THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: The Deep State Finishes Off Le Pen! by Peter West and Arnis Luks

It looks like the Deep State has now destroyed Le Pen’s electoral hopes:

“Half a million people received duplicate polling cards in the post, which would allow them to cast two votes at the first round of the election, held on April 23. French authorities confirmed they would not be investigating the potential electoral fraud until AFTER the election, when retrospective prosecution may take place.”

Ref: <http://www.express.co.uk/news/world/792112/Marine-Le-Pen-French-election-votes-computer-Emmanuel-Macron>.

It just won’t happen.

The situation is further compounded, three days out from the election, by the shooting of three police officers, that resulted in one officer being killed, on the Champs Elysees in Paris. The modus operandi is similar to the 2012 French Presidential election campaign which saw school children killed in Toulouse shortly before the first round voting. In that campaign, Nicolas Sarkozy, presenting himself as a viable alternative to those planning on voting for Marine Le Pen, delivered a speech in front of the Ozar Hatorah Jewish school in Toulouse, the site of the shooting, and he also quickly passed laws proposed to punish any person who regularly consults Internet sites that praise terrorism and calls for hatred and violence. This was to offset the momentum Marine Le Pen had gained promoting French nationalism. That 2012 presidential election saw Marine Le Pen gain 17.9% of the first round vote.

The Deep State will do anything to preserve globalisation, as we have seen from their use of Trump as a possible means of destroying Putin. If the entire world burns, well, that is the price of cosmopolitanism.

The Hungarian prime minister Viktor Orban has said the “independence and freedom of European nations are at stake” and that migration was at the centre of Europe’s political “battlefield”:

The masters of the universe do not want any more of this.

THE CORPORATES AND SAME-SEX MARRIAGE by Mrs Vera West

Many Australia’s biggest firms, most of which are multinationals anyway, are racing ahead with their support of same sex marriage, now embracing an “acceptance” ring for marriage “equality.” The Australian, April 4, 2017, p. 1. This is the “Until We Belong” campaign. Hundreds of thousands of Australians are expected to wear the rings to influence the debate.

A debate? A headline of March 31, 2017, had: “Beware the barge of bullies trumpeting diversity,” The Weekend Australian, March 31, 2017, article documents the “barge of bullies,” from the same sex marriage side who have “press-ganged” the corporate world into supporting marriage equality, out of fear of damaged sales through social media campaigns.

There is a connection here with section 18 C as well, as noted in an article by Michael Sexton: <http://www.theaustralian.com.au/opinion/sanctimonious-thought-police-taking-charge-of-national-debates/news-story/0aa00199d898d7af1c43ab3697560b8f>.

Sexton wrote:

“Most people in the bureaucracy, the business sector and the academic community are - quite sensibly - fearful of publicly questioning the conventional wisdom on issues such as levels of immigration, the extent of the terrorist threat, dealing with unauthorised boat arrivals, and sources of energy for power generation. Naturally this class is also in favour of section 18C of the Racial Discrimination Act as a protection against what it sees as the inherent racism of most Australians, and a Bill of Rights that would transfer decisions on many political issues from parliaments to judges, whom they consider better qualified.

The recent parliamentary committee report on 18C suggests many politicians are just as reluctant to speak out on these issues. Some members of the committee apparently favoured changes but were unwilling to be identified by name in the report.

It is true, of course, that some people have been prepared to speak out on these matters but they need to have a relatively secure position - and to be prepared for abuse in much of the media. Opponents of 18C, for example, were described in a Sydney Morning Herald editorial as conducting a "campaign to weaken hate speech laws, largely to help media and political insiders to make more money from playing to the base instincts of Australians."

This new class is slowly crushing opposition on the key issues facing Australia, such as immigration, multiculturalism and globalism. With the changing demographics, there is little time left before the point of no return is reached, if it has not been already.

As another example, pre-schools are abandoning gender-based toys in Victoria, which is in the lead on these gender agenda adventures: The Australian, April 6, 2017, p. 3. Teachers will be pro-active, identifying and intervening in "gendered play," identifying any materials producing gender stereotypes which support traditional gender roles, and will strive to eliminate traditional gender-specific language. All this from a government plan to address family violence through preschools. The pretext here is that traditional values, not new class ones, produce violence. That which is under attack is traditional masculinity, which the new class sees as a threat to their New World Order.

It is not just the Victorian government in on this – the Council of Australian Governments' Stop it at the Start campaign, is launching war on language such as "boys will be boys," and even, "it takes two to tango." This apparently stereotypes the sexes and excuses disrespectful behaviour towards women.

DARKNESS DESCENDS ON THE ENLIGHTENMENT by James Reed

These are worrying times, where it is no longer a fringe view to fear for the lifeblood of Western civilisation. Recently, John Anderson, deputy prime minister from 1999 to 2005, asked in an article: "Do We support Free Speech or Revert to McCarthyism?" The Australian, April 12, 2017, p. 14. He had as a sub-heading; "Australia risks becoming

The Australian, April 10, 2017, p. 1 Yes, $30 million is being spent to tackle this issue, all out of your hard earned taxes.

Letters to the Editor, The Australian, April 7, 2017, under the heading "Traditional society is Under Attack on all Flanks," are instructive. As one person wrote: "It seems clear that Australia's traditional, family-based society is under a determined, radical and aggressive attack from all sides - by Islam, the far left and the gay lobby. Given the diversity of opinion between the three on the subject of homosexuality (the first one would execute you for it, the second thinks it's worth encouraging, the third apparently wants to make it compulsory), they make strange bedfellows indeed.

But so all-consuming is their hatred of all things conservative, Christian or Australian, it permits them to put this aside as a minor inconvenience and join forces for a combined all-out assault. We are under threat like never before. It's time to man the ramparts.

An article by Paul Kelly (The Weekend Australian, April 15-16, 2017), argues that the Christian tradition in Australia faces erosion from a number of forces, one being the new progressive morality, based on diversity, identity politics and "human rights." There is thus a fundamental conflict of values between at least two great segments of society.

The core issue though, is that there is a full-blown attempt to eliminate Christian morality and at present the progressives are winning battle after battle.

The light shines brightest in the darkness.

The world is descending into chaos. As it does there will be many opportunities for clear-headed individuals to take the lead. As Christian social creditors we must ready ourselves intellectually, physically and spiritually to take that lead.

Every willing-person has the opportunity to rebuild "what was" in a better fashion, more resilient and permanent into "what could be"; to restore order and make the path straight for the future. It is our opportunity to improve "what was" and we must be full of faith and fearless in order to achieve these tasks set before us. So, fight on, we must, however hopeless the odds appear. It is again a time of the Saints.

The ANZAC spirit lives on!!

ungovernable if we bar people from free expression." There is clear evidence of a "new totalitarianism," and Anderson gives a long list of examples of this from many debates, especially the incidents associated with section 18 C complaints, and the Senate, thanks to the NXT, other independents, the Greens and Labor, voting down amendments to section 18 C:

“Labor, the Greens, the Nick Xenophon Team and crossbencher Jacqui Lambie opposed changes to the wording of 18C, robbing the government of the 39 votes it needs to get it through the upper house.

The attempt to re-word 18C was killed off by a Labor amendment to the bill, 31 votes to 28, leaving the commission’s process changes remaining.”

<http://www.skynews.com.au/news/top-stories/2017/03/31/senate-votes-down-18c-reforms.html>.

Hence, a weighty section of Australia’s parliament does not support the liberal value of free speech, and favours multicultural thought control instead. Note the names, and vote them out, while you still can.

Don’t assume that independents are necessarily against the Deep State; they are often more ‘system’ than ‘system-folk’. There are many other things that can be added to his list, such as the treatment of anti-Islamist Somali-born speaker Ayaan Hirsi Ali, who was not able to speak in Australia, after threats of having any meeting

‘ECONOMIC POLICY’ AND ‘GOOD WORKS’ by Wallace Klinck

Wallace Klinck’s response to a fellow Canadian who was defending Christians’ involved in ‘many good works’ within their communities.

“Thanks for your rejoinder to my accusatory comments. I perfectly well understand your reaction and that many people are in actual fact engaged in charitable activities of an extensive nature. Unfortunately, they are almost always entirely blind to the overall situation—seemingly to be of the opinion that the state of the world is just because of “the way things are” or because of the frailties (even innate evil) of fallen and/or irredeemable human nature. Our problems, they often naïvely assume, just grew like Topsy who opined that she just “grewed” and that “nobody ever made me”.

When applied to human interaction in the real world, this is a very erroneous attitude having the most tragic and disastrous consequences.

Our economic relationships involving production, distribution and consumption do not “just happen”. They are moderated and controlled by defined and specified modes of numerical accountancy and financial convention which determine our physical activities. These prescribed norms of economic behaviour are not “neutral”. That is to say, they have their own specific policy.

History is not in general a mere accident. It is crystallized policy. That policy is the maintenance of servility by financial scarcity which imparts a false and contrived impression of real scarcity, with the objective of centralizing both wealth and power. Policy does not just emanate from the environment like the scent from a rose. It derives from human consciousness.

disrupted by thousands of protesters: The Australian, April 6, 2017, p.12.

While the politically correct are oh so sensitive about offensive speech, they don’t worry much about their threats of violence to achieve their ends. The authorities just let it happen, especially if conservative or Alt Right groups are involved. Religiously motivated attacks on Christians can also be ignored, or downplayed by the multicultural establishment: <http://www.dailytelegraph.com.au/rendezview/we-rush-to-condemn-islamophobia-what-about-antichristian-attacks/news-story/2bb6f9a158146e963355a6da3adbe70a>.

Trump offered hope against this oppressive system, but has now shown that he too, is just a Deep State fluffy bunny (it is Easter Sunday).

Things are grim and getting grimmer out there. The evidence is that fundamental liberal values have already collapsed and that we are living under a new form of totalitarianism, as even more mainstream journalists are openly admitting now. ***

Don’t adjust your mind; the fault is in reality (R. D. Laing).

It behoves us to recognize policy, to understand its nature, to locate its ideological source and to identify its advocates and practitioners.

For our purposes we must recognize that the economic affairs of society are dictated by a system of debt that misrepresents reality, thereby suppressing creative initiative and the ability of citizens at large to benefit from its exercise. The accepted financial policy under which the world labours is essentially that of the British John Maynard Keynes, a Fabian Socialist, a childless bi-sexual who scandalized even some of his avante garde associates by expressing appreciation of the modest cost of “bed and boy” in the Middle East.

Keynes enjoyed a secure career in the British Treasury, serving the financial powers which have visited misery upon humanity. Is it any surprise that his financial policy has been sterile and destructive? This is the policy under which most of our Christian activists live and act in apparent oblivious bliss, while running from pillar to post attempting to patch up the depredations caused by prevailing financial policy. It is comparable to darting here and there to put out derivative small fires without putting out their primary source—like lopping off the diseased limbs of a tree while ignoring the source of infection at the root.

While it is difficult to criticize people of good will who perform charitable acts one must also point out that they themselves are supporting the source of the evils they oppose by diverting attention away from their primary source, thereby relieving the financial powers of their responsibility by inducing us to share the insufficiency and mal-distribution of abundance of material wealth and leisure which has been brought about by misguided and/or evil policy. Mentioning such matters to them seems at best to elicit a blank stare, or at worst an accusation that one is opposing the Will of God or even, horror of horrors, some defamatory epithet such as “Anti-Semitism”.

If those who do charitable acts out of love of good simply because it is good to do good, then, in the limited manner in which they function, they are to be admired at least for their pure motivations.

If they believe that existence of the poor and disadvantaged is necessary to provide them an opportunity to “work their way to Salvation” through “good works”, then I think that they are already damned—unless they are to be forgiven because they know not what they do. In such instances, “works are as filthy rags” and do not in an effective manner resolve our problems.” ***

TARGET FOR THE WEEK

The ink is not quite dry on the Prime Minister’s announcement of a change to 457 Visas so we do not know all the details. However it would appear that more preference will be given to Australians filling job vacancies under new rules. What common sense, you may say!

Well the PM’s decision has only come about because of pressure from the community. Naturally much of the credit goes to One Nation and its influence in the Parliament but our supporters deserve a pat on the back also. We have written asking for immigration to be reduced or even abandoned while such high unemployment exists. Yes it is common sense is it not!

While you are enjoying some credit from your action, please take the opportunity to write again. Support One Nation for their effort and support Coalition MP’s for finally acting. Send a letter to the PM and your local Member (even if he is not a Coalition member). Remind them that the Visa to replace the 457 must honour the principle that “Australians come first”. ND ***

The Good Father Helps You to Become Your Best Self by Jordan B. Peterson

Ref: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yXZSeiA14PI>

Psychology Professor Dr. Jordan B. Peterson explains how the archetype of the wise king helps you to become a functional adult. He asks: Why are today’s young people starving for responsibility?

“The good is the opposite of evil. The good is what you would want for yourself, for your loved ones...”

If you’re aiming at the good then you want what is good for you, and I mean what is good for you as if you were taking care of yourself. Good to yourself is treating yourself like someone you love.

That is, good for you in a way that is good for your family, and then what is good for you and your family that is also good for society, and then it would be good for you and your family and society in a way that would be good for the world.

And then it would be good now, and it would be good next week and the week after and a year from now and then long into the future that you can see...” ***
