predictably, go on to claim that the motive for it is entirely unknown and unknowable:

Australia might not be as far down the road to destruction as Germany. But we are still heading down that road. And that leaves us with two unpalatable conclusions. Firstly, when it comes to condemning the Islamic State, we're all quick to join in. It is hard finding reliable casualty figures for its atrocities but one report from the University of Maryland estimated that the Islamic State was responsible for 33,000 deaths between 2012 and 2015. In contrast, about 80,000 to 100,000 children are aborted in Australia. Every year.

In Queensland, a child is born alive after an abortion about every ten days. And then it is left to die as well. The Islamic State is evil. But our nation has its own confessions to make.

Secondly, if morality is not your thing, then there are still plenty of reasons why it is clear that abortion is not in the national interest. Just look at Germany where the social, demographic and economic impacts of abortion mean that there might not be any national interest left at all that can be remotely described as 'German'.

Last week US Republican Steve King was labelled a racist for proclaiming the truth: we can't restore our civilization with somebody else's babies. He's absolutely right. To keep Western civilisation going we need to regain the confidence to have our own children again. If we can't do that, Islam will be the least of our problems... ***

"At the time of writing this is not a confirmed terror attack. The motives, state of mind, background and mental health of the attacker have not been publicly reported."

And therein lies the madness: we now accept that attacks are 'certain', even as we state with certainty that they are 'random'.

There is no doubt that four people died today as a result of a person following the example of Mohammad. And there is no doubt that tomorrow a bunch of politicians will claim that Islam is not only peaceful, but an integral part of the Western world.

These words are a lie and they hide the problem, obfuscate it, confuse it, and even promote it.

It's also important to note that there's nothing like a bit of bloodshed to get the MPs into the mosques. It kinda sorta seems like these 'random' acts of violence certainly do something for Islam after all.

After the politicians slip their shoes back on they'll get to work 'protecting' us. A whole bunch of effort will be put into mitigating the effects of the 'weapon' that was used instead of dealing with why it was used. Get ready for a conversation, not about whether Islam should be banned from our cities, but whether cars should be banned from them.

A sane world would acknowledge the truth: the key enabler of Islamic terrorism in the West is an Islamic community in the West.

You don't get the former without the latter. And when you have the latter, you have the former as well. Plus, in a deal that always has more, you get a newspaper ready to write about the 'randomness' of 'certain' attacks thrown in for free too.

Unfortunately, we don't live in a sane world. We live inside the asylum where confusion reigns supreme. So nothing is done to change any of this. In the last decade and a half Islamic terrorism has not been defeated in the West. Instead, it has been normalised by governments too afraid to act.

Only two things have changed since September 11, 2001. Firstly, back then no one knew what Allahu Akbar meant. Today, none of us would be surprised if we were to realise that 'Allahu Akbar' were going to be the last words we ever hear.

Secondly, the mitigation and security efforts have done nothing to address Islam and everything to reduce general freedom across society.

I NEED YOUR HELP by Bernard Gaynor

Over the next weeks I will be preparing a challenge in the High Court to defend freedom in Australia. The Full Court of the Federal Court has ruled that it is legal for the Chief of Defence Force to sack Defence members for expressing conservative political opinions in their private capacity, even as he allows uniformed attendance at a self-described political event that protests against Commonwealth laws on marriage – the Sydney Gay and Lesbian Mardi Gras. This ruling cannot remain unchallenged if we are to remain free in Australia.

I will also be defending five High Court challenges to the victory we obtained in the New South Wales Court of Appeal against serial litigant and homosexual activist, Garry Burns. The State of New South Wales and the New South Wales Attorney General are also appealing this decision in support of Garry Burns.

These battles are not just mine. They are battles for all Australians who cherish our Western and Christian heritage, values and freedom.

Please pray

I also ask that you pray for a successful outcome in these cases as well. And it is humbling to ask for this.

I understand many are uncomfortable that I so openly refer to God and I have been counselled by close friends to 'drop' this aspect of my newsletters.

I can understand this and indeed part of me wants to as well. It would make it much easier to be 'popular'. But to do so would be a lie and it would deprive God of due recognition for His protection.

We all put up with metal detectors and bollards on boulevards and bans on free speech because the government thinks that it's easier to cage us than Islam. So if today's attack allows for knowing heads to nod wisely and say, 'I predicted this', let me issue one more prediction. And anyone with half a brain can see this coming too.

If the official insanity continues for much longer, ordinary average people will give up on the idea that the government is looking out for their safety and they'll start taking the law into their own hands.

We are headed for blood on the streets. Much of it will be Islamic. Retaliatory violence is just around the corner.

It will spell the end of Islam in much of the Western world. But it will also spell the end of the institutions that have provided civilisation in the Western world as well. That will not be a good thing.

It will result in complete chaos. And there is only one rule in chaos: might is always right.

I don't want my children to live in that world and that is why I will do everything I can to restore sanity now before it is too late.

Please consider this: by every worldly measure these fights should have ended long ago in defeat.

We are outgunned financially.

I am today asking once again for donations, while the taxpayer is funding Defence and New South Wales, and Garry Burns has no difficulty securing the assistance of top-tier law firms.

We are outgunned legally.

I have a very small and overworked legal team fighting more than 60 separate complaints, tribunal and court matters, while Defence, New South Wales and Garry Burns are represented by numerous firms and battalions of QCs, barristers and solicitors.

We are outgunned politically.

Only Malcolm Roberts, George Christensen and Peter Abetz have been prepared to provide public support to these cases (and even Pauline Hanson has attacked me), while the Greens, Labor and a growing number of Liberals back a politically-aligned Defence Force and anti-free speech laws.

We are outgunned in the media.

Most conservative commentators refuse to mention this fight while the majority of the media push the politically-correct agenda like zealots.

We have no artillery support.

Not one of the major family or freedom groups have provided any assistance in this fight. The bishops are silent and we are left alone and isolated.

Despite all of this, we won the first case against Defence and will take a very strong case to the High Court. We have also been victorious throughout in the battle against New South Wales' totalitarian anti-discrimination laws. This is not due to me. It is not due to my lawyers. It is not due to you either. It is entirely due to God.

That is why I ask you to pray. Today is the Feast of St Joseph and I ask that you pray over the next nine days that he intercede on our behalf with his foster-son, Jesus Christ, and obtain victory in these matters:

Oh St. Joseph, whose protection is so great, so strong, so prompt before the throne of God, I place in you all my interests and desires.

Oh St. Joseph, do assist me by your powerful intercession and obtain for me from your divine son all spiritual blessings through Jesus Christ, our Lord; so that having engaged here below your heavenly power, I may offer my thanksgiving and homage to the most loving of Fathers.

Oh St. Joseph, I never weary contemplating you and Jesus asleep in your arms. I dare not approach while he reposes near your heart. Press Him in my name and kiss his fine head for me, and ask him to return the kiss when I draw my dying breath. St. Joseph, patron of departing souls, pray for us. Amen

What is at stake?

The action taken against me by Garry Burns, Defence and the State of New South Wales is based on four great lies:

- the lie that same-sex relationships are moral and as fruitful as heterosexual marriages,
- the lie that women are the same as men,
- the lie that gender can be defined by whim, and
- the lie that Islam is as valid and equal to our Western Christian civilisation.

Lies have no power. They can't win support with logic. Instead, they can only be enforced by deception and tyranny. As such, our very freedom is at stake in these fights. Our freedom to express the truth. Our freedom to participate in democracy. Our freedom to even have job. That is why we must fight.

Tyranny is never successful in the long run. It always collapses because no amount of coercion can ever defeat the power of truth. However, tyranny can achieve short term success and each time it is due to one factor: too few people were prepared to stand up to it when it was weak and easy to defeat. No one engaged in this fight is guilty of that timidity or weakness.

Can we win? Absolutely.

Victory is not always easy and we have hurdles to overcome. But we can be successful. That is why we fight. That is also why we pray.

We have also demonstrated already that we can win this fight, with victories in the NCAT, New South Wales Court of Appeal and the Federal Court.

And this is also absolutely certain: doing nothing has never won a battle.

What have we achieved?

Apart from our legal victories, supporters of my website have also assisted in obtaining other victories. Just some of them are listed below:

- forcing the Royal Australian Navy to shut down Captain Mona Shindy's pro-Islamic Twitter account,
- obtaining widespread media coverage of the Australian Army's decision to have ration packs halal certified,
- forcing the Australian Army to back down on plans to change hat badges to appease Muslims,
- forcing Defence to remove references to DEFGLIS (a homosexual political lobby group) from its webpage,
- forcing a homosexual group that marches at the Mardi Gras to remove information promoting secret colour codes for those interested in pederasty from its webpage,
- presenting the most-signed and publicly-supported submission the Halal Certification inquiry, and
- presenting the most-signed and publicly-supported submission to the 18c inquiry.

All of these achievements have set the condition for the media scrutiny in the mainstream media of Defence, Islam and anti-free speech laws. That scrutiny has already started with Miranda Devine writing a bruising article about Defence three weeks ago.

There will be more to come. But only if we continue. These battles will be expensive. Unfortunately, I am running very low on the ammunition required for the fight: money. It is humbling to have to ask once again for your financial support, especially as so many have already given so generously. But I must ask once again.
