THOUGHTS OF THE WEEK: “Such was the state of England. Here you saw a people, inhabiting the most productive land in the world, a people to whom God had given a large portion of all his choicest blessings, safety from foreign foes, climate, soil, mines, woods, downs, flocks and herds, and, above all, industry perfectly unparalleled; a people, too, whose forefathers gave them the best laws that ever existed in the world; here you saw this people, who were famed for their willing obedience to the laws, and whose forefathers had scorned the thought of maintaining even a single soldier except in case of war; here you saw this people, whose laws said that no man should be taxed without his own consent; first reduced to a state of half-starvation; next setting the laws at defiance; and then attacked by a standing army sent against them to capture them and put them in prison. Such were the effects of heavy taxes, and particularly when raised for the purpose of upholding a funding system, which was a system of usury and monopoly added to that of grinding taxation.”

SUNDAY IS TIME TO REMEMBER THAT WE LIVE IN A POST-CHRISTIAN WEST By Peter West

It is Sunday, a time for deep reflection. Christian conservatives, like me, practice cognitive dissonance all the time, living in contradictions. We think, in the privacy of our own homes, or in our isolated corners of the web, that are not yet censored, that we live in a conservative Christian culture, as the foundations of law, literature whatever are, or were, Christian. But, the goal posts have long been moved and the proof of this is that many Christian conservatives seek alternative church venues, once they find that their old church has become, by a process of Fabian gradualism, progressive, and traditions turned to dust in their hands.

Then there is the complete deconstruction of the traditional concept of marriage and the family, now accepted by the democratic majority (and if not, then the highest courts will make it law, and to hell with democracy).

But it is now many dimensions worse than even that. Religious freedom, the right to scream out in existential/theological pain against those murdering one’s former culture has been essentially undermined in the name of progressive liberal values. Now there is a battle to preserve anything at all:

<https://www.2gb.com/one-nation-to-introduce-israel-folau-legislation-to-protect-religious-freedoms/>

“One Nation will introduce a private member’s bill aimed at protecting religious freedoms and is demanding Scott Morrison do the same. Former federal Labor leader Mark Latham is pushing for the legislation in his new role as NSW One Nation leader. It comes in response to GoFundMe cancelling Israel Folau’s fundraiser. Mr Latham tells Alan Jones “these laws are well overdue” and should be implemented at a federal level as well. “Scott Morrison spoke about them in the federal election campaign but they’ve been pushed out to yet another review.”

We can anticipate that this will be opposed by all progressives just as the attempt to control the section 18 C dragon was opposed, and freedom of speech defeated. Leaving everything until one nanosecond to doomsday, is not a great strategy. For example, even the legacy of the destruction of the traditional family and the oppressive regime of feminism will have longer-term ramifications:

“[A] growing class of bachelors who, in another age would have been married productive citizens, is an ominous sign of the anarchy and chaos to come, one that Western society ignores at its own peril.

(continued from previous page) In all societies, a growing body of sexless or undersexed, unwanted men is a powerful destabilizing force; if there are no wars to kill off society's excess men or allow men to capture and enslave women as spoils of war, then it is only a matter of time before the government must quell large-scale rebellion."

Rebellions and wars, driven by an inequitable distribution of sexual resources, are by no means a rare occurrence or a feature of the human evolutionary past. Sociobiologist David Barash argues that the Arab Spring of 2010 to 2012, the massive anti-government protests and armed rebellions against the regimes of North Africa and the Middle East, were largely driven by male sexual frustration and loneliness. In his words:

"...a substantial underlying driver of social unrest was the widespread tradition in many Arab societies whereby even monogamous marriage isn't tenable until a would-be groom has accumulated sufficient wealth to 'afford' a bride." (2016) The liberalization of sexual standards has practically destroyed family life and created an environment in which female hyperselectivity can flourish without being reined in by the dominant males who control society. Excessive polygyny and female hyperselectivity cannot long continue without some kind of violent response. Internecine strife over scarce sexual resources was endemic to Stone Age hunter-gatherer and Neolithic agropastoralist societies, which is why rulers constrained their polygynous tendencies or introduced monogamy to pacify inferior males; but now that Western elites have abandoned legally enforced monogamy, the time has once again become ripe for open rebellion against the status quo."

It will be interesting to see how this all pans out. ***

TEACHING IN BODY ARMOUR! By James Reed

I saw this coming, but over in the land of the totally crazy, they are dealing with the social breakdown, reflected in the blackboard jungle, by wearing body armour:

<https://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/ottawa/protective-gear-classrooms-teachers-worry-1.5187694>

"Growing up, all she wanted was to become a teacher. She realized her dream, and at first she loved the job. But now she says violence in the classroom has spun so far out of control that she has to wear protective sleeves to guard against attacks by students. 'I've seen principals get hurt by students, I've seen blood on them. [Educational Assistants] get kicked in the head, punched, spat at,' she said. CBC has agreed to protect the teacher's identity because she fears speaking to the media could harm her career. Her concerns match those of other educators across Ontario who say the verbal abuse and physical violence is leaving them injured and exhausted, and are calling on school boards and the province to provide more support. The teacher worked at several schools in the

Ottawa-Carleton District School Board (OCDSB) and is qualified to teach students between Grades 4 and 12. She began teaching about 15 years ago, but it was only after returning from time off to have children that she realized things had changed for the worse. 'I remember my first day back in a particular school, and I got home and I just wanted to call and say I'm not coming back,' she said. Because her elementary school classroom had students with severe behavioural issues, the teacher said she was required to wear protective sleeves on her arms to guard against pinching, scratching and biting. 'I was thinking of the students in the class, like, how do they feel about seeing their teachers in armour? I'm still in shock about it.'

Looks like public school education is pretty much over, simply being too dangerous for everyone concerned. When the multicult was being built, who could have seen this one coming like a bullet, so to speak? Still with robotics, fully armoured teachers, complete with mini guns and flame throwers may be able to restore some resemblance of order in the classrooms of the West. ***

LETTER TO THE EDITOR By Nigel Jackson

Controversy over the new classroom inclusivity guidelines published by the University of New South Wales needs to take account of several factors (2/7 "Uni puts ethnicity into study of science"). One is the need for science to be "race, religion and sex-blind", since "science is culture-free by definition", but this does not mean that the claim for science that it is "universal knowledge" can be supported. There is reason to believe that the fundamental outlook and methodology of science is limited, that there are other kinds of knowledge which are accessed by faculties other than the logical mind and reason on which science relies. Wollongong University archaeologist Richard Fullagar rightly points out that there is an overlap between science and indigenous knowledge, and that indigenous beliefs are often supported by scientific research. Other indigenous knowledge is more profound than that and relates to areas of experience and human faculties beyond the purview of science. One example is the "pointing the bone" ceremony and the "singing to death" of targeted individuals hundreds of miles away. Such knowledge is worthy of study, but not under the rubric of science. ***

SHOCKING CENSORSHIP! By “Jammers” Reed

It is one thing to censor us, as part of the process of exterminating people like me, like the insect life we are, but quite another that countries like Russia dare to censor the cream of liberal culture. It is simply shocking, and reason enough for Donald Trump, himself as progressive on this issue as anyone, to launch a full-scale nuclear attack on Putin, aiming right for his castle:

<https://www.foxnews.com/entertainment/>

elton-john-vladimir-putin-lgbtq-rocketman-censorship

“Elton John took to Twitter on Friday to respond to Russian President Vladimir Putin's recent interview with the Financial Times. In the interview, published on Thursday, Putin said Russia has ‘no problem with LGBT persons. ... Let everyone be happy,’ but John, 72, called Putin's words hypocritical since a Russian distributor censored LGBTQ-related scenes from ‘Rocketman,’ a film based on John's life and career. ‘Dear President Putin, I was deeply upset when I read your recent interview in The Financial Times,’ the ‘Tiny Dancer’ singer wrote. ‘I strongly disagree with your view that pursuing policies that embrace multicultural and sexual diversity are obsolete in our societies.’ He continued: ‘I find duplicity in your comment that you want LGBT people to ‘be happy’ and that ‘we have no problem in that’. Yet Russian distributors chose to heavily censor my film ‘Rocketman’ by removing all references to my finding true happiness through my 25-year relationship with [husband] David [Furnish] and the raising of my two beautiful sons. ‘This feels like hypocrisy to me,’ John added. ‘I am proud to live in a part of the world where our governments have evolved to recognise the universal human right to love whoever we want.’ The star went on to say he is “truly grateful for the advancement in government policies that have allowed and legally supported’ his marriage to Furnish, 56. Earlier this month, Russian gay rights activists and cultural figures criticized a local distributor of ‘Rocketman’ for censoring gay sex scenes within the movie. At the time, Russian news agencies reported that the distribution company said the scenes were cut to conform with Russian law, however, the Ministry of Culture said it was not involved in the decision. (In 2013, the country passed a law banning so-called propaganda supporting non-traditional sexuality from being made available to minors.) In response, John and the filmmakers released a joint statement that said: ‘The local distributor has edited out certain scenes, denying the audience the opportunity to see the film as it was intended, is a sad reflection of the divided world we still live in and how it can still be so cruelly unaccepting of the love between two people.’”

No doubt after the coming nuclear war between the US and the tag team of China and Russia, who are refusing to accept our enlightened Western liberal standards of everything, the entire world will become a happy globe of self-satisfied hedonistic consumers.

In the meantime, Elton can take consolation that his movie will probably still go well in much of Africa and the Middle East, even New Guinea, places much more enlightened than Putin’s Russia. Just watch this terrifying video of Vlad the lad in action, and feel the shame, the white guilt etc. Imagine saying that liberalism, an eternal philosophy has “outlived its purpose,” when its purpose was to destroy us!

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3FW21SWku5Q>

Putin: “One can criticize President Trump as much as they want for the wish to build a wall between Mexico and the US. Maybe that’s excessive, I don’t know. But he has to do something with the flow of migrants and drugs, doesn’t he? No one is doing anything. The liberal idea presupposed that nothing needs to be done. Migrants can kill, plunder, and rape with impunity because their rights as migrants must be protected. What rights? Every crime must have its punishment. So, the idea [of liberalism] has outlived itself and came into conflict with the interests of the overwhelming majority of the population.”

Maybe Australia could use section 18 C to control Putin? Maybe take away his Facebook page, or Twitter? What do you think, Zucky? ***

IT IS ONLY RIGHT TO PUT MIGRANTS, 1ST, 2ND & 3RD PLACE! By Richard Miller

It is the logic of Leftism and globalism, to give all priority to migrants, the replacement group. It is only logical. Thus, Sweden is moving in the right direction on the housing issue:

“A survey from the Swedish National Board of Housing, Building, and Planning has shown that while young people are struggling to find homes, half of the local governments give new migrants priority. The survey, which saw data gathered from 290 Swedish municipalities, highlighted the fact that young Swedes are having an increasingly difficult time finding housing with 230 saying they had a shortage for young people, Nyheter Idag reports. Fewer municipalities, 221, said they had a shortage of housing for new migrants, and 135 said they had given preference to new migrants for housing, compared to just 12 who said they had given young people priority for homes in their areas.”

The Darwinian consequences of this are that young native Swedes may become somewhat tougher, sleeping in the snow. ***

IS NASA SEXIST? By Mrs Vera West

That is the big question:

<https://www.dailymail.co.uk/sciencetech/article-7173125/Sperm-bank-set-space-study-suggests.html>

“Women could be sent in to space with a selection of sperm ready to populate other planets, researchers say, as they test the effects of zero-gravity on semen. Frozen sperm could be transported in to space to 'open the possibility of creating a human sperm bank outside of Earth', say researchers at the Dexeus women's health centre in Barcelona. This could mean male astronauts are replaced by all-women teams in order to reproduce while in space. But further work is needed in order to fully understand the effect of space conditions and different levels of gravity. Frozen samples exposed to micro gravity conditions

BIG SISTER SURVEILLANCE BY HEART BEAT By Brian Simpson

It is hard to keep up on how Big Sister is working to monitor us. Have you heard of heart beat surveillance? No? Well here is what you need to know:

https://www.shtfplan.com/headline-news/mass-surveillance-the-pentagon-can-now-identify-you-by-your-heartbeat-with-a-laser_06272019

“As if we aren't being tracked, recorded, and monitored enough, the Pentagon now has a laser that can identify a person by their heartbeat. Your heartbeat is going to be a lot harder to hide than your face... So, when is enough surveillance enough? Apparently, there's no line the government can cross that will rile up the masses. We've got facial recognition in airports and schools, cars that can be unlocked just by looking at them, technology that can detect a person's unique way of walking, and of course the ubiquitous fingerprint, used for everything from smartphones to event ticketing. Next on the agenda... Your heartbeat, according to an article written by Engadget. As MIT Technology Review reports, the Pentagon has developed a laser that can identify people from a distance by their heartbeat alone. The technology, known as Jetson, uses laser vibrometry to identify surface movement on the skin caused by a heartbeat, and it works from 200 meters away. Everyone's cardiac signature is unique, and unlike faces and fingerprints, it can't be altered in any way. As with facial recognition and other biometrics which rely on optimal conditions, though, Jetson does have a few challenges. It works through regular clothing such as a shirt, but not thicker garments, such as a winter coat. It also takes about 30 seconds to collect the necessary information, so right now it only works if the target is sitting or standing still. And, of course, its efficiency would also depend on some kind of cardiac database. Nonetheless, under the right conditions, Jetson has over 95 percent accuracy. –Engadget. ***

and those kept on the ground all seem to stay healthy, the researchers say. The study has been presented at the European Society of Human Reproduction and Embryology annual meeting in Vienna, Austria. It comes after NASA published a paper arguing single-sex crews are best for cohesion and women are more likely to be co-operative.”

This all goes contrary to the ruling ideology that 'diversity is our strength,' sexual equality and all that jazz. As for women-only crews being more cooperative than men, this runs contrary to an entire anthology dealing with male bonding, brotherhood and tribalism, and the well-known difficulty, that I covered in another article, about women cooperating with other women, on earth. ***

INVASIVE SPECIES ATTACK! By Brian Simpson

At first it begins with the migration into new spaces by a few, then, slowly, increasing numbers. Local insects may at first be mildly concerned, but soon it is a battle for existing food resources, which the invaders can more effectively utilise. Over time, natural selection works its magic, and the populations change, by demographic displacement:

<https://www.dailystar.co.uk/news/latest-news/786417/>

britain-asian-hornets-killer-human-sting-fatal-venom-nests-channel-islands

“BRITAIN is braced for an invasion of “killer” Asian Hornets as 80 queens have already been found in the UK. The insects – which can grow up to 1.6 inches – have powerful stings which can be fatal to humans with just a single strike if the person is allergic. Record numbers of nests have been found on Jersey as there are fears they will move onto the mainland. The fight is on-going on the Channel Island and is seen as a crucial battle-ground to stop the spread. Just one of the foreign menaces can eat up to 50 bees a day and their impact on honey production could be devastating.”

Along with colony collapse disorder, the life of bees, and human food production could be numbered. ***
