The Most Dangerous Idea in Human History By Arnis Luks	1

Thought for the Week: Matthew 10:38-39 And he that taketh not up his cross, and followeth me, is not worthy of me. He that findeth his life, shall lose it: and he that shall lose his life for me, shall find it.
Luke 9:23-24 And he said to all: If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life, shall lose it; for he that shall lose his life for my sake, shall save it.

THE MOST DANGEROUS IDEA IN HUMAN HISTORY By Arnis Luks

Betty Luks wrote...I watched Mel Gibson's film version of The Passion this Good Friday, listened to The Hallelujah Chorus and was reminded of a Youtube discussion between Jordan B. Peterson and Iain McGilchrist. They were questioning why God allowed evil to exist in the world, followed by another question: "Taking into account human nature and the quality of living: do you make people safe or strong?" And remember, we are Human Beings! It was decided strong is better than safe. Safe might not be commensurate with Being.

Our existence is predicated (based in logic) on the fact that we die. Our existence is never safe and we are bounded by the fact that we die. The Passion showed me clearly Life is predicated on Death! I realised that many of the great artists have grasped this truth and the story of The Passion bears it out very well. Solzhenitsyn saw this truth, which is portrayed in the series of essays from he and other writers penned in "From Under the Rubble". From Under the Rubble, the ruins, the debris of Death and Destruction, whether physical or spiritual, springs forth New Life, in this case 'Green Shoots'.

And what of music? Peterson and McGilchrist continue, "that is why music is so wonderful". Peterson spoke of Music as Representing the ultimate Reality of the Cosmos. But McGilchrist thought that: God Is, not only in the Process of Becoming, but IS Becoming, and as for Music: "When we are in the presence of music Something is Coming Into Being that is at the core of the whole Cosmic Process". First we must grasp that God didn't just 'wind up' creation like a mechanical clock and let it run on its own (course). Oh no! There are no Things, there are Processes and Patterns. Everything flows, it is just a matter of the time period you are considering.

So my thought for this Holy Season. He is Risen. He is Risen Indeed!...end

AJL...Last week I mentioned the Communist origins of the establishment of the United Nations. I came across a booklet by David Thompson titled "The Human Rights Swindle" which further reinforced these origins and purpose of the UN.

There are two separate and distinct foundations upon which law is based. Roman, or civil law is an imposition by the state, originating within the minds of those in power. <https://www.law.berkeley.edu/wp-content/uploads/2019/08/romanlaw.pdf>

The Common, or English law, has been an evolutionary development of understanding and precedents towards the natural law (that which works best) attributing its origins within the fount of all - God.

The Judges and Barristers within a court proceedings wear a Wig. This denotes wisdom, even inspiration from God Himself - Solomon. This comparison draws the question of legal philosophy which may be better understood as the different expressions between Humanism and Trinitarian Christianity. Man as supreme, or God is supreme.

The establishment within the United Nations of the Human Rights Commission adjudicates Rights emanating from the man-controlled world state. This model in this modern era found expression within the Marxist-Leninist system flowing towards the Soviet and satellites, including China – "we know you are guilty; we are just here to decide the punishment". Today, this model is found more and more within once-were-Christian Western nations.

The Human Rights Swindle By David Thompson https://alor.org/Storage/Library/PDF/Thompson_D-The_Human_Rights_Swindle.pdf

David Thompson finds development of the origin of these 'Rights' within New Zealand, Australia and Canadian human rights commissions as a further emanation of the Soviet system. Whereas, common-law rights are defined within the parameters of what 'should not be done', similar to setting the road rules. Once these (road) rules are established you are free to move about wherever, whenever and however you choose.

Law is set to a minimum.

Christ announced the law and the prophets within only two phrases - to love the Lord with all your heart, mind, soul and body - and also to love your neighbour as yourself. The Sermon on the Mount builds on from this establishment as to the Kingdom Within.

The imposition of medical passports (papers please), movement monitoring and state surveillance are foreign to the once-free Christian West. Also these things were found more readily within various expressions of totalitarianism. The National Socialist and Marxist Socialist are both legislated philosophical expressions of the supremacy of the state. Little wonder that no sooner had the 1983 Franklin Dam High Court decision been announced, High Court Justice Lionel Murphy was awarded the "humanist of the year" award.

Australia became one of the First Nations to ratify the UNESCO World Heritage Convention in 1974. Subsequently the Gordon-below-Franklin area was listed as a World Heritage site. Former PM Fraser's Attorney General Bob Ellicot QC went on to represent the state of Tasmania against the Commonwealth of Australia in the 1983 High Court Franklin Dam case.

We are experiencing the deliberate re-alignment of the once-free world with the Soviet system through the United Nations' various branches, bodies and of course; External Affairs Treaties.

Comrade Mabo Emerges from the Red Closet

<https://quadrant.org.au/opinion/qed/2022/03/comrade-mabo-emerges-from-the-red-closet/>

Recently an article was produced in Quadrant "Comrade Mabo Emerges from the Red Closet". The card-carrying affiliations of Eddie Mabo are consistent with the writings of Geoff McDonald "Red Over Black" and "The Evidence", available through our online bookstore. The communist origins of the aboriginal land rights movement, and more recently the (Indigenous) "Voice" movement reinforce the swindle of our Christian heritage towards this utopian one world government.

Having a race-based 'voice' above our Westminster system of government becomes reverse apartheid, in that non-aboriginal are disenfranchised by this selective voice. Having an homologous people does not suit the one worlders' purposes.

The modern nomadic aboriginal displaced at least two other aboriginal peoples prior to the 1788 colonisation. This (f)actual history is another attempt to be placed down the memory hole.

What if the First Humans Came from Australia, Not Africa? The Myth of the Aborigines as a First People

by Brian Simpson

<https://blog.alor.org/what-if-the-first-humans-came-from-australia-not-africa-the-myth-of-the-aborigines-as-a-first-people-by-brian-simpson>

Nomadic aboriginal societal arrangements differ from the European. Children are raised more by the (tribal) community rather than the parents. The family structure, as reinforced in the movie "10 canoes", is not necessarily monogamous. Further, inter-tribal rivalries at times were quite violent.

Cape York: The Savage Frontier by Rodney Liddell

This is not unique to the Australian aborigine.

Unrestrained Slaughter-The Maori Musket Wars 1800-1840

by John Robinson depicted inter-tribal wars resulting in losses as high as 30% of the Maori population. The Maori inter-tribal peace finally came with the unification of the Maori under the Crown and Treaty of Waitangi. We see these same levels of violence exercised at least twice last century across Europe, former Yugoslavia, the Middle East and Ukraine by the civilised West!

Compensation and Indigenous Corruption

<https://quadrant.org.au/magazine/2022/03/compensation-and-indigenous-corruption/>

The stolen generation narrative presents an imbalanced perspective of the interaction between the two cultures. Without an appreciation of the traditional western family and the nomadic aboriginal tribal community, there can be no realistic assessment of the right nor wrong of each individual case where a child was accommodated. Part may have been based on the direct welfare interests of the child. Part may have been to more readily assimilate the child into Australian society. The question of blanket compensation is fraught with error and subliminally places collective guilt onto Australia's non-indigenous peoples with little appreciation of this cultural variation and unique circumstances for each child.

Money will not remedy the inconsistency between the nomadic aboriginal culture and the Western European culture, but as with any disadvantaged peoples, education and opportunity for personal development, whilst promoting assimilation to produce an homologous society will be of benefit for all.

Using the current Apartheid policy of maintaining separate development within the aboriginal missions, has done little or none, any good. This is the end objective; to deliberately hold the aboriginal down while also disenfranchising the non-aboriginal to set up a separate communist (called aboriginal, but brutally communist) nation within our borders. Eddy Mabo was not the exception to this communistic influence, but rather the rule as Geoff MacDonald has explained and substantiated by his written record Red Over Black and The Evidence. These High Court decisions - Franklin Dam 1983; Mabo 1992; Wik 1996; have each altered and weakened our constitutional arrangements to the detriment of all.

Both major political parties are committed to pursue this line of establishing a voice above parliament against an homologous people to align with world government policy. The Greens wishing to go even further. But who of so great a font of wisdom would sit in this elite chamber above government? Will this voice provide a better result, a better method of governing? This policy would promote a branch of unelected elites having sway over our already corrupted parliamentary system. One-vote one-value will therefore go out the window. Has this model been shown to work superior to the Westminster system developed across a thousand years? Or is it just a utopian concept not founded upon demonstrable reality.

Climate Action

I needed to consider this article in light of another article of equal importance about the former merchant banker and now Archbishop for the Anglican Communion here:

Welby's Church of England 2021: £Trillions for Gaia

The first consideration towards any view of climate has to be the observable world. Is the weather changing significantly, or is it still within normal parameters? Looking at this guest post on JoNova's website shows the solar cycle 25 (270 years of records) is running within historical parameters. No sunspot activity surprises here. If anything, the earth is cooling - slowly across the past 3 solar-cycles.

Experts Adrift: Solar Cycle 25 more active than expected

https://joannenova.com.au/2022/04/

experts-adrift-solar-cycle-25-already-twice-as-active-as-expected/

If the observable and measured weather shows a steady cycle why all the hype? It all comes down to profit and motive.

Profit motive is revealed here and the Welby article:

The Dark Side of Wind and Solar Power

<https://joannenova.com.au/wp-content/Environment-Destruction-The-Dark-Side-of-Renewable-Energy-1.pdf>

Motive, which is well past profit, is revealed within the pursuit of world power exercised through the public private partnerships called the United Nations and all UN's ancillaries. Without the propaganda of a climate emergency there is no justification for Agenda 21, Agenda 2030, the Great Reset, covid 19 or anything else. This is all about empire - world power by another name.

Carbon Sequestration

The pumping of CO² into 'no-longer-used-wells' for storage, or into oil producing wells to enhance oil recovery EOR (for refining) uses additional energy for the necessary infrastructure (with the production of further CO²). They receive a dual financial advantage; in the CO² pumping achieves a carbon-credit as also does the enhanced oil recovery EOR with increased oil production. A double win for some. Let us not go into nuclear as the end result is a toxic waste no one in their right mind wants to put into their own back yard.

The total CO² generated by this environmental model is increased in two distinct ways; by the extraction, refining, manufacture, transportation, installation, maintenance, decommissioning and remediation of power generation by CO² saving devices, and then the extraction, refining, manufacture, transportation, installation, maintenance, decommissioning and remediation of pumping equipment for CO² from high CO² emitters into the unused or EOR wells. This policy is pursued for financial gain, rather than let nature take its course with CO² sequestration into the soil by sustainable agricultural practices such as organics, biodynamics and permaculture farming practices.

In this climate model is the land of voodoo - hopes and wishes with no practical result. The total CO² produced during the full life cycle of this model is not readily scrutinised. A lot of papers but no raw data out in the open. A bit like the hockey stick of global warming fame - disproved in courts. Putin's policy of limiting fertiliser exports (another massive CO² producer) may cause a revival by our farmers towards organics, biodynamics and permaculture work practices instead of chemical fertilisers. In my view, this would not necessarily be a catastrophe. I have long held the view that the increasing CO² in the atmosphere is compounded by chemical farming practices more so than supposedly greenhouse gases. The loss of humus through chemical farming releases CO² from the soil. Don't dare point the bone at big-Ag or big-Pharma. People will believe anything provided it comes through the box.

Statistics are readily used to advance a cause. Power generation, for example costs a certain amount from each emitter. Solar and Wind receive a subsidy to manufacture power, but are only readily available for power generation 15% on average per 24 hour day. Increasing this equipment volume by 6 or 7 times will not alter that number as the sun only shines on one side of the earth at a time, and the wind may not blow at all for days. More fans and panels does not equate with more power unless you can factor in battery or hydro. Battery is prohibitive for round the clock supply, however hydro, although less energy efficient <==>, but can be stored for later use, so the 6 or 7 multiple may be realistic. The extraction, refining, manufacture, transportation, installation, maintenance, decommissioning and remediation costs all come from the suffering public purse, and each stage causes further CO² emissions to take into account of the total CO² footprint. There is no snapshot answer to this environmental question, but must begin with 'where and how much' power needs to be supplied?

For a Prototype Think Local

Looking at solar to our home for instance: a set of panels, inverter with battery backup to cover cloud free days and nights may be more practical if some power circuits were taken completely off grid. This may be more energy-and-financially-efficient than sending unused power with a very low tariff back into the grid. Fridges, washing machines, hotplates and stoves used mostly during the day would make ideal circuits to consider to maximise return on investment. Just measuring across the meter is a biased calculation when splitting the circuits may be financially more viable. This model also provides a line of food security during power outages. Don't tell me that won't come - it is already on the way. Klaus is making sure of that and your governments (whatever persuasion) have both been running down power generation facilities for 20+ years.

Solar is only one consideration. I also have several generators in the shed to cover most short-term circumstances. I ran two during an extended power outage to cover food security and the internet/computers for broadcasting. It worked for 4-6 hours OK with extension leads. The limiting factor here is fuel (petrol = one tank = 9 hours running) and noise pollution during the running. For the long term I could direct exhaust gases into a water pit to muffle the noise.

Let's be honest. The CO² emitted, is not a considered factor once the power supply goes off. Up till then this discussion is hypothetical and emissions will go out the window to ensure food security. If the sun doesn't shine and the wind doesn't blow I still need power to ensure continuity of supply to protect my food storage.

A Real Voice

Solzhenitsyn warned that even a perfect political system will not save a people who have atrophied their spiritual roots through decadence of one sort or another.

'Under The Rubble' shows that even in our political 'system of lies' which we are especially experiencing this past two years; spiritual regeneration can occur when enough determined individuals who are prepared to forgo their own desires and overcome adversities for a greater calling. The necessary regeneration of our political institutions must begin with self.

Peter Hitchens deduced the most dangerous idea ever expressed was of the resurrection. The individual must then accept their own rebirth after 'death of self'. This revelation of truth is sufficient to change the world.

UAP Clive Palmer's proposal to place a tariff onto iron ore is short sighted. This policy responds to the fact Australia has a debt problem from which it is having difficulty extricating itself. This tariff places that burden of debt onto the importing nations. China has recently increased import tariffs of 107-200% to our $1.2B wine industry : that two can easily play that game should it suit. The Trans Pacific Partnership trade agreement will also have something to say about their industry losses being adjudicated through world trade courts. This will not end well for Australia as sanctions against Russia have recently demonstrated, nor resolve the issue of irredeemable debt caused by the fraudulent financial system. UAP and all other political parties will never get to the root of the fraudulent financial system since each relies on the banks, as that power, that each bends their knee to. Our Constitution gives the authority to the Federal Government for financial matters 'except state banking'. The states would do well, now that COAG has been disbanded in favour of the National Cabinet, to initiate their own state bank as was prior to the deliberate bankrupting of each state bank to remove self reliance one further step away from the Australian people. These things do not occur by accident. They all occurred as an integral part of long term planning towards world government : as bipartisan party policy to the great reset.

BASIC FUND - To all supporters.

The League does not call on its supporters very often, but you will recognise the good work done in getting the journals out in the community every week for the Target and monthly for the NTSurvey. External pressure on everyone during the last two years of Covid and the consequent restrictions has made things more difficult. However, the team at HQ have carried on magnificently with scarcely a beat being missed. The Forums by video link across the world have continued as has the daily blog featuring global events. We might be a lonely voice but that shows even more how important the work is and it requires your financial support. We thank those who have recently sent donations without needing a reminder, but for other readers we make a special appeal for funds to continue the work of Eric Butler and Jeremy Lee.
