Our Modern Dark-Ages By Arnis Luks	1
The Language of Control By Neville Archibald	3

Thought for the Week: One of the curious, not to say sinister, features of the current period is the prevalence of that form of Black Magic which consists in saying and affirming that evil does not exist. With the decline of institutional Christianity, a decline by no means inexcusable, even if regrettable, a myriad of "interpretations", most of them perversions of Gnosticism or Neo-Platonism, have invaded the more or less swept and garnished chambers of the public mind. Christian Science is perhaps the best known and most widely distributed, although it would be straining the meanings of words to term it non-institutional. The non-existence of Evil appears to be one of its teachings.

May we say at once that a great deal of valuable instruction, and much help and comfort have been disseminated by the Christian Science organisation, and its activities in many directions command real respect? One of its outstanding achievements is the production of perhaps the most popular "Centre" newspaper in the English language, the Christian Science Monitor, widely read on its merits by many people who would not accept, and in many cases are not interested in, its metaphysics. Yet they probably absorb the atmosphere unconsciously. Nevertheless and notwithstanding, the Devil never did a cleverer piece of work than when he persuaded his victims that he does not exist.

The proofs of it are everywhere. The growing inability to distinguish good from evil, with its corollary that nothing matters, there are no objectives except the whim of the moment (and the whims themselves are giving out), no absolute values; nothing is "proper", therefore there is no property; that since it is now much easier (temporarily) to vote yourself into your neighbour's house than to build one for yourself, work is foolish and politics without preparation is the universal career. These are the logical outcome of a crude monotheism.

The combined inability and unwillingness of so many of the pseudo-educated, firstly to recognise the wave of Evil which is sweeping the world, and secondly to realise the extent to which its Servants rely upon absence of publicity and criticism is a major factor in the spiritual Armageddon which is in progress.

It is becoming increasingly true that only one metaphysic, dialectical materialism, is presented, in various forms, to a conditioned majority: (nothing could be more remarkable, outside a Russian "Trial", than the acceptance of responsibility for the present chaos by those who are the greatest sufferers by it). Good and evil have no place in this; Power is Lord of all. The denial of evil is an affirmation of equality — having no quality. This is the end of entropy unmodified — Power which renders itself powerless.

OUR MODERN DARK-AGES By Arnis Luks

This past week I managed to finally locate our remaining three books of the McGuffey's Eclectic Readers for home schoolers. There are six in the original series. Produced in 1836 by William and Alexander McGuffey, Professor William McGuffey was teaching at the Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. The Readers emphasized spelling, vocabulary, and formal public speaking, which was a more common requirement in 19th-century America.

The back story behind all education is of equal import to the content. What is it that education is commissioned to achieve? Simply to produce workers for a state factory - automatons, or is it more appropriate to ensure the individual achieves the necessary skills to open the world of further learning across their entire lifetime? I believe the latter is the proper consideration for all forms of education.

A Consolidated Perspective

This past week I received a book from a person I have never personally met. They thought, correctly I believe, that I was one of the few who would appreciate the scholastic content of this tome. I was busy at the time it arrived and so placed it near my usual work area. I sent an email thanking the person for their thoughtful gift and, after several days finally set time aside to have a look at its content. This work was of profound importance, and I immediately allocated several days to examine the first major stanza of the nearly 800 page volume.

While the content was somewhat familiar to the many books I have previously read, events and policy being placed in correct chronology and category it revealed an entirely fresh perspective to my thinking.

If I hadn't been researching what I had for these past years, I would not have been ready to receive this scholastic work and appreciate it for its depth and enlightenment. I wouldn't have been ready. It provided for the next stage of my ongoing personal development. I haven't finished learning. Perhaps only now graduating from milk onto solid food.

Coincidentally, our online bookstore is achieving unprecedented sales of books on timely issues, where people's eyes are being opened to things that previously remained, at best obscure and of little personal interest, but now coming into the light. The darker it becomes the more apparent is the light - the light of Truth.

We have been living through a modern-dark-ages of where propaganda has so mesmerised our world-view, that Truth is difficult to unravel or reveal. Very little of what we believe as truth, is based on fact. Most information is simply a creature of vested interests imposing their 'explanations' upon the world to protect and enhance their own vested interests. MI5 is intelligence gathering, and MI6 is counter-intelligence transmission. MI6 is present within the MSM, Seminaries and Universities as counter-intelligence – infliction of a 'non-real world-view' onto an unsuspecting public.

The Conversations That Must Be Entered Into (...continued)

These past four days I have been reading an explanation of world events, for perhaps millennia. The pursuit of world domination is not new. What is new is that the hidden hand behind this pursuit of world power is coming to the fore – out into the open.

The Jewish question as a conversation, must be entered into if we are to appreciate the differing levels of power with obscuration, and the suffering of all peoples because of this pursuit for World Dominion. Diverse writers from many backgrounds have previously placed their thoughts into the public record, and it is from these points of public reference that we can build a correct picture of the structure for this pursuit of World Dominion.

Differing Philosophies

Christianity insists that the individual is superior and the group inferior - the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath. The kingdom of God is within. Render unto Caesar (only) those things that belong to Caesar, but unto God those things that (rightfully) belong to God. While government is instituted and legitimised, it is a minority. The Christian calling or unction is to render all unto God – with all your heart, soul, mind and body. Predestination is an anathema to free will. From my perspective, the reformation was developed to render the Truth ineffective, in spite of the Roman Churches many failings. Whereas 'isms' of other creeds is that the individual is nothing and the group is everything. As such, the (generally self-appointed) leadership of the group directs events or policy for the benefit of the 'group objective' - sometimes called majority.

Zionism was the pursuit of a Jewish homeland, if necessary at the expense and suffering of Jews. The Zionists were quite willing to collaborate with the Nazi policy of Jewish emigration, but specifically only to Palestine during the 1930s. Both Uganda and Madagascar were offered as alternatives to Palestine for the establishment of the Jewish homeland. Jews, who wished to remain in Germany or emigrate elsewhere, as Germans rather than Jews, were compelled by the Zionists, even by acts of terror, to reconsider their position to emigrate to Palestine. Establishing a homeland in Palestine was the group policy (Zionism) rather than what the individual Jew may have wished.

Palestinian history was denied and/or disregarded, even though their Semitic origins were in the historical record. Emigration of Jews to Palestine was openly accommodated by both the Bolsheviks and the Nazis. The Zionist policy of establishing a Jewish homeland in Palestine, provided the population from predominantly Ashkenazi people who are not Semites at all. The anti-Semitic smear remains the psychological-leverage to silence any open discussion of the facts on the ground.

Dialectical Policy

Zionism needs anti-Semitism to legitimise their policy of the displacement of the original peoples, the Palestinians with predominantly Ashkenazi people. Hamas is a Zionist creation, promoting violence against the Jews to legitimise the pogrom against the Palestinians. Any other Palestinian voice is ignored.

None of what I'm saying is new. It's there in the historical record for those who wish to seek this out. Propaganda against these important subjects is directed towards intimidation of those who would choose to search for Truth. Labels and trigger words are simply the psychological battering rams to maintain silence on subjects that must never be broached. However, if we are to understand the perilous state of the world, these subjects must be unpacked.

The pursuit of group policy is at the expense of the individual. Suffering, or collateral damage of the long-suffering individuals, is the price the elite of all power persuasions (who pursue this policy) are willing to offer as the necessary sacrifice to the God of Power.

Madeleine Albright, the first female secretary-of-state in United States history, made the remarks in 1996 during a 60 Minutes interview, that the deaths of 500,000 Iraqi Children was an acceptable price to pay. Correspondent Lesley Stahl discussed with the then - United Nations ambassador how Iraq had been suffering from the sanctions placed on the country following 1991's Gulf War. "We have heard that half a million [Iraqi] children have died. I mean, that is more children than died in Hiroshima," Stahl said. "And, you know, is the price worth it?"

I think that is a very hard choice," Albright answered, "but the price, we think, the price is worth it."

We need to re-consider our own elites pursuing the group policy of world government above the interests of our own nation, in complete contrast to promoting the interests of the individuals who comprise the nation.

Massive immigration rates are causing significant congestion in housing to the point where freehold home-ownership has become a thing of the past. The Australian population, now as policy, will generally never freehold their own property. We are to remain indebted, and therefore financially enslaved to the money masters. Policy for the benefit of the individual (freehold) is never pursued by our elites. Only the group policy of centralising political, financial, economic, and cultural power. Today's events are a consequence of two opposing philosophies at a cross-roads – the group and/or the individual. World Dominion is pursuing the centralising objective. There cannot legitimately exist Judeo-Christian. They are philosophical diametric-opposites. It is either one or the other - only.

"But because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold, not hot, I will begin to vomit thee out of my mouth." Rev 3:16

THE LANGUAGE OF CONTROL By Neville Archibald

In the 1920s much of the discussion within C.H.Douglas' circle seemed to be about the incorrect control of, and distribution of, wealth. Having gone from a labour intensive environment in most industries, to machines doing the larger part of the work, the arrival of this mechanisation changed our society's ability to put purchasing power into the hands of workers. Now that many of the previously paid positions were eliminated and only a fraction of that saved money being spent by providing machinery, the loss within the system becomes more apparent.

Essentially an accounting problem, production was being introduced into the system without spending money (wages) going into the hands of consumers (workers) to buy it. This was happening at an increasing rate and while some prices of production went down, much of the point-of-sale prices remained the same.

To those who have studied this phenomenon, I know I am not telling you anything new. For first timers just considering this concept, please make use of the League's substantial website "alor.org" and its wide collection of credit related articles and books to learn more.

Back then in the 1920s, much of this discussion was possible, for it was a new thing to be 'done out of a job' by a machine. It directly or indirectly affected everyone to some extent. Basic maths was common and little to no high-flying 'economic or financial wizardry' was in the everyday persons mind to confuse them.

Although the stock market and other institutions were in operation, for the day-to-day public, money was there

The power structure at and above political Zionism is never allowed to be discussed in polite society (an anathema). Yet it is the necessary veil that must be lifted to show that Jews are as much controlled and expendable by their own elites as we are ours, and each group of elites care little for anyone except themselves and their policy of World Dominion. Jews are the psychological barrier (of suffering) to ensure any legitimate examination about the money-power receives short shrift (as anti-semitic diatribe - whatever that actually means).

This claim for World Dominion will only succeed while those elites remain beyond examination. The policy of World Dominion must be examined closely, and the roots of control must be revealed. This pursuit of Empire is not new. The mask of obscurity is a new tactic.

Marrano was the adjective given from the root word 'marrionette', as puppets secretly controlled by others. When we consider our own elites as puppets for World Dominion, we must take into account that their loyalty may originate from an entirely unexpected source, and they are simply playing their part in a great charade in pursuit of World Dominion. For example, Archbishop Justin Welby was a merchant banker and is the appointed leader for the Anglican communion. Viewing from this filtering of Marrano, it now makes further sense. ***

to use for concrete things and few financial investment opportunities competed for any excess money. In other words, the public at large had not yet been brainwashed into believing monetary accounting and control was so incredibly complicated that it was beyond mortal thinking.

These days it seems that each fund management group, each stock market promoter is competing to produce the most complicated theories for making money that they can, in order to "sell" their investment ability. Coupling that with a tax system that seems to be designed to make it almost impossible for an everyday person to "make the most" of their money without specialist help, it is no wonder that many shake their heads and put monetary theory in the too-hard basket.

Much like the witch-doctors of old, modern day banking Moghuls have people right where they want them, in the dark and bluffed by the hocus pocus language brought out to explain problems and institute solutions that somehow never seem to result in a change for the better. Only those in control get richer.

Moving on to our problems now and I think we must realise by far the majority of educated people today are leading us to believe that understanding and resolutions are beyond even-us, and never pointing out that our financial-economic problems are simply accounting ones – the books don't balance because of the fraudulent financial system. They counter only with the words that they have heard our finance ministers and top experts use. They are simply rehashing these nonsense (to make no sense at all) words, like a slogan or a football theme song. Having taken a “side” and desperate not to appear naive, it is the emperor’s new clothes for everyone.

Simple home truths are the only way to make them question what they believe, not a deep and involved dive down the rabbit hole of ‘jargon that is designed to confuse’. An idiot speaks to an idiot in a non-sensical language, and neither will actually understand the other.

If you doubt me, take a closer look at one of the main financial forces threatening us today, Carbon Credits. These are something that I think would have been laughed out of existence if they were proposed in Douglas’ day. The people of the 1920s were much more in tune with reality and closer to the land and its abundance, to believe that cows farting was likely to change our planetary atmosphere. Yet here we are. An innocuous gas, carbon dioxide, has been turned from a small part in a complex system, into a demonic man-controlled force threatening to destroy the world as we know it.

So what is CO₂ and why is it important?

Carbon Dioxide as referred to by those pursuing its control and regulation, is said to be largely man made from the burning of fossil fuels. It is also said to be the control knob of global warming (now climate change) along with other lesser, but also included greenhouse gases like methane. This is a crucial point to consider as it is strictly the man-made aspect of these gases that is important here. These are to be the units to be controlled going forward.

The fact that we breathe out CO₂, as do all animals, and that there are other major sources of both its production and consumption is largely overlooked by those demonising it. Only the part linked to energy usage is in question. Which I find strange, as man-made CO₂ only accounts for 3% of the total of the CO₂ produced each year.

If economics is the study of the sources and control of social energy and is being well manipulated to keep us in our place; then equally important is energy itself, as it is indeed the key to all of man’s activity on earth. Control of these two things can be made into merely a form of bookkeeping. Like the use of banking jargon has confused and incapacitated so many, a new form of diatribe has been created around the need for energy use limitation (read ‘control’).

A person with unlimited energy output would cause all sorts of havoc within the sphere of control. It is therefore important to rein in any potential new challenges to that power. Farmers getting ever more productive as they find ways to produce more are not in line with the desire for ever more scarcity, and while cheap energy keeps us comfortable enough to have time to question things, we are a danger waiting to awaken. What better way to limit our access to energy than making a by-product of ‘energy’ (CO₂), a dangerous gas.

ON TARGET

Both sides of the “climate debate” claim to be right. Both sides can point to statistics and research that prove or disprove their theories. Like the banking debate and the creation of money, a library of papers on everything even remotely connected to climate is produced to support claims.

I could argue for hours with people on so many different aspects of these presented dangers and still not get anywhere. Once again, we have fallen for picking a side in a debate rather than examining the Truth. The initial emotional scare of future dangers is still immobilising us despite these fears being unfounded as deadlines for catastrophe pass-by unnoticed. As the wording they have used changes to suit reality as it unfolds before us – global warming becomes climate change. In the countless hours I have spent examining both sides, the main thing that has stood out has been the lack of true factual debate and the reliance on emotion and dubiously related pictures to present more of a scare campaign than a logical one.

Tying in forest fires as the result of extreme weather events truly gets my goat. In speaking to people in the regions here in Australia and those whose knowledge is of Canada and the West coast of the US, I can only say the “lock it up and leave it” policies in all these regions is probably, by and far the main reason for the increase in fires. Pleas to governments for better forest-management falls on deaf ears as much of these ‘return to nature’ programs are in line with climate change protocols. Who would’ve guessed.

What is important is the recognition of who the responsibility of this control over CO₂ gas emissions is given to. There is no real energy source that does not rely on some form of fossil fuel. Not just the use of mining and refining equipment, but also shipping and production of the product, be they batteries or solar or wind, all rely on and will be impacted upon by carbon credit style restrictions on existing energy sources. To think that we will go to fully renewable electricity production, with the zero emissions program now being imposed, is dreaming, although it will more likely be a nightmare.

The public at large has a difficulty comprehending that these two things, economics and energy control, can be used as weapons and so they cannot fathom that they are being attacked and defeated by this propaganda.

Finding ways to open our own eyes to what is really happening, is more about revealing who is imposing these restrictions and how they are benefitting from them, than by using confusing language to argue their points, rather than seeking Truth. ***
