THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: A medical police state can only occur when there is a lack of transparency and accountability in government policies and in academic institutions. We are seeing this situation develop in Australia today with the suppression of the scientific debate on vaccination. UOW (University of Wollongong) has breached its charter to promote expert opinions of vaccination on its website and to allow academic debate of this scientific issue by all stakeholders in the issue. This is aided by the misconduct and fraudulent research that is occurring at the US CDC (Centre for Disease Control and Prevention) – the body that recommends vaccines for national vaccination programs. It is not the parents who are investigating these policies that are committing fraud and misconduct – it is our government bodies and national institutions. This is occurring as governments implement mandatory vaccination policies without justification in Australia. Human health is at risk if universities are allowing lobby groups with vested interests in government policy to use their procedures to promote false information on vaccines to the public using the university logo.

PROMINENT DOCTOR AND VACCINE RESEARCHER SAYS 'WE ARE ALMOST A MEDICAL POLICE STATE'!

Open Letter

from Dr. Judy Wilyman, 26 September 2017

To Vice-Chancellor, University of Wollongong (UOW), Australia, Professor Paul Wellings

Copied to Professor's Heather Yeatman and Alison Jones, and 60 UOW academics and staff

Dear Professor Wellings,

Australia is currently implementing legislation regarding vaccination policies that will make this country a medical police state. This situation could not have happened if the University of Wollongong (UOW) had maintained academic integrity in the debate on vaccination. But instead the UOW has allowed industry-associated lobby groups to promote false information about vaccination research – both on its website and in the mainstream media – using the UOW logo. This disinformation campaign using the UOW logo has been promoted by Dr. Matthew Berryman, Dr. John Cunningham, Professor Heather Yeatman, and Professor Alison Jones.

The University also requested that ~60 UOW academics sign their name to the false information provided by Heather Yeatman in her promotion of immunisation on the UOW website. Heather Yeatman has never researched vaccination or immunisation policies. She is an expert in nutrition not immunisation or immunology. Her comments on the UOW website contradict the in-depth research presented in my PhD on this topic, also published on the UOW website.

Promoting immunisation with the personal opinion of a non-expert in immunisation is a breach of academic integrity by UOW. Here is a link to my interview with Sarah Westall from the US program, Business Game Changers, that describes the political processes that have facilitated this situation. <http://www.sarahwestall.com/world-health-org-directs-world-vaccine-strategy-judy-wilyman/%C2%A0> It is titled 'The Vaccination Debate: Let's get Serious' and it has been broadcast nationally throughout the US, Canada, Hawaii and Alaska.

The University of Wollongong is running a disinformation campaign by allowing UOW academics and industry-associated lobby group activists to suppress the scientific debate on vaccination in the media by presenting their false and misleading personal opinions – using the UOW logo.

THE GREAT BATTLE FOR 'NO' By Mrs Vera West

People, especially girls and women, need to learn to say 'NO'! If people in the West had learnt to say No then we may not have some of the crises which we now face.

The same sex marriage campaign 'Yes' side, has sent out unsolicited text messages for the Yes side. The messages were sent using a "technology platform," used by political parties. Obviously enough, all the usual suspects have defended this invasion of privacy. In fact, the electoral use could be in violation of the Privacy Act as well, and it would be good for lawyers to get onto this and see if the law can be used against them. Have mobile phone numbers been kept on a data base? It seems likely, and this too could be contrary to Privacy law.

SAME SEX, TIME FOR A BEX By Mrs Vera West

How I miss Bex tablets, taking a Bex with a cup of tea, then a nap really helped with psycho-political neurosis. What a pity that they were highly addictive and caused kidney disease. And, now we have the brain ache of the same sex plebby, and the endless debate and conflict that goes with it.

Good to see that some of the points made earlier in this debate by some of us are getting presented by others, not that they have been influenced in any way by us. The rational mind reaches the same conclusion.

For example, the threat that same sex marriage would have on parent's rights to their children's education, has now been put in an advertisement, telling us, that based on the Canadian experience, a Yes vote will lead to the celebration of homosexuality in schools: <http://www.theaustralian.com.au/news/nation/christian-kids-will-be-forced-to-celebrate-homosexuality/news-story/f812b86f5d7fe25b9568c5ae8d235231>

"Dr Tourloukis argues that the introduction of same-sex marriage in Canada in 2005 had paved the way for "anti-heterosexist" policies in schools that saw homosexuality and gender diversity taught as a matter of course.

"You wouldn't think that two men or two women getting married would have such a profound effect on the education system but I assure you that it has,"

WELL, LET THEM EAT ICE By James Reed

I don't normally like any of the journalism of Caroline Overington, but she did a great piece, "Exorbitant Energy Bills Can be A Death Sentence If You're Old and Short of Cash," The Weekend Australian, September 23-24, 2017, p. 17.

The point made is that rising energy bills, something that will be talked about at the League National Weekend, 14 and 15 October, 2017, threaten the vulnerable who cannot afford sky high energy bills, and many will die. Winter can be harsh, but it is always possible to struggle through using plenty of warm clothes. But, hot summers are a killer, and a real danger.

ON TARGET

Get onto all the polities opposing same sex marriage and demand that they do something about this! It is their job to act!

The good news is that even the mainstream media is reporting that the Yes vote is starting to lose ground, with support falling from 63 to 57 per cent: The Australian, September 25, 2017, p. 1. I don't believe that the Yes side has such high figures, given that ethnic Australia is firmly going to vote No, and that given the climate of fear that has been created, most No supporters are not going to declare this to someone who has their phone number.

Keep fighting, for victory in this is coming! ***

he says. "They began to change the curriculum in schools. They said materials relating to homosexuality and same-sex marriage were to permeate the entire curriculum; all subjects, all grade levels. "They said all students, including my Christian children, should be required to celebrate homosexuality."

Opponents to same-sex marriage have repeatedly pointed to Canada as an example of a jurisdiction where religious freedoms had come under threat because of same-sex marriage. Recently a campaign was launched seeking to remove the tax-free status of churches that refused to perform same-sex marriage ceremonies, while some provinces reportedly have been considering laws that would forbid private schools teaching that traditional marriage was the ideal."

As has been said by all critics, this vote is not about "equality," it is an attack by the politically correct class upon basic institutions, because, that is what the brains of members of that class are programmed to do. It is just the way the liberal-Leftist mind works. This debate has shown the real values of the new class; their desire for achieving their agenda at all costs, making threats, and having media hate campaigns.

Even if I agreed with same sex marriage, because of the thug tactics employed, I would still oppose it. ***

The heat can offer seemingly no escape.

Obviously, the energy cost issue needs a political resolution. Until that comes, the poor will need to be very careful and investigate ways of regulating temperature, perhaps even moving, or finding some other way to keep cool. Perhaps the hottest part of the day could be spend in libraries or community centres. Universities are often open until late, and it would put them to some good use, apart from all of the evil that they generate. Overall, some careful alternative planning is needed; these sites may help: <https://greatist.com/happiness/tricks-to-sleep-in-the-heat>

THE DOVE OF FREEDOM, HAS FLOWN By Brian Simpson

The loss of freedom of thought can be seen in many areas of modern society, from gun ownership, to sexuality issues and race. Here, I will briefly mention two areas by way of illustration.

In the West scientific research on race and race differences faces passive to moderate aggressive suppression, ranging from lack of financial support, to outright university suppression via sackings and physical attacks by deranged Leftoid students. A concise summary of the assault on race research has recently been given by Nelson Rosit, "Assault on Psychology: Research on Race differences Anathematized," at:

<http://www.theoccidentalobserver.net/2017/09/01/assault-on-psychology#more-154514>

But, this is all pretty much old stuff, for as we have been presenting at this site for some time, there are in the education systems of the West, especially schools, not merely a suppression of race, history and tradition, but an active strategy of undermining the entire traditional basis to society, from the ground up.

What is particularly interesting about the modern approach is that there has been a normalisation of this process, making it all part of business-as-usual. Thus displacement immigration, which leads to the creation of White minority multicult fascist states, is now the new norm.

Homosexuality, which only a few decades back was regarded as a psycho-sexual disorder, is now the new norm, in the sense that anyone objecting to any aspect of this agenda, will face the wrath of the law, or if there are no such vilification laws, parallel to those controlling thought about race, the softer, subtle methods can be used.

Presumably, in the same sex plebiscite, one has the right to vote No? Yet, cases are starting to be heard, that those advocating the No vote, will be personally attacked, by campaigns for professional deregistration, or just being sacked from their jobs: The Australian, September 20, 2017, p. 1. Companies indicating anything but boot-licking support for Yes, have faced social media boycotts, and of course, capitalists, scared of any threat to their profits, always back down. Indeed, all visible branches of the capitalist state are on board with the Yes campaign, because those who comprise it are the new ruling class.

People have to wake up that something like an enemy invasion has occurred since the 1960s, and one much worse, perhaps than even if Japan did conquer Australia.

If imperial Japan did win, then if they did not eliminate the Whites, which is unlikely, they would have remade the country into a colony, much in the way that China is doing to us now.

We can be sure that imperial Japan would never have entertained all that we have discussed here. I am not nostalgically suggesting that a Japanese victory would have been a good thing, in offence of our ex-service men, but we have become a virtual colony of Asia, as the Asianisation policy essentially amounts to (an abandonment of our traditional identity), and as well, as we go down, our own decadent new class, seeks to impose all of the politically correct tyrannical ideology upon us. So, what were all of the sacrifices of the past really for?

Freedom movement people in the mid-20th century did not scream about this, even if they could see where the future was heading. There was the communist threat, which became all-consuming. Then there were positive visions of economic reform, and other reforms such as CIR. Yet, it would be irresponsible journalism, to continue down this same business-as-usual path and offer false hope to readers, just to keep numbers up. This is the time for the telling of unpleasant truths, because reality is unpleasant, and unless this is grasped, the future must be oblivion.

The thought experiment which Vera West has suggested that we use is a good one. Put yourself back in say 1950. Could you imagine the world of today, which the population does passively accept? After all, apart from the Alt Right in America, nobody takes to the streets here in protest about what amounts to White Genocide. Mice would make more of a protest. Now if the ruling elites, the Dark Lords of Mordor, have achieved all that they have up until 2017, say in 50 years, what do you think they will achieve in another 50 years? Project the scenario on in your mind. Think radically, because they not only think radically, they act so.

Each of the bushfires discussed here must be fought and won for there to be any hope for any sort of human future. Once they have eliminated the White race, then they will seek immortality by uploading their demon essence into immortal robots, and will seek to move through the universe, to find other intelligent life to conquer and destroy. Where else can all of this lead – surely, not a happy ending? ***

THE ROUNDUP ON ROUNDUP By Brian Simpson

Here is an interesting piece which Australian gardeners should read: "Monsanto caught colluding with EPA in Roundup cancer cover-up":

<http://naturalnews.com/2017-03-23-monsanto-caught-colluding-with-epa-in-roundup-cancer-cover-up.html>

Look, on these articles, it is best to play safe journalism and just quote from the source, and then give the standard disclaimer: they said it, not us:

"Monsanto and the EPA have been caught red-handed in the midst of a legal controversy. Unsealed court documents have shown that not only is the EPA severely lacking in the standards department, but that the federal agency colluded with one of the nation's most menacing companies, Monsanto. And in doing so, the EPA helped to keep Monsanto's star product, Roundup, on store shelves and safe from being reviewed for its cancer-causing effects.

Court documents show that the EPA declared that Roundup was safe for use without ever testing the entire formulation's effects, and instead relied on the industry testing done on just the key active ingredient, glyphosate.

As shown at the URL link above, you will note the graphic, not only does the EPA not require testing of the actual product in its entirety, Monsanto itself has not conducted any studies on the chronic carcinogenic studies related to Roundup's formulation. While this alone is certainly more than enough cause for concern — both about Roundup's safety and the EPA's apparent lack of integrity — this revelation is just the tip of the iceberg, so to speak.

While the EPA contends that glyphosate is safe, the World Health Organization and numerous independent studies on the chemical's safety seem to disagree. The WHO made tremendous waves when they declared that glyphosate was a probable carcinogen, and several independent investigations of the product's safety have shown that it's linked to liver damage, Parkinson's and Alzheimer's disease, digestive disorders and other ailments."

I stopped using Big Agri. chemicals long ago in my garden. No monocrops, self-supporting mini-permaculture, and fresh vegetables all year round.

That's the round-up: <https://permacultureaustralia.org.au/>

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

to THE AGE

Peter Hartcher is right, that the legal definition of marriage 'has not stood since time immemorial' ('An Australian tradition we need to remember', 23/9), but what has remained constant is the nature of marriage itself. Although it is not true of every individual person, in general human beings are monogamous, and rightly so, because that is the best and safest way for children to be successfully raised to maturity. That is what the churches and their biblical doctrine are defending.

Australia does not have a 'proud progressive tradition' in this context. The increased number of divorces and separations, leaving children without one or both parents in the family home, that has occurred in recent years is not progress, but retrogression, resulting partly from foolish legislation. Let's not compound the error.
