THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: Snowing on Global Warming By James Reed

Guess what? It has been snowing in the Sahara desert, near the town of Ain Sefra in Algeria. About 16 inches fell. There is some thought, outside of the conventional global warming priesthood, that the sun is at solar minimum and that a new ice age is on the way:

Better stock up on winter woollies, for the icy ride ahead.

BE CAREFUL WHAT YOU WISH FOR By Viv Forbes

In today's crazy world, western politicians are wasting billions of tax-payer dollars force-feeding costly unreliable green energy in the bizarre belief that this will somehow change Earth's climate.

Even more incredible, they fear global warmth and seem hell-bent on creating global cooling. They should study climate history. It is snow and ice, cold dry air and carbon dioxide starvation we need to fear, not a warm, moist, fertile, bountiful atmosphere. Climate change is natural and unstoppable.

Just 20,000 years ago, Earth was in one of its recurring glacial phases. A thick massive ice sheet smothered Canada, Alaska, Iceland, Greenland, North Asia and Europe as far south as London. Much of the animal and plant life of the previous warm era was extinguished. Even in warmer lands not covered by the ice sheet, plants suffered as the cold oceans removed moisture and carbon dioxide plant food from the atmosphere.

Then, because of changing cycles in Earth's orbit and tilt, reinforced by changing solar cycles, the sun warmed the frozen lands. The great ice sheets melted, sea levels rose and the warming oceans expelled moisture and CO2 plant food into the atmosphere. Plant life recovered. Tundra, forests, grasslands and herbivores advanced towards the poles and fish became abundant in the shallow seas that flooded coastal plains. Hunters, herders, farmers and fishermen followed the food.

Human population increased greatly. They gave thanks for the warmth, and worshipped the sun. But the peak of the modern warm era is past, and the natural cycles controlling global temperatures are pointing downwards.

Only an idiot with a death wish for life on Earth would attempt to accelerate our inevitable descent into the next ice age. Luckily, their costly war on warmth is totally futile, but their war on carbon energy will prove tragically misguided in the cold times ahead.

THE INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION AND ELITE CONTROL By John Steele

Probably I will be in the minority here, but I am not one to really like technology and a world dominated by machines. Give me the homely self sufficiency of a 'John Seymour' any day:

<https://www.amazon.com.au/Fat-Land-John-Seymour/dp/1908213485/>

In this context I came across a surprising essay by neo-masculinity writer Roosh, arguing that despite all the creature comforts industrialism and scientific progress have given us, it has resulted in more power for the elites:

“The industrial revolution has allowed for two key events:

1. The control of most economic and human output of the Earth by a relatively tiny group who control the minds and behavior of billions of people.
2. Explosion in population thanks to advances in agriculture, hygiene, and medicine.

The result is we have more people controlled by less people.

The controllers have the power to essentially drive the face of humanity in a way that could not have been done before the industrial revolution. Globalization, multiculturalism, and socialism are the most efficient and logical ways for the elite to assert control over the planet, and since the dawn of modern banking, they have pushed exactly those ideologies throughout the world.

The elite have convinced us that we are living in a glorious progressive age, but it's more glorious for them than it is for us. They give us handouts through their welfare state, cheap electronics, and lax sexual morals while they gain immeasurable power and wealth, in what could be considered the most unfair

BAD GOOGLE, BAD DOOOOOOGLE By Paul Walker

Former Google employer James Damore, was fired from Google over a memo he released which was critical of the company's diversity initiatives. He has now filed a discrimination lawsuit:

https://www.dropbox.com/s/f6p02fjxrd7c6m/20180108%20Damore%20-%20Complaint_fs.pdf?dl=0

Some of the points covered, if true, show that Google is a really weird place to work, if you are a white male:

CASE SUMMARY

1. In addition, Plaintiffs intend to assert claims under the Private Attorney General Act of California, when those claims are perfected.
2. Plaintiffs bring this individual and class action on behalf of themselves and on behalf of a class and subclasses defined as all employees of Google discriminated against
 - (i) due to their perceived conservative political views by Google in California at any time during the time period beginning four years prior to the filing of this Complaint through the date of trial in this action ("Political Class Period");
 - (ii) due to their male gender by Google in California at any time during the time period beginning one year prior to the filing of this Complaint through the date of trial in this action ("Gender Class Period"); and/or
 - (iii) due to their Caucasian race by Google in California at any time during the time period beginning one year prior to the filing of this Complaint through the date of trial in this action ("Race Class Period") (Political Class Period, Gender Class Period, and Race Class Period referred to collectively, as "Class Periods"). These violations also subject Google to claims for violation of California's Business and Professions Code section 17200 et seq.1
3. Throughout the Class Periods, and in violation of California law, Google employees who expressed views deviating from the majority view at Google on political subjects raised in the workplace and relevant to Google's employment policies and its business, such trade that the common man has ever made. They put five dollars in your pocket while you relinquish your own agency and fabric of your society."

<http://www.rooshv.com/the-industrial-revolution-has-led-to-an-incredibly-powerful-system-of-elite-control>

I think it could be strongly argued though that the problem is not so much science and technology, but the elites themselves, who would be exerting control whatever system was in place. Obviously, the more technology they have, the more damage they can do.

But, humanity's problem has always been 'how to defeat the evil ruling class of tyrants who seek to enslave the common man, and establish a rule of freedom'.

The problem is at crisis point today.

as "diversity" hiring policies, "bias sensitivity," or "social justice," were/are singled out, mistreated, and systematically punished and terminated from Google, in violation of their legal rights.

4. Google's open hostility for conservative thought is paired with invidious discrimination on the basis of race and gender, barred by law. Google's management goes to extreme—and illegal—lengths to encourage hiring managers to take protected categories such as race and/or gender into consideration as determinative hiring factors, to the detriment of Caucasian and male employees and potential employees at Google.

5. Damore, Gudeman, and other class members were ostracized, belittled, and punished for their heterodox political views, and for the added sin of their birth circumstances of being Caucasians and/or males. This is the essence of discrimination—Google formed opinions about and then treated Plaintiffs not based on their individual merits, but rather on their membership in groups with assumed characteristics.

6. Google employees and managers strongly preferred to hear the same orthodox opinions regurgitated repeatedly, producing an ideological echo chamber, a protected, distorted bubble of groupthink. When Plaintiffs challenged Google's illegal employment practices, they were openly threatened and subjected to harassment and retaliation from Google. Google created an environment of protecting employees who harassed individuals who spoke out against Google's view or the "Googley way," as it is sometimes known internally. Google employees knew they could harass Plaintiffs with impunity, given the tone set by managers—and they did so.

7. Google employs illegal hiring quotas to fill its desired percentages of women and favored minority candidates, and openly shames managers of business units who fail to meet their quotas—in the process, openly denigrating male and Caucasian employees as less favored than others. (continued on next page)

8. Not only was the numerical presence of women celebrated at Google solely due to their gender, but the presence of Caucasians and males was mocked with “boos” during company-wide weekly meetings. This unacceptable behavior occurred at the hands of high-level managers at Google who were responsible for hundreds, if not thousands, of hiring and firing decisions during the Class Periods.

<http://www.breitbart.com/tech/2018/01/08/damore-complaint-shows-allegedly-widespread-intimidation-of-conservatives-at-google/>

So there you have it. If all of this is correct, then Google has a clear political bias. It does not serve the democratic interest for corporations such as this to have such vast power. If the roles were reversed, we can be sure the Left would be screaming “murder,” as they do now.

Along with Google, Facebook is getting in on the act, in aiding the mass African exodus to Europe:

“Facebook has become the smugglers’ channel for reaching out to people interested in getting from Africa to Europe. How does it happen?”

FIRE AND FURY: STUMP THE TRUMP By Chris Knight

I have just sped read the new book on the Trump presidency by Michael Wolff, Fire and Fury: Inside the Trump White House, (Little Brown, 2018). The Trump inner circle hates this book, but really as a critique of Trump, it falls very short.

This genre of investigative reporting aims to bring new insights via interviews about hot topics. While the book is an interesting read, and quite professionally written, indeed to the highest standard, it really does not measure up to the cut and thrust that I am used to in the wild world of the internet sites.

Thus, while the book briefly deals with Trump’s womanising, it does not, unless I missed it in my haste, discuss the court cases against Trump on alleged sexual abuse issues. It does not relate this material to the ongoing moral panic of “zippergate,” the exposure of sexual misadventures of Hollywood movers and shakers, and other powerful men. What the book does succeed in doing though, is show, I think, how weak Trump is as a decision maker, lacking any real substance and philosophy.

The author briefly writes about Trump being a persona, without a person inside, and I think that this is insightful. Thus, he takes the advice of his daughter Ivanka and son-in-law Jared Kushner, on a range of issues quite inconsistent with his stated policy during the election. He has failed to build the wall, and will not do it in the future. In the end, he has simply joined the globalists and deep state.

Of course, it is most likely that Trump never seriously contemplated opposing the 1 percenters anyway, and the Firstly, smugglers create accounts and pages on Facebook where they advertise their services and give their phone number, as well as recommend contacting them by WhatsApp application, which guarantees the encryption of messages.

Secondly, in order to authenticate their message, they publish pictures showing preparations for the journey.

Thirdly, they publish photos and reports of people who made it to European countries, which is supposed to build trust on the side of potential clients.

Important information is also contained in comments under posts. Thanks to them you can find out, among others, who used the smugglers’ services. In this way, through the grapevine, the rumours are spread about planned relocation.”

Steve Bannon-inspired ads during the election, were all sham. None of this is addressed in the Wolff book, which comes at this from a different political direction.

Yet the insights given by Wolff about the fickleness of Trump clearly indicate to me, that America and the West has lost any hope of a simple democratic solution to any of its pressing existential problems. However, the claim made by Wolff that his book will show that Trump cannot do his job, and thus will end the Trump presidency, is just liberal delusion. Trump is following the orders of the Deep State close enough to ensure his survival until his replacement by the next robot model:

<http://www.breitbart.com/big-journalism/2018/01/07/>

michael-wolff-claims-fire-fury-will-end-presidency/

A better title for the book would have been to take the classic lines from Macbeth, “sound and fury,” for in the end the Trump presidency will “signify nothing.”

Macbeth Act 5, Scene 5:

Tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day
To the last syllable of recorded time,
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life’s but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage
And then is heard no more. It is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing.

Shakespeare would have written such a tragedy about Donald Trump. ***

KILL ALL MEN? By Mrs Vera West

Here is the next level of madness of feminism, as Jayson Veley notes:
<https://www.naturalnews.com/2018-01-07-more-feminazi-insanity-on-parade-as-huffington-post-editor-calls-for-militant-women-to-kill-all-men.html>

“Recently, an editor for the Huffington Post declared on Twitter that she wanted to see women band together to kill all men. The tweet was deleted shortly after, but that didn’t stop some conservative news outlets from picking up on it.

The tweet came from Emily McCombs, a radical feminist who serves as the Huffington Post’s “Editorial Director of Parents.” Even though McCombs deleted the post after realizing how sick and twisted it was to publicly declare her support for the murder of millions of innocent people based solely on their genitalia, The Daily Caller was thankfully able to record the exact Tweet before it was deleted.

“New Year’s resolutions: 1, Cultivate female friendships. 2, Band together to kill all men,” McCombs wrote on Twitter on December 29. Obviously, this editor for the Huffington Post is lacking a few brain cells, not only because she believes that the entire male population should be wiped out, but also because she thought it would be a good idea to announce such an extreme view on social media.”

There are many of these wild pronouncements that have been made over the years by radical feminists. The real kicker is, that none of them are butch enough to carry out their threats! How, my dears, do you intend to take on even one hairy red-necked, gun-carrying man, let alone them all? Didn’t you write about male violence, and toxic masculinity? Isn’t that something which should not be lightly dismissed by your tough talk? Typical of feminism, the issues are never addressed. ***

TURMERIC AND CANCER By Mrs Vera West

A woman has eliminated stage three cancer, using only curcumin, one of the active compounds in turmeric:
<http://casereports.bmj.com/content/2017/bcr-2016-218148.full>

the report occurring in the British Medical Journal: “Myeloma is a haematological malignancy which typically follows a relapsing-remitting course. While treatment can control the myeloma and improve quality of life for given periods of time, remissions generally become progressively shorter with subsequent relapses, and patients ultimately enter a final refractory phase. To help control symptoms and enhance quality of life, some patients use complementary therapies as an adjunct to their conventional therapy. Here, we describe a myeloma patient who started a daily dietary supplement of curcumin when approaching her third relapse. In the absence of further antimyeloma treatment, the patient plateaued and has remained stable for the last 5 years with good quality of life.”

Mike Adams notes that there is no mention of “cure” here, a word not used by the orthodox approach to cancer, but the report is amazing for a mainstream medical journal.

<https://www.naturalnews.com/2018-01-04-stage-3-myeloma-cancer-eliminated-turmeric-supplement-british-medical-journal.html>

The woman apparently took 8 grams of curcumin a day, but there are supplements which contain highly active versions of curcumin which are marketed for the treatment of arthritis. I have found these supplements, very useful.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To THE AGE There is a huge literature available about the decline of the West from Spengler on. Julius Evola’s book Revolt against the Modern World is a good example and pertinent to Australia in its insistence on the importance to nations and peoples of sacred tradition and respected monarchs.

Just look, for one thing, at the poor standard of public dress in our streets today, compared to that of seventy years ago. Or the appalling noise marketed as modern music. Evidences of degeneration are all around us; and the fact that some republics function fairly well does not cancel out the horror.

Remember: after Kerensky came the Bolsheviks!
