THE THREE FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES OF A SOCIAL CREDIT FINANCIAL SYSTEM by Oliver Heydorn

After many years of reflection on Douglas' monetary reform ideas, I have come to the conclusion that the easiest way of explaining them in an encapsulated manner to those who have never encountered them before is to reduce them to three basic principles. These three principles are fairly straightforward to understand.

The first principle, which is the arch-principle of the whole Social Credit approach to money, is the notion that the financial system, if it is to be designed properly, should provide us with an accurate picture of the physical realities it was introduced to represent. It should reflect reality adequately. The silent implication, of course, is that the current financial system does not provide us with an accurate picture (more on this later).

To summarize the gist of this first principle in the form of an axiom, we could say: 1) "The financial system should be an honest system".

But what would an accurate representation on the financial plane of our physical economic reality look like? In what does an accurate mirroring of the physical reality consist? This brings us to a discussion of the two other fundamental principles for the Douglas Social Credit monetary reform. These two secondary guidelines may be thought of as applications, or as 'children', of the first.

The first of the twin subordinate principles has to do with production. On the level of production, an honest financial system would allow us to produce whatever we are physically capable of producing, provided or assuming that there is a real demand for that production. The silent implication here is that the current financial system does not allow us to fully actualize the real credit of a society by producing everything that can be physically produced and which simultaneously answers to various human needs and desires.

To summarize the gist of this second principle in the form of an axiom we could say: 2) "Whatever is physically possible and desirable should be financially possible."

The third and final principle of the Social Credit monetary reform has to do with consumption. On the level of consumption, an honest financial system would allow us to consume in full whatever we have produced without going into debt in order to do so. In other words, the financial system should automatically enfranchise us with sufficient buying power in the form of income so that we can always pay our way. The silent implication here is that the current financial system does not automatically provide us with sufficient income to offset the costs/prices that the system generates in the course of production.

To summarize the gist of this third principle in the form of an axiom we could say: 3) "When it comes to the purchase of consumer production, we should always be able to 'pay our way' in full."

A Social Credit monetary system would be, above all things, balanced. It would balance 1) the physical economic reality (in both actuality and potentiality) with a fully accurate financial representation. More specifically, it would balance 2) the useful productive capacity with sufficient money in the form of producer credits (or loans to producers) to catalyze the real credit of society. It would also balance 3) the available flow of consumer production with sufficient money in the form of consumer credits (income issued to or on behalf of consumers) to distribute that production in full and to liquidate once and for all the totality of the related costs of production.

The existing financial system is, by contrast, unbalanced in principle. In the first place, it fails to provide us with an accurate financial picture of our physical economic reality because it systemically underestimates our ability to produce as well as our ability to consume. By artificially restricting the flow of credit for production and the flow of income for consumption, the current system makes it appear that we are poorer than we actually are in physical or objective terms. As a result of this false representation of our economic reality, i.e., the impression that we are poorer (or less able to satisfy our requirements for goods and services on terms that are effective, efficient, and fair) than the physical facts would indicate, the current system also misdirects our economic activity in a thousand and one different ways. It makes us do things that are not at all necessary in the nature of things, but which become 'necessary' in order to make up, for example, for the deficiency of consumer buying power in the form of income, and in

MASS PROTESTS CAN END VACCINE PASSPORTS by Dr. Joseph Mercola

March 20, 2021, on the 1-year anniversary of the first COVID-19 lockdown, people in more than 40 countries took to the streets to peacefully demonstrate against COVID-19 lies and tyrannical measures under the banner of "Worldwide Freedom Day." While synchronized around the world that particular day, demonstrations are more or less ongoing in various areas.

PEACEFUL PROTESTS ARE ENDING VACCINE PASSPORT REQUIREMENTS

In the U.K., Britons held a "Unite for Freedom" rally in London, Saturday May 29, 2021, as seen in the short video clip at my website. According to ITV.com, hundreds of no-vaccine-passport protesters surged into the Westfield shopping mall in London, while another large crowd gathered in Parliament Square.

They were reportedly cleared from the mall after about 20 minutes by police, but no one was injured or arrested in this particular instance.

As reported by Reuters May 30, 2021, it now looks like the U.K. will be scrapping its plan for vaccine passports as a legal requirement for large events, although a government spokesman told Reuters that a final decision has yet to be made and that the COVID-19 vaccine certification review is still ongoing. Why the sudden change? Undoubtedly, it's because Britons have repeatedly taken to the streets in protest of the medical apartheid these passports create.

14 US STATES HAVE BANNED VACCINE PASSPORT REQUIREMENTS

In the U.S., there's also good news. A number of states have enacted laws that ban vaccine passport requirements in order to prevent the creation of a two-tier society of those with the freedom to live as they please, and others whose lives would be restricted based on vaccination status alone.

As of May 28, 2021, the following 14 states have banned vaccine passports from being required: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Montana, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Wyoming.

Utah has issued a partial ban that applies to state government only. Only two states so far — Hawaii and New York — have actually implemented vaccine certification requirements for certain activities.

Whereas balance is a necessary prerequisite for and constituent of stability, order, and genuine progress, imbalance results in instability, disorder, and regression in a word: dysfunction. The Social Credit monetary reform is one of the key things that is necessary if health is to be restored to society. ***

certification requirements for certain activities.

In Hawaii, only those with proof of vaccination are allowed to travel between counties without pretravel testing and quarantine restrictions, while New York requires you to be vaccinated or have a recent negative COVID-19 test to enter certain sports arenas and large performance venues.

FLORIDA FIGHTS TO MAKE CRUISE LINES ADHERE TO LAW

In my home state of Florida, one of the best pro-freedom governors in the U.S., Ron DeSantis, is now fighting the cruise industry over its proposed vaccination passport requirement. The bill he signed into law May 3, 2021, prohibits state government from issuing vaccine passports and private businesses from requiring proof of vaccination status to enter or obtain services.

As such, cruise lines that do business in Florida and want to restrict travel to vaccinated-only are in violation of this new anti-medical apartheid law. As reported by NBC News:

"The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention gave the go-ahead Wednesday to begin work toward restarting cruises for the first time in over a year after the massive ships became some of the first superspreader locations for the coronavirus ... To comply with CDC guidance ... several cruise liners want to require nearly everyone onboard to be fully vaccinated. But that could now be illegal in Florida, the center of the American cruise industry, under a law DeSantis signed ... that prohibits businesses from discriminating against unvaccinated customers. 'In Florida, your personal choice regarding vaccinations will be protected, and no business or government entity will be able to deny you services based on your decision,' DeSantis said of the law, which codified executive orders he had already issued. The dispute may end up in court, as the cruise industry argues that the state law doesn't apply to it thanks to federal rules. In the meantime, companies may decide to move ahead with plans to require vaccinations, even if it means racking up violations in Florida."

A (CHINESE-ED) SOCIAL CREDIT SYSTEM IS THE END GOAL OF VACCINE PASSPORTS

It's important to realize that vaccine passports or any other type of certification in and of themselves are not the end goal here. They're merely a part of a much larger plan to implement a social credit system, such as that already implemented in China. First, they'd be expanded to cover other required vaccinations.

Ultimately, the vaccine passport will expand to include not just vaccination status but also other medical data, basic identification records, financial data and just about anything else that can be digitized and tracked. The end goal is to end freedom as we know it, using a social credit system to ensure compliance.

Booster shots against COVID-19 variants would logically come first, followed by any number of other vaccinations. The sky's the limit as far as that's concerned, and many are likely to be gene-based and therefore dangerous in the extreme. Already, vaccine makers have announced they're working on a combination COVID-flu/mRNA vaccine, a pneumococcal-COVID/mRNA booster shot for adults over 65, and mRNA/seasonal influenza vaccines.

Ultimately, the vaccine passport will expand to include not just vaccination status but also other medical data, basic identification records, financial data and just about anything else that can be digitized and tracked. It may even extend to include real-time biological data.

The end goal is to end freedom as we know it, using a social credit system to ensure compliance. If you disobey or act "out of line" with a prevailing dictate, your freedom to travel, bank, shop, get a loan or even leave your home could be vastly restricted.

We can see how such a system could work by looking at the Chinese social credit system where behavior is electronically monitored to assess "trustworthiness" in real-time. Aside from failing to pay taxes on time, score-lowering actions can include such minutia as cheating in an online video game, jaywalking, not visiting your parents on a frequent-enough basis, smoking in a nonsmoking zone or walking your dog without a leash.

Momentary thoughtlessness can also land you on any one of hundreds of blacklists controlled by a variety of state agencies with their own jurisdictions, and if you end up on one, you're typically subject to blacklisting across all of them, at which point you won't be allowed to do much of anything except work to improve your score. On average, it takes two to five years to get off a blacklist, and that's assuming you comply with all the recommendations put forth.

While the Chinese social credit score is still in its infancy, eventually, the plan is to use it to "search for signs of potentially harmful behavior before it occurs" — in other words, a real-world pre-crime type of situation as illustrated in the movie "Minority Report." This is what vaccine passports can lead to, and there's every reason to believe that is the plan.

As noted by Naomi Wolf, a former adviser to the New Times Survey

Clinton administration, in an interview with Fox News' Steve Hilton:

"I'm [the] CEO of a tech company, I understand what these platforms can do. It is not about the vaccine, it's not about the virus, it's about your data ... What people have to understand is that any other functionality can be loaded onto that platform with no problem at all. It can be merged with your Paypal account, with your digital currency. Microsoft is already talking about merging it with payment plans. Your network can be sucked up. It geolocates you everywhere you go. Your credit history can be included. All of your medical and health history can be included ... It is absolutely so much more than a vaccine pass ... I cannot stress enough that it has the power to turn off your life, or to turn on your life, to let you engage in society or be marginalized."

IT'S ALL BEEN BUILDING TO THIS POINT

Indeed, recreating China's social credit system here in the U.S. is likely easier at this point than anyone would like to think, and probably wouldn't take long to implement. Silicon Valley titan Oracle nabbed the contract to be the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's central data repository for all COVID-19 vaccine data in the U.S. early on in the pandemic.

Oracle also manages the database for COVID-19 cases and the National Institute for Allergies and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) database for clinical research into COVID-19 vaccines and drugs, a program overseen by Dr. Anthony Fauci.

Now consider this: Oracle has for many years also managed the U.S. national security database, as well as databases for the CIA, Navy Intelligence, Air Force Intelligence and the National Security Agency, plus banking, and a host of commercial databases. As reported by The Defender:

"The information about your banks, your checking balances, your saving balance is stored in an Oracle database," Ellison was quoted in the 2004 book, 'The Naked Crowd.' 'Your airline reservation is stored in an Oracle database. What books you bought on Amazon is stored in an Oracle database. Your profile on Yahoo! is stored in an Oracle database.'"

And, as Ellison admitted in 2002, thousands of databases can easily be integrated into a single national file — something he offered to do for free for the U.S. government all the way back then.

The Defender also recounts an old Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) program called Total Information Awareness (TIA), which sought to collect the medical records, drug prescriptions, DNA, financial information, travel data and media consumption habits of all Americans.

The justification for this vast data collection, according to DARPA, was that “the whole population needed surveillance to prevent not only future terrorist attacks, but bioterrorism and even naturally occurring disease outbreaks.” The program was defunded in 2003 after intense public backlash, “but TIA never really went away,” The Defender writes. “Various of its programs ended up divvied into a web of military and intelligence programs.”

Here are a few more connections to consider when trying to decide whether a social credit system is really in the works, and why a vaccine passport could serve a central function.

Oracle Labs, the research arm of Oracle, is partnered with DARPA to create an “optically interconnected supercomputer” — something that would come in handy if putting together a massive social credit system that demands interconnectivity between thousands of databases.

DARPA is also working on advanced pandemic surveillance and biological threat detection. In fact, it has an entire division specializing in biological technologies — the Biological Technologies Office (BTO) — which developed hydrogel, an implantable type of nanotechnology that transmits light-based digital signals through wireless networks.

It’s basically a gel-like biosensor that can both record and share biological data. The hydrogel is manufactured by Profusa, which is partnered with the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation and backed by Google, the largest data mining company in the world.

In 2020, there were rumors that this hydrogel would be part of Moderna’s mRNA delivery system. DARPA, by the way, actually funded Moderna too. However, it is unclear whether hydrogel actually ended up being used in Moderna’s or any other COVID-19 vaccine. At any rate, it could be used, if not now, then in the future.

Now, ask yourself, considering all of these various data points that I’ve covered — which by no means includes everything — just how likely is it that a national social credit system based on digital surveillance, including medical and biological surveillance, is NOT in the works?

VACCINE PASSPORTS SPELL THE END OF FREEDOM

I recently interviewed Wolf about her book The End of America. The book, published in 2007, was a prescient warning about the very time we now find ourselves in. In it, she laid out the 10 steps toward tyranny that have been followed by virtually every modern-day would-be tyrant.

“They all took the same 10 steps, and they always work. I warned people that when you start to see these 10 steps, you have to take action, because there is no way to recover once things go too far without a bloody revolution or a civil war. We are [now] at Step 10 ... and once Step 10 locks in, there is no going back,” Wolf says.

The 10 steps toward tyranny start with the invocation of a terrifying internal and/or external threat. It may be a real threat or an imagined one, but in all cases, it’s a hyped-up threat. From 2001 onward, that threat was terrorism, which was used as the justification for stripping us of our liberties.

The last and final step in the implementation of tyranny, Step 10, involves the creation of a surveillance state where citizens are under constant surveillance and critique of the government is reclassified as dissent and subversive activity. Vaccine passports are clearly an integral part of that surveillance apparatus, and a precursor to a social credit system.

There simply can be no doubt of that, and if we don’t put a stop to it now, we’ll be locked into not just a national dictatorship but a global one, run by unelected, largely unknown individuals and Big Tech oligarchs. There will be no one to help anyone else, because all nations will be in the same boat.

PEACEFUL PROTEST AND LEGISLATIVE ACTION ARE THE REMEDY

To avoid the fate that comes next, everyone everywhere needs to recognize the danger and take action. Such action includes peaceful protest and civil disobedience — simply not complying with mask mandates, social distancing, lockdowns, vaccination or anything else.

We must also fight through legislation. As mentioned earlier, 14 U.S. states have already passed laws banning requirements for vaccine passports, which protects the freedoms of everyone within those states. While that’s a good start, there are dozens more to go, and other countries need to enact such laws as well. As noted by Wolf in my interview with her:

“Once [vaccine passports] are launched ... people like you and I, Dr. Mercola, will be switched off of society. ‘Oops, my vaccine passport is positive. I guess I can’t go food shopping for my family.’ ‘I said something critical of biofascism on Dr. Mercola’s show, so now my child can’t get into school.’ Just as in Israel, where people who are critics are being surveilled [and] marginalized from society, it has turned into a two-tier society. If you choose not to get vaccinated, then you’re really in a marginalized minority in an apartheid state. The more we know about these vaccines, the scarier it is to have coercion that is social. It’s also illegal. In America, we have the Americans with Disabilities Act. It means it’s illegal to even ask me anything about my medical status. You can’t ask me if I’m pregnant. You can’t ask me if I’m disabled. You can’t ask me if I have diabetes or HIV. You cannot ask me anything. By definition, these intrusive measures are unlawful.

*We have to use the law to save the law, basically ...
We have to fight before we are living in fascist regime where every move is tracked and we're marginalized from society.”* ***

POLITICAL SATIRIST TAKES UP THE FIGHT AGAINST TYRANNY

By Dr. Joseph Mercola

In this interview, CJ Hopkins, an American playwright, novelist and columnist who currently resides in Berlin, Germany, discusses the implementation of the globalist plan for a new normal, also known as the Great Reset. The first year or two of Phase 1, Hopkins describes as the “shock-and-awe” phase.

“It’s pretty classic,” he says. “It’s the hysteria that was rolled out right at the beginning of [the COVID-19 pandemic]. We had the fake pictures of people dropping dead in the streets in China, and they were advertising a 3.4% death rate. Hundreds of millions of people were going to die.

States of emergency were declared. I covered all of this with citations in my early columns. Basically, a police state was rolled out and everyone was locked down. Here in Europe, the police were arresting people for being outside without permission. Neighbors started reporting their neighbors for going outdoors without a mask or beyond curfew.

That was pretty much the whole first year. This was really shock and awe. It feels like now we’re moving into Phase 2 with the rollout of a social segregation system and vaccine passes. In a lot of ways, I feel like Phase 2 is going to be more insidious than Phase 1 was.”

WHAT’S IN STORE FOR PHASE 2?

While hesitant to predict what’s to come, Hopkins fears some version of the intended social segregation system will be implemented despite public pushback. “That really concerns me,” he says. Even partial implementation can be enough to get the proverbial foot in the door, so to speak, to allow a fuller implementation to occur later on. In the U.S., resistance by certain states is encouraging. So far, 14 states have implemented laws banning the requirement of vaccine passports to prevent a two-tier society from forming. In Europe, however, due to the smaller sizes of each country, it’s easier to create the ideological uniformity required to impose these systems, so what happens there remains to be seen. When asked how he’s structuring his resistance to the plan for global tyranny, Hopkins replies:

“The main way is through my ‘Consent Factory’ columns. My essays. And through the ‘Consent Factory’ on social media. I try to whip up as much resistance and create as much awareness as I can and urge people to spread that and do the same. That’s what I do. My medium is words.

On a personal level, I think it’s really important not to cooperate with the system. For example, in Germany, they’re rolling out a segregation system so that if I want to go to a restaurant, a café, a nonessential store or attend the theater, I need to present either a proof of vaccination or a negative test within 24 hours to enter these establishments.

I think it’s really important for those of us who are pushing back against this, to not play along. I’m going to try to go to the restaurants. I’m going to try to enter the stores.

And I want to make the people who have been made responsible for the system, I want to make them eject me, and I want to politely but loudly make it clear: ‘You’re ejecting me from your establishment because I’m not conforming to this insane ideological program.’ Hopefully, if a lot of people do this, enough social friction can be created and build resistance to it.”

COERCED COMPLIANCE IS NOT A RETURN OF FREEDOM

In the U.S., the lifting of mask mandates for vaccinated individuals only appears to be part of the more insidious style we can expect in Phase 2. In essence, it’s just another strategy to coerce compliance with vaccination. “Get the vaccine and you can have your freedom; you can go back to normal,” is the idea here. But it’s a false freedom. Being coerced to comply with the demand to be a guinea pig for an experimental gene therapy in order to “regain” basic human freedom is hardly freedom.

“This is what I mean by I think Phase 2 is going to be more insidious than Phase 1, because that’s exactly right. We’re getting this carrot-and-stick stuff,” Hopkins says. “Joe Biden and Hillary Clinton came out and tweeted, ‘Get vaccinated or wear a mask.’ That’s it. These are the choices ...

My sense is the mask regulations will probably be the last thing to go here in Germany. Clearly, the masks, I think, were the primary means of generating the appearance of an apocalyptic plague that is threatening the very fabric of society. When people take off their masks, the illusion will just evaporate.”

SUFFOCATING CENSORSHIP ABOUNDS

As in the U.S., Germany and virtually all other countries are experiencing severe censorship of anything COVID-19 related. Hopkins describes the situation as “suffocating,” saying “it’s been one of the most impressive and frightening experiences that I can remember.”

Very quickly, the German media, government and entertainment industry started marching in lockstep. Gleichschaltung is a German word that harkens back to the Nazi regime. Gleich means “the same” and schaltung means “to switch.”

“What it means is basically synchronizing all aspects of culture, messaging and ideology in the society to make everything absolutely uniform and to eliminate all dissent,” Hopkins explains. “Of course, this is what the Nazis did, and this is exactly what I have witnessed here.

It happened almost instantly, in the spring of 2020. And it has been absolutely suffocating. Anyone protesting, questioning or challenging the official narrative has been demonized as a far-right conspiracy theorist, an anti-Semitic extremist. It's been really intense.”

HOW DID WE GET HERE?

For many, myself included, the current reality is beyond surreal. It's like living in a nightmare, hoping to wake up at any moment. How did we get here? Hopkins offers his personal take on the situation:

“I started writing political satire and commentary back in 2016. I did that because I got interested in the Donald Trump phenomenon. I'm not a fan of Donald Trump personally, but something new was happening and it caught my attention.

What I covered all during the Trump years was this unauthorized president got elected and it felt to me like this was part of a broader populist pushback against whatever you want to call it — global capitalist ideology is what I call it — and what we've been living with for the last 30 years since the fall of the Soviet Union ...

Suddenly around 2016, there was Brexit and Trump and various reactionary populist movements rising up in Europe. It interested me. Here's some resistance against the new ideology.

What I watched, what I described in my columns and in my books, was the system, the entire global system, and this is where it gets too simplistic to talk about because it's not a bunch of capitalists sitting in a room, scheming and plotting all this out. It's the system reacting to this insurgency, to this sort of populist rebellion inside of it.

And what they did is very clear. They made an example of Trump. They demonized him. They demonized everybody who put him in office. Really polarized society so that you were either a good Democrat or you were a white supremacist, racist, neo-Nazi monster. They did this for four years solid and, of course, it all culminated in 2020 when they removed Trump from office and then had the big spectacle of ‘restoring normality.’

I can't help but see the rollout of the ‘new normal’ and this whole narrative, this introduction, of what I see as a more totalitarian version of global capitalist society. I see this in that same context.

A point that I always make about this is the lockdowns were the big thing in the beginning, right? And for most of the last year. Where does the concept of lockdown come from? Well, it comes from prisons. And when do you lock the prisoners down? You lock them down when they're rebelling, when they're rioting.

And you do it to remind them, ‘Hey, you're in prison, and we can lock you down and impose any type of measures on you that we want, any time we want, until you start toeing the line.’ I cannot help but see what we've been through during this past year as part of that lesson that the ruling establishment, the system itself, is teaching us ...

There's a book that I recommend to everyone — especially to true believers if any of them are watching and they still have just a little bit of an open mind — by Milton Mayer, called ‘They Thought They Were Free.’ He was here in Germany in the 1930s as the Nazis came to power, as this ideological synchronization was rolled out. And what he describes mirrors almost exactly what we've been experiencing. The context is completely different. It's not a political ideology that's being rolled out [now]. But just the introduction of this official narrative, this official ideology, and the coercion and implementation of police measures and the abrogation of the constitution [is the same as back then]. And people's reactions to it and nonreactions to it. How it was all implemented step by step by step, the old ‘how to boil a frog’ thing. If you read that and compare it to what we've been through for the last year, it's just horrifying.”

WHAT CAN WE DO?

The book, They Thought They Were Free, is available as a free PDF download here: https://alor.org/Storage/Library/PDF/Mayer_M-They_Thought_They_Were_Free.pdf.

Now, if what we're experiencing is subjugation training, how can we most effectively resist it? Certainly, we need to spread the word and collaborate with friends and neighbors, because if they're listening to the mainstream media, they're not getting this at all.

To me, one of the most frightening parts of this are the attempts to coerce people into getting vaccinated with an experimental gene therapy. What's happening is absolute 100% illegal and a clear violation of the Nuremberg Code, because the only way you can give informed consent to anything is to have both sides of the story.

But they are only presenting one side. Anything that opposes their narrative is immediately censored. People with any kind of following on social media are simply deplatformed. As a result, people have no idea what they're getting themselves into.

Clearly, we have to realize that this is a long-term game. The globalists, the technocratic elite who are running this nightmare simulation, have been organizing and planning its execution for decades. They're not flying by the seat of their pants. They have a long-term game plan, and we need to establish one too, even if, for the moment, we're lagging behind.

"I think you're absolutely right and this is why I brought up that term, Gleichschaltung, this synchronization," Hopkins says. "It's very clear to me, to you, to those of us who have been paying attention, the intensity of the effort to silence discussion. To silence dissent. To silence questioning.

To present this uniform ideological narrative ... and there's no room in it for questioning, for argument, for a discussion. If you question it, you are absolutely demonized. It makes it really difficult to communicate. I'm a satirist, so I think I kind of slip through the lines because maybe the censors don't know if I'm serious or not.

It's more difficult for people who are just trying to present facts and information because they're getting completely shut out. I think we have to continue to try to do it no matter what. I think it's important to repeatedly present the facts.

To repeatedly point out what happened at the beginning of this — All the propaganda. All the false information. Where [the virus] came from. The models. The way the PCR tests were used to generate the appearance that suddenly, perfectly healthy people became medical cases."

HOW A REAL-WORLD PANDEMIC SIMULATION WAS CREATED

That last point is an important one. We now know, rather unequivocally, that we did not have a lethal pandemic as much as we had a casademic, meaning a pandemic of false positive tests.

The vast majority were perfectly healthy, but because the PCR tests were run at a ridiculously and indefensibly high cycle threshold (CT), they picked up dead fragments of the virus, resulting in false positives. Medicine as we know it was suddenly turned on its head, and these healthy individuals were deemed "sick" based on flawed testing and nothing else.

The official narrative violates just about everything we know about medicine and science. And they did it simply by redefining terms.

Once actual death counts dropped, mainstream media reverted from flashing death statistics to "case" statistics, thereby making it appear as though the pandemic was raging, even as hospitals remained empty of COVID-19 patients.

"It's so frustrating because you can't get this through to people who are true believers," Hopkins says. "First of all, the test was never meant to be diagnostic of illness. But the fact that you could turn this test up to 40, 50 cycles, and suddenly people who were perfectly healthy, with no symptoms of illness whatsoever, became medical cases.

The next step, of course, was to use that to inflate the deaths. Then people who were dying in hospitals, they didn't have to be dying of [some other] illness anymore. If they were tested and the PCR test showed they had been infected, then they were COVID deaths. And then those statistics were exploded. They basically redefined traditional established scientific and medical knowledge."

That too is a key point. The official narrative violates just about everything we know about medicine and science. And they did it simply by redefining terms. The World Health Organization redefined the word "pandemic." The medical term "case" was redefined, as was the definition of a "COVID death." They've redefined the term "herd immunity" and even the term "anti-vaxxer."

According to Merriam-Webster, an "anti-vaxxer" is now anyone who opposes vaccination or simply disagrees with vaccine mandates. Based on this loosened definition, an estimated 79% of Americans are now anti-vaxxers. Most recently, they redefined what a "breakthrough case" is among the vaccinated.

IT'S ALL ABOUT MANIPULATING STATISTICS

Those who define the terms control the narrative. Simply by redefining what constitutes illness, they're able to dial the pandemic up and down at will. On the day President Biden was inaugurated, the pandemic was dialed back by the WHO simply lowering the recommended CT. By then, the vaccination program had begun, and to make the vaccines appear effective, the caseload needed to decline.

Unfortunately, breakthrough cases started appearing, meaning fully vaccinated individuals were being hospitalized for COVID-19. So, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention changed the definition of a breakthrough case and lowered the recommended CT when testing fully vaccinated individuals.

The CDC no longer records mild or asymptomatic infections in vaccinated individuals as "COVID cases." The only cases that now count as COVID cases — if the patient has been vaccinated against COVID-19 — are those that result in hospitalization or death. And, like magic, the vaccine effectiveness got a boost. Breakthrough cases dropped by several thousand overnight, from 10,262 (as of April 30, 2021) to 3,016 (as of June 1, 2021).

Meanwhile, if you're unvaccinated and come down with a mild case, or if you test positive at a higher CT and have no symptoms, you still count as a COVID case. So, we now have this remarkably unscientific and illogical situation where testing rules and definitions of illness vary depending on whether the patient is vaccinated or unvaccinated!

There's only one reason for doing something as unprecedented as this, and that is to manipulate statistics. This allows the CDC to inflate the caseload among unvaccinated people and minimize breakthrough cases among the vaccinated. The end result is that unvaccinated people will appear more prone to infection, even though they're not, and the vaccines will appear far more protective than they actually are.

"The reason it is so difficult to resist is [because] this simulation has been created through all of these means that we're talking about, and the people who believe in this simulation — I've likened them to cult members — there's no shaking their belief in this," Hopkins says.

"I think it's important, nonetheless, to keep confronting them and presenting these facts to everybody. The other [strategy] is on a personal level, just as I was saying before.

I think it's crucial that those of us who are not true believers in this new ideology continue to try to live according to reality, and refuse to reify it, refuse to behave according to these rules that are being imposed.

Fundamentally, the idea that anything about this virus requires a radical restructuring of society where I have to present my medical papers to get a cup of coffee is insane. It's literally insane. And it's important that those of us who continue to have a grip on reality treat it as insane, and not treat it as legitimate at all ..."

In closing, I believe a major part of the solution is to develop alternative distribution networks that are censorship resistant. Ultimately, we need a decentralized Internet. That's currently in the works, but full implementation of it is bound to take years. In the meantime, we have to perfect online "guerilla tactics" to get around the censorship and form collaborative networks. We also need to engage in peaceful civil disobedience in our day-to-day lives. As noted by Hopkins: "Until we get there, it's crucial to continue to use whatever means. People are trying to avoid Facebook censors by playing with the fonts and the pictures and what have you. It's another thing that people can study — in totalitarian societies, people adapted. Everyone knew that the official sources were just pumping out propaganda, so, they learned how to speak and read between the lines. It might become more and more necessary to find ways to not say directly what you're saying, but rather point to it so that it can lead other people to where you're going. So, use whatever means are still available to get the facts, to get reality, out there.

Secondly, and I think just as important, back to my point about how we live our everyday lives. Go back to that restaurant where I have to show my vaccine pass or my test to sit down and get a cup of coffee. I have choices. I could choose to stay home. I could choose to get a counterfeit vax pass.

Neither one of those to me are the right choices because the choice is to go and demand that people treat me according to reality and not treat me according to the rules of their new ideology. Create that friction ... I have no hostility to the server, but I want to make that server uncomfortable with what he or she is doing. ***

VALE JACK BETTS

Jack Betts passed away peacefully at the Numurkah Health on the 20th June 2021, aged 96.

Jack was predeceased by his wife, Gwen.

His children are Philip, Alan, Valda and Joy.

With 11 Grandchildren and 18 great Grandchildren.

I have known Jack Betts for many years but it is when he took an interest in the Social Credit Movement that our friendship blossomed.

Jack took his religious beliefs seriously and the application of Social Credit Principles added substance to his Faith. He was a humble man who 'practiced what he preached'. I often stopped by to visited him and he would share some produce from his garden.

I am saddened — I have lost a True Friend.

Rest in Peace Jack — I know you are reunited with your beloved Gwen in the arms of Jesus. I thank God for a Life well Lived. It is an Honour to have known

John Stephen 'Jack' Betts. - Louis Cook
