THE INEVITABILITY OF NUCLEAR WAR: RUSSIAN GENERAL By James Reed

Syria remains a hot spot, with Syrian air defence having downed all of the missiles allegedly fired by Israel: This time, with Russia involved, it will not be so easy for the West having vastly under-estimated Russian military might and technological prowess. Evidence continues to grow that the gas attacks were a false flag from the West, with war reporter Robert Fisk concluding from his investigation in Syria that the chemical attack did not occur:

Robert Fisk's bombshell first-hand account for the UK Independent runs contrary to nearly every claim circulating in major international press concerning what happened just over a week ago on April 7th in an embattled suburb outside Damascus: not only has the veteran British journalist found no evidence of a mass chemical attack, but he's encountered multiple local eyewitnesses who experienced the chaos of that night, but who say the gas attack never happened. Fisk is the first Western journalist to reach and report from the site of the alleged chemical weapons attack widely blamed on Assad's forces. Writing from Douma in eastern Ghouta, Fisk has interviewed a Syrian doctor who works at the hospital shown in one of the well-known videos which purports to depict victims of a chemical attack. Importantly, the report, published late in the day Monday, is causing a stir among mainstream journalists who—minutes after the Saudi-sponsored jihadist group Jaish al-Islam (Army of Islam) accused the Syrian Army of gassing civilians—began uncritically promoting the 'Assad gassed his own people' narrative as an already cemented and 'proven' fact based on the mere word a notoriously brutal armed group who itself has admitted to using chemical weapons on the Syrian battlefield in prior years. Also notable is that no journalist or international observer was anywhere near Douma when the purported chemical attack took place. Controversy ensued immediately after Fisk's report, especially as he is among the most recognizable names in the past four decades of Middle East war reporting, having twice won the British Press Awards' Journalist of the Year prize and as seven time winner of the British Press Awards' Foreign Correspondent of the Year (the NY Times has referred to him as 'probably the most famous foreign correspondent in Britain', while The Guardian has called him 'one of the most famous journalists in the world'). An Arabic speaker, Fisk became famous for being among the few reporters in history to conduct face-to-face interviews with Osama bin Laden, which he did on three occasions between 1993 and 1997.

He was able to walk around and investigate newly liberated Douma without Syrian government or Russian minders (in part this is likely because he has reported from inside Syria going back decades, in war-torn 1982 Hama, for example), and he begins his account as follows:

This is the story of a town called Douma, a ravaged, stinking place of smashed apartment blocks and of an underground clinic whose images of suffering allowed three of the Western world's most powerful nations to bomb Syria last week. There's even a friendly doctor in a green coat who, when I track him down in the very same clinic, cheerfully tells me that the "gas" videotape which horrified the world— despite all the doubters— is perfectly genuine. War stories, however, have a habit of growing darker. For the same 58-year old senior Syrian doctor then adds something profoundly uncomfortable: the patients, he says, were overcome not by gas but by oxygen starvation in the rubbish-filled tunnels and basements in which they lived, on a night of wind and heavy shelling that stirred up a dust storm. Fisk goes on to identify the doctor by name - Dr. Assim Rahaibani - which is notable given the fact that all early reporting from Douma typically relied on "unnamed doctors" and anonymous opposition sources for early claims of a chlorine gas attack (lately morphed into an unverified "mixed" chlorine-and-sarin attack).

(continued from previous page) The doctor's testimony is consistent with that of the well-known Syrian opposition group Syrian Observatory for Human Rights (SOHR), which initially reported based on its own pro-rebel sourcing that heavy government bombardment of Douma city resulted in the collapse of homes and underground shelters, causing civilians in hiding to suffocate. According to SOHR, which has long been a key go-to source for mainstream media over the course of the war, "70 of them [women and children] have suffered suffocation as a result of the demolition of home basements over them due to the heavy and intense shelling." <https://www.zerohedge.com/news/2018-04-17/famed-war-reporter-robert-fisk-reaches-syrian-chemical-attack-site-concludes-they>

Hence no gas, but the bombing attacks by the West killed everyone. And, if...gas...is...involved, it may have been that used by Syrian rebels, backed by the West:

I SPY WITH MY LITTLE GOOGLE... By Brian Simpson

Here I was using Goooooooooogle Chrome with gay abandon, my balding scalp's remaining hair flowing in the IT breeze, and then there is this news:

"Google has come under fire for many questionable actions as of late — and the startling revelation that their widely used web browser, Google Chrome, is scanning personal computers around the world is nothing short of infuriating for its users. Big Brother is here — and countless numbers of people have invited this authoritarian presence (in one form or another) while being none the wiser. Indeed, some of the world's largest corporations (like Google and Amazon) are continuing to find new ways to invade user privacy. In addition to a spying web browser, devices like Google Home and the Amazon Echo (and Alexa) are going places where the prying eyes of corporate interests have never gone before. Worse still, they've convinced us to willingly purchase these devices and place them in our homes. People are actually paying for the 'privilege' of being spied on — all the while

The endgame of this 4D chess game is World War III, as a Russian general has highlighted:

Elevating fears of a third world war even higher, an ex-Soviet general has come forward declaring a nuclear war between the United States and Russia is unavoidable and 'inevitable'. Evgeny Buzhinskiy, a former Lieutenant-General under the Soviet Union says that "Russia will never accept 'any kind of defeat'. Because Russia is 'lagging behind' the US in terms of military power, Putin would rather order a nuclear strike than accept defeat on the battlefield". Buzhinskiy, who joined the USSR's armed forces in 1968, said "the increasingly acrimonious standoff between Russia and the US is 'worse than the Cold War'. Russia will not accept any kind of defeat, so the involvement of nuclear weapons is inevitable," he told Channel 4 News.

If conflict erupts it will turn nuclear.

turning a blind eye to the total invasion of privacy for the sake of 'convenience' and keeping up with the Jones'. Google Chrome has become the trendy browser of choice, but not without a cost to users. A shocking report recently revealed that a series of 'updates' to Chrome gave it the ability to scan all the files on Windows computers. It may be the browser so-called security pros suggest, but as it turns out, Chrome's security blanket may just be a ruse so they can take your information for themselves."

Oh no! Soon they will discover that it was not Russia, but Uncle Len in his shed who stole the US election, lock, stock and smoking barrels. He keeps it in his back pocket, and takes it out periodically to gloat over, while waiting for Trumpet and Vlad the lad to nuke each other. Naughty Uncle Len. Who would have thought that an alcoholic bum would be so politically powerful? Politics really is the art of deception.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

One would have expected the new SA Liberal Government would be resistant to implementing the former ALP policies, but it is proceeding with the establishment of the Local Government Grants Commission (LGGC) due next January, (Advertiser April 18, 2018). This independent body will assess proposals or make recommendations for boundary changes and amalgamation of Councils.

The new Minister Knoll has said that the Government will not force amalgamations but he admits any changes to boundaries or amalgamations may be initiated by just one Council or the Minister. This will of course, lead to amalgamation of unwilling parties. The other subtle tool to promote amalgamation is rate capping which will stifle Councils to some degree and they will then be lured into amalgamation in pursuit of the mystical savings.

Any Council of that mind should firstly attempt to discover which Council can demonstrate lower costs following the previous round of amalgamations. The best Councils are often the smallest ones because they are close to the people and have to show greater responsibility to their community. On the other hand, the recent public outcry over excessive spending and wastage has been directed to the State's largest Council.

Centralisation is not in the community interest. Therefore, we and Councillors need to remain alert and analyse all proposals. Ken Grundy, Naracoorte, SA

BRING THE SOUTH AFRICANS HERE! By James Reed

This one will show the true colours of the immigration-mad Left, who want a world without borders: bringing the white South African farmers here, as they face genocide at the hands of the South African non-white society:

“Groups of Australians and South African expats gathered in Brisbane to show their support for proposals that would offer refugee status to white South African farmers. Aussie Home Affairs Minister Peter Dutton has suggested his country should offer fast-track visas to farm owners, who he says may be at risk of losing their properties if land expropriation with compensation goes ahead. Citizens of Brisbane took to the streets on Sunday, voicing their concerns about the policy which was given the Parliamentary green light back in February. Around 2,000 people were estimated to have attended the march, which featured slogans such as ‘bring them here’ and ‘allow our families into Australia’. Not only was the march used to show support for the fast-track visa proposal, but there was also a gathering of prayer for the demonstrators. They prayed for the protection of law enforcement, the military, and of all legal counsel.”

<https://www.thesouthafrican.com/brisbane-march-south-african-farmers/>

As is the ultimate result of all multicultural/multiracial societies where whites are demographically replaced, the South African government plans to take white farmers’ land without compensation. There is a floating plan to genocide whites which is not officially endorsed, but has been made by many in their “machine gun the Boer” song. Predictably enough, although the Left support open migration for all coloured people to the West, white South Africans are opposed because, well, they are white, and must face their fate. Just like the Left in the West, one day, will face their fate. ***

A TALE OF ORANGES By William Greene

Coming from a hippie/alternative lifestyle position in the 1970s, to being Alt Right in my old age, I confess to having many friends who were ‘orange people’, followers of Osho, Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh. Like many of the cults of the 1970s, this was Indian based, although the movement eventually went to the US where it imploded into murder and mayhem, all centred around the right-hand woman of Ma Anand Sheela.

“To defend the Rajneesh movement from the overreach of the state of Oregon, Sheela organized the first and largest bioterror attack in United States’ history. After carefully cultivating salmonella, Sheela instructed her followers to secretly place it in food items at Oregon restaurants. 751 people were infected and 45 were hospitalized.

For this crime, Sheela only served 29 months of a 20-year sentence in a California prison. Breitbart News highlighted a report last week from FiveThirtyEight that shined a light on the U.S. Sentencing Commission revelation that American women of all races receive shorter prison sentences than white men who commit the same crimes.”

<http://www.breitbart.com/social-justice/2018/04/09/leftists-are-celebrating-the-perpetrator-of-the-u-s-s-largest-bioterror-attack-because-shes-a-woman/>

But Sheela, according to this article has become a feminist icon, and apparently trying to murder people does not matter, unless of course it is with an AR 15, in which case all guns must be banned. There have been thousands of supportive comments on the net by the girl power types praising Sheela, so we know for sure that we are in the heat of a multi-faceted cultural war. ***

WHY ARE THE ELITES OBSESSED WITH POISON GAS? By Peter Ewer

Remember the Skripal-Russia-poisoned-them mania from the last news cycle? That has fallen from the press now as the chatters eagerly promote World War III to relieve their hyper-affluence produced world weariness. But, the Skripal affair was yet another poison hoax it seems, as the narrative has fallen apart:

“The substance used on Sergei Skripal was an agent called BZ, according to Swiss state Spiez lab, the Russian foreign minister said. The toxin was never produced in Russia, but was in service in the US, UK, and other NATO states. Sergei Skripal, a former Russian double agent, and his daughter Yulia were poisoned with an incapacitating toxin known as 3-Quinuclidinyl benzilate or BZ, Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov said, citing the results of the examination conducted by a Swiss chemical lab that worked with the samples that London handed over to the Organisation for the Prohibition of the Chemical Weapons (OPCW). The Swiss center sent the results to the OPCW. However, the UN chemical watchdog limited itself only to confirming the formula of the substance used to poison the Skripals in its final report without mentioning anything about the other facts presented in the Swiss document, the Russian foreign minister added. He went on to say that Moscow would ask the OPCW about its decision to not include any other information provided by the Swiss in its report. Lavrov said that the Swiss center that assessed the samples is actually the Spiez Laboratory. This facility is a Swiss state research center controlled by the Swiss Federal Office for Civil Protection and, ultimately, by the country’s defense minister. The lab is also an internationally recognized center of excellence in the field of the nuclear, biological, and chemical protection

(continued from previous page) and is one of the five centers permanently authorized by the OPCW. The Russian foreign minister said that London refused to answer dozens of 'very specific' questions asked by Moscow about the Salisbury case, as well as to provide any substantial evidence that could shed light on the incident. Instead, the UK accused Russia of failing to answer its own questions, he said, adding that, in fact, London did not ask any questions but wanted Moscow to admit that it was responsible for the delivery of the chemical agent to the UK."

<https://www.rt.com/news/424149-skrupal-poisoning-bz-lavrov/>

It is reasonable to believe that this was another false flag to blame Russia, and once it failed it was necessary to up the stakes and arrange a Syrian gas attack. The gas supposedly used, which was said by some media sources to be nerve gas, others to be chlorine, would be highly toxic, yet health care workers were not even using gloves to wash down victims. Gloves are used by doctors in even routine medical examinations, so there is something fishy, or gassy, going on here. (continued next column)

HOME SCHOOLING By Mrs Vera West

Here is the next frontier, to crack down on home schooling to allegedly deal with 'extremism':

"The government is set to crack down on home schooling amidst concerns that some out-of-school education settings are failing to promote its liberal definition of 'British values'. Parents who want to home school their children could be forced to register with local authorities and be made subject to inspection, according to a government report published Tuesday raising the prospect of prosecution for families which failed to comply. Seeking views over the next 12 weeks with regards to strengthening regulation around home schooling, the consultation was launched as part of the government's 'Counter-Extremism strategy to enable intervention in out of school settings'. Under the proposed regulatory system, any family taking their child out of mainstream schooling in the UK would have to explain their decision and demonstrate that children were being given an appropriate education at home."

This is not about controlling terrorism, which the System cares nothing about, and does what it can to fuel it, but is just the latest exercise in thought control, making sure that the next generation has their minds full of toxic waste, ready for their demographic displacement.

Speaking of demographic displacement, (immigration-ed) it is becoming mighty expensive. Maths is not my thing, but that figure is now (€) 1 trillion euros, a lot of lollies. At that rate, Europe will be totally bankrupt before even the billion African migrants get there. Who in the global conspiracy department planned that one? Sack him/her! ***

ON TARGET

The Deep staters are now either so arrogant that they don't care, or assume that the general population are so dumbed down that they do not need to cover their tracks. They are confident that the slaves will never realise that they are in comfortable pens waiting to be slayed, like Christmas geese. ***

SPORTING ABORTIONS By Mrs Vera West

I have heard of female body builders getting pregnant for a hormone surge, then later having an abortion. Now it seems that sports abortions are widespread:

"Female college athletes are forced to withstand a campaign of pressure to terminate pregnancies in order to stay in top condition, according to a piece in the Washington Examiner.

One U.S. Olympic gold medalist, Sanya Richards-Ross, recently admitted to Sports Illustrated that she was pressured to have an abortion just ahead of the 2008 Olympics in Beijing, China. Richards-Ross claimed that she didn't know any female athletes who hadn't had an abortion to keep them in competition, according to the Washington Examiner.

"I literally don't know another female track and field athlete who hasn't had an abortion," Richards-Ross said."

Professional sport is way out of control and verging towards madness in pursuit of consumer-viewing dollars. It is high time for the plebs to stop playing the bread and circus circuit, grow up, and do something to save civilisation. But, I dream. ***
