THOUGHT OF THE WEEK: There can be few people who have given sober and unbiased consideration to the state of the world without reaching a reasonably sound apprehension of the root cause of its parlous plight. It is not in any one thing in itself, such as industrialism or even finance as a device. It is the devilish ingenuity which is applied to each and all of these, the perversion of good ideas to bad uses, the misrepresentation of information in itself beneficial or harmless, in short, the real, conscious wickedness which governs our affairs to which we have to look. That is why it is absolutely vital to clear our minds of cant (slang or jargon). It is not in the opinions of the majority that policy is formed today, and it is not by attempting to change the Cahmon ('common' with American slang emphasis) Man and forming him into a Party that salvation can conceivably come because it is not in the Cahmon Man that the wickedness is conscious. The Cahmon Man is just average, and just average is not good enough in what it takes to battle with uncommon, conscious, Incarnated Wickedness.

'Know your enemy' is the first axiom of survival, and your Enemy's first concern is to divert your attention in the wrong direction, and his second, to make you work and fight for your own undoing.

Bearing all this in mind, it is easy to understand that the drive for "Full Employment", "More Exports", "Work or Starve" means one of two things and can mean nothing else. Either it is a preparation for war camouflaged under recapitalisation (new tools, etc.) or it is a threat of war if the perversion of industrialism is not pursued in this country for the benefit of the . . . States. There are no other alternatives; considered in vacuo, the policy is so insane that only a diseased imagination in delirium tremens would contemplate it with a moment's complacency. As to war, not the merest fraction of the world's peoples desire it, or even now are conscious of what it implies; and if it comes, it will be because we have not localised and obliterated that mysterious little body of men to whom Rathenau referred as the three hundred who rule the world, and appoint their successors.

THE GREAT RESET

from: <https://www.thinkinghousewife.com/2020/06/the-great-reset/#more-120898>

The website of the World Economic Forum (WEF) is truly a motherlode of information about the vast social and economic changes that are now being "operationalized."

If you want powerful evidence that this (northern hemisphere's) winter's outbreak of a strong seasonal flu, billed as a catastrophic, world-changing pandemic, was a pretext for implementing a whole new level of global governance — a system planned well in advance — go to the website's "Covid Action Platform."

I guarantee you, spending a bit of time here will enlighten you. But please bear in mind that the Covid Action Platform was already in place in January. This powerful coalition of private and public leaders based in Davos, Switzerland has obviously been working on this plan for years.

"What they had to do is bring the whole world to a standstill so they could inject the global governance," says Celeste Solum, who has studied the WEF plan. "It will be titrated out a little bit . . . but we are on the fast track of global governance right now." The purpose of the plan is "to galvanize the business community" to follow the plan.

Global governance is a means to manage issues that cut across national borders — whether it is a pandemic, financial crisis, or geo-economic dispute. Though traditionally centred on diplomacy and international organizations, a wide variety of public and private actors now engage in cross-border governance — and the work itself has expanded beyond treaty-making to include formal and informal monitoring, enforcement, and financing. Effective governance is essential to secure peaceful, healthy, and prosperous societies, particularly now amid the COVID-19 outbreak and widespread nationalist backlash against globalization...

OUR SHAM DEMOCRACY By James Guthrie

Extract:

What people do depends upon what they think about things, and it is cheaper and more effective to make people believe that heavy taxes are necessary than to collect taxes by means of brute force. Ideas, therefore, are powerful, and that is why only men with certain chosen ideas are selected to speak regularly over the National Broadcasting Stations. Most of the population is not seriously interested in politics.

A large section of the male population of the city accepts little responsibility, even in their own domestic affairs; all their problems are handed to someone else to solve. Only the women and a small percentage of the male population are experienced in the acceptance of responsibility. Yet society is organised on the basis of this acceptance; this can easily be seen in any workshop, union, or home.

Faced with a crisis or a problem, the majority say: "What are THEY going to do about it?" and wait to see. The responsible minority say: "What can I do about it?" and then do it.

In the latter case the link between thought and action is born of self-assurance, and has become automatic through use. These are the men on whom, instinctively, all rely.

In a political crisis, the members of each little group go to their active member for advice and guidance. They probably have not the slightest idea what all the bother is about; Bill, the foreman, knows, so they ask Bill. And what Bill says goes. It is a matter of trust and integrity—Bill's integrity established over a good many years. So that, given the facts, and a fair chance to discuss and decide the matter, public opinion will be largely the result of what responsible men think — what Bill thinks.

Political propaganda is designed to confuse Bill so that he is not sure where he is. If the scale of political problems can be enlarged so that they concern vast multitudes, and if the power of decision can be taken away from Bill's locality, then taken away from his State to Canberra, and then from Canberra to Washington, Bill, and everybody else, is in complete confusion, Bill doesn't know where he is.

If, on the top of that, you can confuse him with talks about Russia (which Bill has never seen, nor is likely to see), and swamp him with books on dialectical materialism and other pseudo-scientific nonsense, then

Bill begins to feel that the world he knew has passed away. The link between thought and action has been severed; the forces of evil have captured the fortress. That is why it is so desperately necessary that we should control as much as possible our own lives locally.

Everywhere the "internationalists" have been the enemies of society.

Government

However strong may be the sinister (supra)-national forces putting pressure on governments, and however reluctant those governments may be to impose alien policies on the people, the fact remains that party governments everywhere are doing the work of the devil, and are being used to enslave entire populations.

Wars, depressions, the destruction of wealth, and the ever-increasing taxes are the direct results of government actions; and the constant and ruthless attack on the freedom and security of the individual appears to be the main objective of most governmental bodies. We have got to realise, therefore, that, as governments are elected and controlled today, they constitute the greatest menace facing mankind, and no realistic political action is possible until the nature of this menace is understood.

"Power corrupts, and absolute power corrupts absolutely," and the power taken from millions of people and placed in the hands of a few men has been a source of tremendous evil which has permeated society from top to bottom and caused the breakdown of effective resistance to wholesale corruption.

Large modern governments are essentially evil things, and the larger they become the more evil they become. Governments may be an essential evil, but they are not nearly so essential as continuous propaganda would make us believe. It is interesting to notice too that no man receives any publicity who does not advocate more power being given to governments.

Centuries of hard fighting have gone into the production of the "Common Law," the legal structure which our fathers built to protect the people against the arbitrary acts of rulers drunk with power. Through the acts of governments, very little of the common law remains effective, and today the common man is almost helpless when he is victimised by a government official. Everything that can be done to strip the ordinary man of power to protect himself is being done now by "your" government.

FIRST THINGS FIRST By Arnis Luks

When considering even two people coming together in agreement, it must be on the basis of mutual love and cooperation freely entered into. So it is with a community, a city or a nation. Mutual love and cooperation are conducive to the good working of that civil relationship - civilisation.

The modern world is, in the dictum of communism, going through a period of normalisation. That is: there is enormous manoeuvring going on for positions of power. This manoeuvring, while intimidating, is also an opportunity for significant cultural re-development. We have witnessed the demise of representative government, of parliament as an institution for representation, and law as to holding any ethical code whatsoever.

The COVID-19 lock-down was by proclamation, an edict, not reasoned debate using inductive science. The narrative essentially turned the world on its head. Infectious disease isolation was replaced with house arrest of the entire nation.

Our elite class have failed us badly. We must now consider what resources we do have in order to recover this lost ground of freedom.

Nearly all of the encroachment and dismantling of our civilisation are in the minds of man. The thoughts of the individual are centred around the narratives coming from the handmaiden of finance - the mainstream media, which includes the press, the pulpit and the platform.

THE WEAPON TO HAND extracts from The Tragedy of Human Effort By CH Douglas

Notes for the address delivered at the Central Hall, Liverpool, on October 30th, 1936.

...First, we have to know how to bring into our consciousness what sort of a world we want, and to realise that we alone can get it, not in detail, but in objective; and I might say at once that there is not one person in this room who is secure in the world that he now has.

In my opinion, we want, first of all, security in what we have, freedom of action, thought, and speech, and a more abundant life for all. Every one of these is possible, and everyone of them in the present state of progress of the world can be reduced to the possession of more purchasing power, so that it is not too much to say, even though it may sound banal, that the first objective of a democracy should be a national dividend.

A second aspect of the problem has been clarified by the courageous utterance of the Lord Chief Justice, Lord Hewart, in his objections to the encroachments of bureaucracy. If I may restate them – the business of bureaucracy is to get us what we want, not to annoy and hinder us by taking from us by taxation and irritating restrictions those facilities which we otherwise should have.

Thirdly, and most important, we have to obtain control of the forces of the Crown by genuine political democracy...

.....We of the official Social Credit Movement are concentrating upon this problem of devising a mechanism, to enable the individuals who comprise the public to impose their policy on the organisations which have no sound reason for existence other than the will of the people. We have organised a device known as the Electoral Campaign, to obtain a demand, backed by a sufficient number of votes, that every Member of Parliament shall regard himself as the spokesman of the policy of his constituents, rather than as an expert elected for the purpose of managing the business of the country.

In order to de-construct this mesmerisation will require an act of personal will. Deliberate effort on the part of a sufficient number of individuals will be able to turn the tide of civilisational collapse. This begins from within, as Solzhenitsyn stated after reviewing the tragedy of Russia since the 1917 Bolshevik revolution.

The League has amassed a vast array of resources, readily available for those willing to pursue freedom. From books, pamphlets and brochures, to audio tapes, film, to web archives and more recently weekly video and podcast forums. We can also provide a complete set of DVDs of our entire collection of PDF archives and other important documents to be placed onto your own computer with a desktop search facility for personal research opportunities. Will you turn towards the light?

The Electoral Campaign is a means and not an end. The end is, in general, the putting of the expert in his proper place, and, in particular and only as a beginning, the distribution of a National Dividend. Any other means which will produce the same results in a shorter time will be utilised. So far, no such means have been suggested.

There is, in Liverpool, an organisation which deals with this matter, as in fact there are organisations all over the world, and all of them are acting on these lines and are affiliated to the Social Credit Secretariat.

Personally, I have no doubt whatever that if the policy which I have outlined were pursued by every voter through the mechanism which is provided, with one-tenth the energy which is put by the average individual into his favourite game, the whole outlook of the world would be changed within twelve months' time. I am equally convinced that if control of policy is left in the hands of bankers and industrialists with their present mentality, while at the same time parties, organizations, and individuals wrangle about means, a world catastrophe is a mathematical certainty within a few years.

Neither I nor any other individual can help you if you will not help yourselves, and neither I nor any other individual who has endeavoured to arouse you to a sense of responsibility can take that responsibility from you. You are responsible for the poverty, grinding taxation, insecurity and threat of war. Yours is the responsibility, yours can be the power. Will you, individually and collectively, assume the responsibility and the power?

If not, there is no legitimate ground for hope. ***

IN PRAISE OF SATURATED FATS By Mrs Vera West

Here is a paper just published on saturated fats and cardio-vascular health, finding that reducing the intake of saturated fats, does not impact upon cardiovascular health:

<https://www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/pii/S0735109720356874>

“The recommendation to limit dietary saturated fatty acid (SFA) intake has persisted despite mounting evidence to the contrary. Most recent meta-analyses of randomized trials and observational studies found no beneficial effects of reducing SFA intake on cardiovascular disease (CVD) and total mortality, and instead found protective effects against stroke. Although SFAs increase low-density lipoprotein (LDL)-cholesterol, in most individuals, this is not due to increasing levels of small, dense LDL particles, but rather larger LDL which are much less strongly related to CVD risk. It is also apparent that the health effects of foods cannot be predicted by their content in any nutrient group, without considering

THE FALL IN INFANT MORTALITY DURING THE CORONA FREAK-OUT

By Mrs Vera West

Critics of vaccination have argued that the fall in mortality from diseases such as smallpox occurred through public health measures, long before vaccines were developed. Who would have thought that a modern version of this classic anti-vaxx argument would pop up now, right in the corona madness?

<https://www.naturalnews.com/2020-06-23-infant-vaccination-rates-plummeted-lockdown-mortality.html>

“Vaccines are praised as the golden standard for saving millions of lives worldwide. That’s the promise that we are led to believe as parents ritualistically submit their infant sons and daughters to a cornucopia of state-sanctioned injections. Well-baby visits are designed to introduce up to 26 liability-free vaccinations in the baby’s first year of life, during six or more visits to a pediatrician.

However, during the covid-19 lockdowns, well-baby visits were cancelled and vaccination rates plummeted as a result. More parents stayed home, nursed their babies, watched them closely, and kept them away from pediatricians.

When the national emergency order was declared, provider orders for routine pediatric vaccines dropped significantly. The Vaccines for Children Program and the Vaccine Safety Data link reported a drop-off in vaccination coverage starting in the third week of March, as hundreds of thousands of parents stayed home and skipped well-baby visits. The downward trend was observed from March 23rd to the end of April for all non-influenza vaccines, especially the overall macronutrient distribution. Whole-fat dairy, unprocessed meat, eggs and dark chocolate are SFA-rich foods with a complex matrix that are not associated with increased risk of CVD. The totality of available evidence does not support further limiting the intake of such foods.”

The body simply needs its supply of fats. What it does not need is refined carbohydrates, in the form of sugar and sweets, which is the real reason there is a diabetes and obesity crisis. People before World War II consumed fats like dairy, butter, milk and bacon, and were not dropping dead from heart disease and diabetes.

<http://www.actiononsugar.org/sugar-and-health/sugar-and-obesity/>

The Gary Taubes’ book has a sugar noose on the cover, which may trigger some delicate snowflakes, or is it “racist” to use sugar imagery now, sugar being white, usually?

measles-containing vaccines.

If vaccines are so important for an infant to live, then why didn’t the infant death rate dramatically increase as vaccination coverage fell? The data shows that the opposite effect occurred; infant deaths actually plummeted to historic lows! In the U.S., infant mortality occurs at roughly 700 babies per week. This trend of infant death and sacrifice remained steady from 2014 to 2019. In 2020, this all changed. From early March to mid-April, infant deaths fell by 30 percent on average each week! Throughout April and into mid May, the infant mortality rate had declined to 500 on average per week.”

Food for thought, indeed, but there will be no explanation coming from the Big Pharma establishment, only a big needle full of goo. ***
