Non-Military War Against British Empire

Australians Must Make a Stand

(Radio Talk by ERIC D. BUTLER, over 3CS, Colac.)

It is not uncommon to hear some people who, after admitting the rapid deterioration of conditions in Australia, suggest that, after all, we are not as badly off as are the British people. This is, of course, a poor excuse for not trying to improve Australian conditions. It is true that we are not yet in the desperate position that the British people are, but there is little doubt that we soon will be—unless we effectively challenge the policies of destruction being imposed upon us.

Apart from what is happening in Australia, events in Great Britain should be stimulating us to make a much greater fight for our way of life. Great Britain is, of course, the key part of the British Empire, so it is not surprising that the international plotters seeking world domination are directing most of their immediate attention to controlling the people of Great Britain.

High taxation and other destructive policies in Australia and the other Dominions are, among other things, designed to ensure that little help can be given to the British people.

The appointment of a party hack as Governor-General of Australia is more than a mere "spoils to the victor" policy; it is no doubt hoped that a lowering of the prestige of the highest public office in Australia will eventually lead to its abolition, thus making it easier to drive a wedge between Australia and Great Britain.

Nothing could be more dangerous than the widely accepted suggestion that the chaos in Great Britain and Australia is the result of mere stupidity by bunglers. There is no doubt that there are a lot of bunglers in important positions, but the groups responsible for the bunglers obtaining their positions know exactly what they are doing. Chaos is used to impose more and more controls.

In the case of Great Britain, the internal breakdown in the production system as the result of socialistic policies, and the na-tionalisation of key industries such as the coal-mining industry, are directly connected with the Dollar Loan and the Bretton Woods financial agreement, forced upon the British people at the end of the war. Not one of the Financial Editors of the Australian press and other people who are urging frantically that Australia must also be committed to Bretton Woods, have had the honesty to stress the fact that the British Government only accepted Bretton Woods under tremendous economic pressure, that Bretton Woods was the price of the Dollar Loan.

And what benefit have the British people obtained as a result of this Loan? They now endure even worse food rationing and a lower general standard of living than they did before the Loan was obtained. Worse still, the time is not far off when a start will have to be made to repay the Loan. With socialist planning destroying the efficiency of the British production system, how will it be possible for the Loan to be repaid? We can rest assured that the bond holders are going to demand a stiff price, and that, if possible, they will seek to compel the British to liquidate their debt by handing over control of some of their best fixed assets.

An interesting point arises here, a point, which may reveal to many people just why the international financiers are not opposed to nationalisation. While, for example, one of Great Britain's most important assets, her coal-mining industry, remained under the control of private enterprise, it was very difficult for any international group to take it over. But once the coal-mining industry was nationalised, it was centralised under the control of a Government responsible for a large debt to an external group. The way has thus been prepared for those who forced the Dollar Loan upon the British to take control of Great Britain's basic asset as repayment, or part repayment, of the loan.

Surely it is obvious to all thinking people that Bretton Woods, international food control and all the other international planning we have heard so much about, has not helped the British people in any way. Neither can it help us.

Ominous reports are appearing in the press, all hinting at what thinking people warned about when Bretton Woods was first mooted: that trading within the British Empire was to be interfered with by the international planners. Running true to form, the Sound Finance Association, in a recent survey, said, "Australia's policy respecting world trade will have to conform to international decisions." A Geneva Conference is to be held in April, at which the international planners hope to finalise a scheme for abolishing the system of Empire Preference. The fact that Dr. Coombs, international socialist, is "representing" Australia at this Conference is no consolation to Australians who realise what is being planned.

Mr. L. Withall, Director of the Associated Chamber of Manufacturers, is to be congratulated on some of his remarks concerning the plot to interfere with the internal trading policies of British countries. Mr. Withall was reported in the Melbourne "Herald" of January 7 as follows:

"Apparently the world has been so hypnotised by Washington propaganda that it accepts without question the claim that an expanding world economy and the establishment and maintenance of high levels of employment and real income are to be obtained by throwing the countries wide open to the influx of goods produced by the largest, wealthiest and most highly industrialised of countries to the detriment of expansion and trade generally."

While international free trade may be a desirable ideal, under existing conditions it is surely suicide for a country such as Australia to specialise in, say, agriculture and import all industrial requirements. Any British country depending upon external materials to any great extent, particularly from a country such as America, in which there are powerful anti-British groups, is vulnerable to economic pressure. It was a great tragedy last century when Great Britain's agriculture was sacrificed to a policy of excessive industrialisation. This policy has resulted in the British people being dependent upon external food supplies, and the danger of this dependence is now evident.

While the Empire Trade Preference system did little to attack the financial policy responsible for forcing all countries to try to export more than they imported, because their home markets were short of purchasing power to absorb more local production, it had many good points. In their attack upon the British Empire, the international plotters are determined that it shall be destroyed, that, for example the British shall get more of their food supplies from America and thus be under still greater control by Wall Street. Press reports are already stating that Australian primary producers can no longer regard the United Kingdom as a good future market for their produce.

All this, and much more, is clearly evidence of the fact that every possible step is being taken to divide the British Empire and take it over piece-meal. As stated previously, Great Britain is the main object of attack at the moment, although we are being quickly brought into line.

What, then, can be our best contribution to the saving of the British Empire? Before we can help to save the Mother Country, we must save ourselves. We must oppose with all our might the destructive policies being imposed upon us.

First and foremost, we must free our

Mr. E. C. Landeman, a senior Australian censor during the war years, recently revealed in an Australian Broadcasting Commission talk that the lives of Australian soldiers had been endangered during the war as a result of Communist agents illegally informing Moscow of details of convoy sailings.

Mr. Landeman concluded his address by saying:—

"I sometimes wonder whether t-day Moscow is not being tipped off about the industrial disturbances taking place in Australia."

There is no occasion for mere wonder; it can be taken as certain that Moscow knows exactly what is happening in Australia.

The new U.S. Ambassador to Italy, Mr. James Dunn, began his appointment by praising the Italian Socialist party in a speech to the Italian Labor Council in New York. This address coincided with the granting of a large "American" loan to Italy.

We are hearing little about the alleged de-Nazification of Germany, but brief reports appearing in some papers reveal that most of those who actively supported the policy of war are getting off with light fines.

No doubt this is all that will happen to Dr. Schacht.

The Hamburg De-Nazification Panel recently exonerated Geheimrat Bucher, one of the heads of Germany's biggest electrical trust, A.E.G. Most of Germany's big trusts and cartels are, of course, closely connected with cartels in Great Britain and America.

In praising the great "democracy" being practised in Soviet Russia, Communist propaganda makes a great point of the fact that the people in Russia are very busy on all types of committees for dealing with their affairs. Accepting this propaganda as reasonably accurate, it would appear that the Russians must spend nearly all their non-working time on committees.

The more the business of living comes under the control of politics, the less time the people have to live their own lives in their own way. Already politics unfortunately take up too much of our time. While some people with the planning disease might like to spend all their time working on committees dealing with the distribution of butter and such matters, the ordinary citizen is content to leave them to private organisations and to indicate by a money vote just what he wants or does not want. We have been hearing a lot of inspired propaganda about some community centres in Australia. But in one particular centre that the writer has in mind, community control of the only store has not been the great success that was predicted. When there was more than one store, Mrs. Smith, if not satisfied with price or service at one store, could simply exercise control by going to one of the other stores. But now she is expected to be "community minded" and take her grievances to the committee controlling the community store. In most cases she will not be bothered doing this, with the result that the few planners are allowed to do as they like. This obviously happens in Russia.

The more complicated politics become, the less chance or inclination the elector has of making himself familiar with what is happening. The result is more and more corruption. The business of politics must be drastically reduced to a few simple principles, which all electors can understand and make use of without the waste of too much time. Although electors must face up to the political racket, it is not surprising that a great number of them refuse to take very much interest.

The recent annual conference of the Commonwealth Exhibitors' Association expressed

NOTES on the NEWS

An admission of "vast production stimulated by war" is made by the Chairman of the Preparatory Commission on World Food Proposals (Viscount Bruce). That's a contrast from the world-famine talk of recent date—sort of changing the propaganda record.

The same Viscount Bruce also says: "The Commission is convinced the solution is expansion of consumption—not restriction."

But, you see, this argument is merely being used to speed up the world food control scheme, in which Bruce now has a very special interest; it does not indicate a conversion to sane economics.

PRICES PROTEST: A report from Sydney, in the press of January 30, tells of growing resentment against price-fixing, expressed at a meeting of 200 greengrocers. The meeting recommended, "the immediate lifting of price control." The president of the N.S.W. Fruit Shopkeepers' Association (Mr. T. C. Brabham), said: "the regulations have outlived their usefulness, and only help the exploiter to take away trade from shopkeepers." And so, more and more people now see that price fixing is a boon for the underworld; the honest trader has no chance of competing with the black-marketed, who has no scruples or fears about the penalties. Even the not-so-honest trader makes the maximum price the minimum, and sells the lowest quality goods at the maximum price because it's legal to do so. When will workers and their dumb leaders wake up to this?

FISCAL FALLACY: The attempt by the International Trade Organisation, abetted by our "certified" economists, to abolish Empire Preferences is being strongly opposed by the Director of the Associated Chambers of Manufacturers (Mr. L. Withall), who says: "The final outcome of this policy must be confusion. It means early cancellation of those numerous bilateral trade agreements with Empire and other countries under which, for many years, Australia has conducted her external trade." We yet may be betrayed into this scheme sponsored by a bunch of international racketeers who, amongst other things, will have the authority to control our primary exports and our imports. Mr. Withall is to be congratulated for his stand.

TAXATION TENTACLES: The extent to which tax tentacles are strangling Australian citizens is seen in the following figures supplied by the Acting Commonwealth Statistician (Mr. Barry). A total of £378,205,000 was paid in direct and indirect taxation for Commonwealth and State purposes in the financial year ending June 30, 1946. This represents £51/0/5 per head. For 1941 (war year), the amount per head was £25/14/5; so our peacetime taxation has jumped 100% higher. In 1939, the last pre-war year, the tax per head was £17/19/6—showing a subsequent jump of nearly 200% in seven years. Even at the pre-war level we were among the highest taxed people in the world. There should surely be no difficulty in returning to that figure. This is a reasonable demand that every elector should make on his or her political servants.

FEASTS AND FAMINES: Dr. L. G. Male, of the Australian Red Cross, is reported as

J. T. LANG ON THE REFUGEE RACKET

Following close on the heels of the blunt statement of Mr. H. B. Gullett, M.H.R. (vide Melbourne "Argus," February 12), last week's (February 14) issue of Sydney "Century" published an outspoken front page article on the subject of the "refugee" racket, under the heading, "Reffo. Stench Grows." The writer was Mr. J. T. Lang, M.H.R., and his article read as follows:—

The stench from Minister Calwell's refugee scheme is rising higher and higher. How stronger must it become before the Government realises that a public inquiry is essential into this unsavoury racket?

It began when the Minister claimed that he had decided on humanitarian grounds to permit a few refugees to come to Australia. It has now reached the stage where the arrival of refugees is a flowing tide and the Minister's function seems to be that of a rubber stamp.

As each boatload arrives, Mr. Calwell says it will be the last of its kind, and that future shipments will be better regulated. But the ink is barely dry on his statement when another shipload arrives that is even worse than the one before.

The Minister becomes angry when there is any publicity about his refugee immigration scheme. The Jewish agent who boarded the latest steamer in Sydney Harbour also became angry. He exclaimed that publicity would cost his organisation two thousand permits. But what caused the Minister's anger?

When first announced, the Minister's policy was made to seem that he was permitting some refugees already here to bring out their close relatives. It seemed to be a personal matter.

But it soon changed into a matter of organising a stream of immigration of Jews from Germany, Austria, France and Shanghai—from all parts of the compass.

Even the precious landing permits were not issued by the ordinary Government channel. Minister Calwell, in an exultant speech, said that he had issued 2000 landing permits. He made the speech at the Maccabean Hall, Darlinghurst, last year.

The peculiar feature of his statement was that these permits had all been typed out by a clerical staff provided by the Jewish organisation in Sydney.

Right from the commencement the thing seems to have been taken out of the hands of the Department, which would customarily have dealt with it.

Almost every day the newspapers carry some news about the people who want to come to live in Australia. Americans are waiting round in San Francisco hoping for transport to Australia.

Dutchmen want to come here. Norway has its Australian clubs formed by Norwegians anxious to make their home here. Australia House is besieged with inquiries from people in Britain who want to come here.

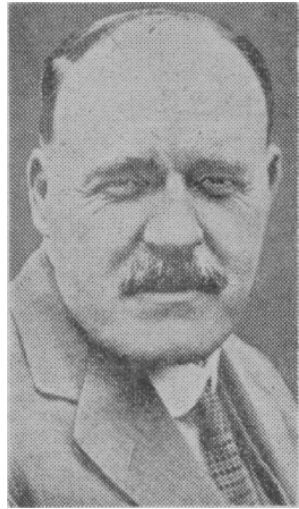

But to all these people we have the same reply. No boats to bring them, no homes for them to live in when they get here. Altogether a most discouraging picture.

But with the refugees it is different. They can find ships. It doesn't matter whether they are in Holland, France, Egypt or Shanghai, there's always a boat that will pick them up in their hundreds and bring them here.

Ordinarily, we have no warning they are coming. The first we hear is when a ship puts into an Australian port and the newspapers discover that it has on board hundreds of refugees from some unlikely port.

Either the Minister is deliberately trying to surround the refugee trade with a hush policy or he doesn't know they are coming until the newspapers report that a fresh boatload is at some Australian port.

On Tuesday, the "Telegraph" published a statement by the Minister. He said that he had been in touch with the Australian Minister in Holland to have the refugees on the Johan de Witt restricted to 25 per cent. of the passengers.

On Wednesday, the "Herald" said that the Minister had said that this restriction would not apply to the Johan de Witt, but to all later vessels.

And so it goes on. Things are always going to be different in the vessel that hasn't yet sailed.

The Minister is failing to take strong action either because he doesn't want to or it isn't in his power to do anything.

When I tried to raise this matter in Parliament last session I met with a united front between the Minister and the leader of the Opposition, Mr. Menzies. He was even more emphatic than the Minister that the hush must be kept up.

But even a united front between the Government and the Opposition will not be able to keep the lid on this scandal much longer.

Counter charges of anti-Semitism will no longer serve as a smoke screen. The people want the facts.

market garden, bisected by roads and canals and beauty had been abolished, for beauty led to inequality. All places of amusement had been banned as vicious and degrading, for the histrionic temperament was held to be unequal; games and sports were likewise banned for the same reason.

BOOKS DESTROYED

The citizens worked in factories or in the market gardens, to which they were taken by State-controlled electric transport. The remaining hours were spent in rest or in discussion of the evils of the past. Books were destroyed, for the Old Learning was fraught with inequalities, and the main theme of life was the Destiny of Humanity. There was a State religion whose god was the Majority. Needless to say, the national beverage was Cocoa.

The dream concluded with a further query by Jerome as to the incidence of suicide, but he was informed that this never occurred. And indeed on looking again at the inhabitants he observed the same quiet, troubled expression, which he had seen on the faces of oxen and sheep.

Was Jerome really dreaming, or was he, perchance, a prophet new inspired? — Roderick Bright in "Weekly Review," London, 12/12/46.

MUNICIPAL COUNCILS TO BE LIQUIDATED

Another step in the centralisation of power is the attack on Local Government, which is proceeding steadily and with tragically little public opposition in various parts of Australia.

In Sydney the new Local Government Bill, which the Government will introduce this year provides for the amalgamation of the existing 67 shires and municipalities in the County of Cumberland into eight city areas under the administration of eight city councils.

If Parliament passes the Bill, the Minister for Local Government (Mr. Cahill) will select 114 aldermen to take over from the present 700 aldermen and councillors.

The provisional aldermen will administer the new areas until December 31, 1947.

From that date, aldermen elected at ordinary council elections will take over.

Mr. Treant, M.L.A., said: "The principle that the Minister should choose his own aldermen is on a par with the high-handed actions of alien dictators."

It is also wrong for the Minister to assume that the people and Parliament will agree to his proposals to wipe out the existing councils which have done such fine work."

INCREASE THE PRESSURE

"But even isolated Canberra is beginning to feel the pressure from all sections of the community."

—Canberra Commentary in Melbourne "Argus" of February 8.

This item of information should stir all democrats into increased action. In each locality where there is no Voters' Policy Association readers, should immediately form one—it doesn't matter if there are only a few members for a start—and get the tax-reduction campaign under way. Obtain a supply of demand-letters TODAY and increase the pressure, which is growing daily at Canberra. The present stream of letters going to Members must be increased to a flood, a flood that will sweep away the destructive taxation policies being imposed upon us at present.

VICTORIAN COMPOST SOCIETY

A demonstration of composting and an exhibition of produce grown in organically fertilised soil will be held in the grounds of the Old Colonists' Homes, Rushall Crescent, North Fitzroy, on Saturday, February 22.

The proceedings will be officially opened by Mr. Creman, M.L.A., at 3 p.m., and a cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested.

SOVIET WAY WITH WHARFIES

Russian waterside workers have a harder row to hoe than their Australian counterparts, according to a sailor on the Norwegian freighter Tai Yin at Brisbane.

Three months ago his ship berthed at Vladivostok with a general cargo from Oslo.

The Russian wharfies, he said, were assembled under armed guard and marched in military fashion to the ship. The guard detailed 20 men to each hold.

The wharfies worked a 12-hour shift with a half-hour break for lunch. There was no break for smoko.

PRESIDENT OF AUSTRALIAN PRIMARY PRODUCERS' UNION CONDEMNS HIGH TAXATION

The Federal President of the Australian Primary Producers' Union, Captain J. A. Robilliard, of Camperdown, Victoria, has sent the following letter to the Prime Minister, Mr. J. B. Chifley:—

"As president of the Australian Primary Producers' Union, representing the men and women who are the workers who produce the nation's wealth under great stress of long hours, I write this letter to you. Those people also have to contend with droughts and all pests that crawl and fly, only to find at the end of their harvest, if any, that the crippling burden of taxation has hit them far too severely. In the dairying districts in which I live, I have men coming to me almost daily telling me of the long hours that they and their wives and families have worked only to find that nearly all their labours have gone in high taxation.

"This undoubtedly is going to react against the production of butter, for men are reducing their herds, which means they will produce less, and this is a very bad thing for our nation. I am an Australian, and I write these few lines in that spirit of co-operation and unity, which is so essential for the advancement of our country. Trusting that you, as Prime Minister of this great nation, will try and do something to lessen the burden of taxation for the men who work so hard to produce the nation's wealth."

We suggest to Captain Robilliard that it is futile to trust to Mr. Chifley or any other Member of Parliament. He and the members of his Primary Producers' Union should join with all other sections of the community in demanding by personal letters to local Members of Federal Parliament that they voice the electors' policy at Canberra.

NON-MILITARY WAR AGAINST BRITISH EMPIRE

production system from the shackles of the present economic policies—not forgetting, of course, to keep ourselves free of such international entanglements as Bretton Woods. One of the great shackles on our production system is undoubtedly high taxation. An attack upon high taxation is an attack upon our enemies. A drastic reduction in all taxation would have a most stimulating effect upon food production, production which could be used to alleviate the plight of our sorely pressed kith and kin in the British Isles.

There are, unfortunately, some very stupid people in this country who, if not actually anti-British, fail to see that our future is dependent upon Great Britain's future. To suggest that a handful of seven million whites can indefinitely hold this vast continent, without assistance, is folly of the most dangerous kind. Perhaps Dr. Evatt and others may be prepared to turn us into the 49th State of the U.S.A., but this would lead to the destruction of our traditional way of life and all that it means.

The British way of life is a way of life, which permits of both individual security and individual liberty. We thought it worth the loss of tens of thousands of fine young lives in two world wars. Are we now to say that these lives—"the red sweet wine of youth"—were poured out so that international plotters might reduce us to the status of serfs? No, a thousand times no! Our enemies are only strong because so many of us are apathetic. Let us take up the challenge.

In all parts of Australia there is now under way a growing attack upon the destructive policy of high taxation. You can help this attack. If you will not fight for yourself, no one else can fight for you.

WAS IT A DREAM OR A FORECAST?

In the year 1891 Jerome K. Jerome related that a friend of his had asked him to write a "sensible" book, a book to make people think. The author enquired whether this could be done, to which his friend replied, "Well, you can at least try."

And so he wrote his "Diary of a Pilgrimage," in which he included an account of a dream and entitled it "The New Utopia." As this dream seems to be coming true before our eyes, we may perhaps be forgiven for reminding our readers of some of its salient features.

It seems that, after attending a dinner at the National Socialist Club, Jerome fell asleep and awoke in a glass case in the Museum of Curiosities on February 11, 2001, but one is tempted to wonder whether he did not over-estimate the time factor and actually woke up in 1947.

He was taken out of the glass case by an old man who was arranging stuffed lizards, and after being dusted was shown round the city, which was very clean and very quiet.

The streets were all designated by numbers, and ran out from each other at right angles, and all presented precisely the same appearance. The citizens were uniformly clad in grey tunics and trousers, all had metal numbers stamped on their collars, and women were only distinguishable from men by having even numbers.

"MAJORITY RULE"

All had black hair, black being the colour chosen by the Majority.

Names had been abolished as they led to inequality—at first, the Montmorencys and the Smythes objected to this system, but were overruled by the Smiths and Joneses who were in the vast Majority.

The people did not wash themselves, as all washing was done by the State. In the bad old days there had been two classes, the Clean and the Dirty, but with the advent of Total Equality this invidious distinction was abolished. All lived in huge blocks of flats: men in one part of the city, women in the other; each block contained a thousand beds, a hundred to each room. Every morning at seven a bell was rung and the inhabitants sprang out, made their beds and filed down to the bathrooms to be washed and shaved and to have their hair done by State officials.

Meals were served in communal dining rooms, and vegetarians being in a Majority, these were always of a vegetarian nature. Plum duff was served as a treat on Saturdays.

MARRIAGE ABOLISHED

Marriage had been abolished, since love led to the formation of groups and encouraged men to strive for the happiness of the few rather than for the good of the State. Love stirred the vice of ambition in men's hearts and made them wish to leave a name behind them that their children might be proud to bear. From the warmth of the domestic hearth grew up the Vipers of Comradeship and Independence, and these were deemed contrary to the interests of the State. The Family stood forth as the main foe and led to inequality, while love implied the existence of joy and sorrow, and these made equality impossible.

Every spring, as many children as the State required were "arranged for," and they were removed at birth to be cared for by the State lest their mothers should grow to love them. Those who grew to more than average size had an arm or a leg removed to make things more equal, while intelligent children had an operation for slightly softening the brain to reduce their minds to the common level.

Such was the will of the Majority. (Here Jerome interposed a question about the right of the minority to its arms and legs and heads, but he was informed that a minority had no rights.) The countryside had become a vast

THE SITUATION AND THE OUTLOOK

By C. H. DOUGLAS, in "The Social Creditor," England.

In order to disembarass oneself of the confusion involved in the use of words such as Fascism, Communism, Socialism and the like, and to avoid the elementary fallacy of supposing that our troubles began with the present so-called Labour Government, and can be ended by merely replacing it by a so-called Conservative administration, there is no better discipline than to turn back to the Mond-Turner Conference, and to observe its absorption in P.E.P.

The Mond-Turner Conference consisted of six of the most powerful industrialist employers in Great Britain, dominated by the international Zionist Jew, Sir Alfred Moritz Mond and his able coadjutor and co-racialist, Sir Hugo Hirst (Hirsch). Mond had belonged to both main political Parties; so had some of the others. The six so-called Labour members of the Conference included Right and Left Wing Trades Unionists, Socialists and a Communist.

It would be difficult to get together a body of men less "political" in the Parliamentary sense. They were not there to discuss policy; they were there to make a given policy work. That policy was the World Empire of Big Business.

"The high purpose of the Conference could not be more amply illustrated than by the fact that the first agreed resolution published to the world [my emphasis] was a Joint Memorandum on the Gold Reserve and its relations with industry. It is merely necessary for me to point out that the issue of that Memorandum to the Chancellor of the Exchequer had a definite result in the policy which he pursued."—Sir A. M. Mond, at Harvard University, 1928.

His Master's Voice, in fact.

FINANCIER-SOCIALIST PLOT

It is necessary not to lose sight of the undiscussed question of policy; but, before dealing with it, the sequence of events following the Mond-Turner Conference should be noted. The Conference was in 1926.

MAJOR C. H. DOUGLAS.

The Bank of England centralised currency in 1928; the financial crash and the world depression began in 1929; P.E.P. and the U.S. New Deal became dominant in 1932. Selected nominees of Big Business trained at the London School of Economics were installed in key positions in Australia and Ottawa. Mr. Coldwell, an Englishman with a strong dislike for England, had the extraordinary fortune to meet Mr. Nash of New Zealand at Regina when he was so successfully founding the Canadian Socialist Party, and discovered that their views were identical. Dr. Arnold Toynbee announced that "we" are working with all our might to undermine the sovereignty of our respective nations. "Hitler" undermined them by force, and at the outbreak of war a carefully prepared but unsuccessful propaganda was launched for "Union Now with Britain" [sic]. "Union" was, of course, carelessly disguised absorption of the British Empire by the United States.

Two main features of this period can be discerned without much difficulty: The pressure to organise larger and larger units was accompanied by bigger and worse disasters. This pressure is the outcome of what, at one end of the industrial scale, is called Socialism, at the other end, Rationalisation. Both mean Monopoly under the guise of Collectivism, and both mean De-Nationalisation—an economic not a political organisation. And the second feature is that the British Empire is an insurmountable obstacle as such, and must be disintegrated before it can be replaced by economic world control. It may be recalled that William Randolph Hearst made just such a statement in an unguarded moment many years ago.

The outcome of the latest catastrophe, the Second World War, is a fresh drive towards both these objectives from the same origins. And the two ends of the scale are, one unconsciously and the other consciously, working towards both objectives at the same time. That is what is coming to be called the Financier-Socialist Plot.

A "POLITICAL" EMPIRE

At this point, the divergence between a political and a business Empire becomes easier to discern. British Statesmen of the pre-twentieth-century type were constantly accused of hypocrisy. Without examining the grounds for this charge too closely, the mere fact that it was made is instructive. Hypocrisy has been well and truly defined as the tribute vice pays to virtue. British tradition, therefore, either had, or pretended to have, a policy. What was it? Certainly not, traditionally, "business." Napoleon's gibe that we are a nation of shopkeepers was meant to be, and was accepted as, offensive at the time it was made. Nowadays we are not such successful shopkeepers, but regard shop keeping as our highest aim.

Many books have been written on this subject, but a trivial phrase is perhaps as illuminating as any of them. In even remote parts of South America, thousands of people, many of whom have no idea whether England is a continent, a country, or a planet, and may never have seen an Englishman, assure each other of their sincerity by saying "Palabra de Ingles."—"On the word of an Englishman." Notice the suggestion of stability, of continuity, and the contrast with the predatory methods of "Enabling Legislation," the Managerial State, and other current fashions, which accompany our decadence.

The point is not so much—although, of course, that is important—that a political Empire has a certain set of principles. It is that those principles should be stable. Out of this, as it were by a side wind, came success and power. The conception is closely allied to "quality."

EMPIRE OF "BUSINESS"

Now the direct aim of an Empire of Business is power, and the ultimate material power is that over Life and Death—War. But the intermediate device is Fashion—Instability, Change. "Palabra de Ingles," if it has any place at all in it, is a business device helpful towards increased exports. Use it on your letter headings. Learn from Marx and Lenin the uses of lying. In fact, learn from anybody or anything except the makers of your own history and from that history itself.

Consider then Karl Marx (Mordecai): "The mode of production in material life determines the general character of the social, political and spiritual processes of life." ("Critique of Political Economy.") If that means anything at all—I am not sure that it does—it means that our desperate social, political and spiritual processes derive from "the mode of production."

I don't think "the mode of production" was even remotely understood by Marx. What he meant was the business system. And I should say myself that it is the political and spiritual processes, which are evidenced by the business system. Hence the projected World Empire of Big Business and the increasing desperation of our plight. (To be continued.)

VOTERS' ASSOCIATION FOR TAX REDUCTION

The three following resolutions were submitted and carried unanimously at the inaugural meeting of the above association, on 4/2/47, at Lower Adyar Hall, Bligh-street, Sydney.

The meeting was assembled as a public meeting, and advertised in "S.M. Herald" of 4/2/47.

(1) That we now form ourselves into an association to be known as "The Voters' Association for TAX REDUCTION (Non-party political)."

(2) That we now appoint an executive of five, to give effect to the policy of the association; and we hereby authorise such executive to take all lawful steps to achieve REDUCTION OF TAXATION.

(The following were nominated and elected: Messrs. Carr, Budge, Ferguson, Gustard and Macara.)

(3) That membership fee be fixed at two shillings; but that those who are desirous of rendering additional financial assistance are invited to make such contributions to the funds of the association as they feel disposed. Those here present, who make the necessary application, be regarded as foundation members, without payment of fee.

TRADE POLICY IN HANDS OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

Under this heading, the Melbourne "Herald" of February 17 published the following significant report:—

CANBERRA, Monday. —Unless the Chifley Government's past policy is completely reversed at the International Trade and Unemployment Conference at Geneva in April, the whole future of Australian trade and production policy will be settled by the large party of public servants comprising the delegations without reference to the industries in Australia whose future will depend on the decisions reached.

Eight "advisers" from manufacturing industries and commerce, the primary industries and trade unions are accompanying the party.

They have no official standing in the delegation and no authority. Their position will be similar to that of the "advisers" who formed part of the Australian delegation to the San Francisco conference, and who at no time during the conference were consulted or permitted to exercise any determinative influence on the work of the delegation.

It has since been notorious that the advisers to the San Francisco delegation were ignored by the official team. This was bluntly stated in the House of Representatives, after his return, by Mr. McEwen, M.H.R., who was one of the advisers.

No guarantees have been provided that the larger team of advisers accompanying the Geneva delegation will have any more standing or any more influence on its work than was the case at San Francisco.

More than ever before, the officials in the Geneva delegation will be dominated by public service economists without practical knowledge, or even a direct working knowledge, of the industries whose future will be determined.

At past trade conferences the departments of Customs and Commerce have provided the key men to the official delegations, in general, officers with an intimate and long-standing knowledge of Australian primary and secondary industries were selected for this job.

The Geneva delegation, however, will be led by the Director-General of Reconstruction (Dr. H. C. Coombs), a theoretical economist with no practical knowledge of the detailed workings of either of the departments concerned or of manufacturing industries, primary production or commerce.

Dr. Coombs' two principal assistants are also officers whose qualifications are purely academic and whose background is that of the Public Service.

SHIRE COUNCIL JOINS THE TAX-CUT DEMAND

At a meeting of the Leeton (N.S.W.) Shire Council on February 13, the following motion was brought forward by Councillor O. J. Washington and carried unanimously:—

"That the Leeton Shire Council write to the Prime Minister, the Hon. J. B. Chifley, M.H.R., through Mr. J. I. Langtry, Federal Member for the Riverina, further that the following resolution as forwarded to Mr. Chifley be sent direct to the Secretary, Federal Labour Caucus, the Hon. E. J. Ward, Minister for Transport and External Territories, Senator John Armstrong; J. T. Lang, M.H.R., and be circularised to all Shires and Municipalities in the State of N.S.W. regarding their co-operation in this urgent national matter:

"That this, the Leeton Shire Council, views with alarm and consternation the present trend to stagnation of the internal economy of our country. We are of the opinion that the present unsatisfactory state of affairs has been brought about by the Federal Government's persistence in maintaining the wartime high rate of direct and indirect Taxation. We believe the present HIGH in taxation has destroyed the individual initiative of the Rural Producer and Industrialist (covering all Primary and Secondary Industries), and last but not least the Workers in all walks of life.

"We request on behalf of the Electors whom we represent and the Australian people generally that the Federal Government give consideration to an immediate adequate reduction to both direct and indirect taxation."

describing the British people as "jaded and exhausted after seven years of food rationing." Another report by a Melbourne "Age" special correspondent tells of "the lavish entertainment in the Reich capital during the first Allied Military Ball. Staggering delicacies were included in the buffet. Russians provided sucking pigs and caviar. British and Americans supplied turkeys, chicken, game, veal, ham and beef." If that contrast was the subject of a "Bluey and Curly" cartoon it would be seen by many thousands of people; but these reports were isolated and probably went unnoticed. They need to be connected to register.

BUDGET BLOWS: President Truman's £11,725 million budget may be reduced to £9849 million by the dominantly "Republican" Congress, on the grounds that the proposed budget expenditure would not be in accord with the "will of the American people." It's a safe bet that even the pruned figure is not to the people's liking. It was a sorry day for the people of all countries when power to tax was vested in Governments. This power has been so abused that it is time that something was done to limit government levies to certain stated proportions of incomes and make any alterations in the rate subject to referendum. We can surely learn the lesson of today that no body of men can be trusted with such terrific unlimited power.

SOVIET SUBMARINES: U.S. Armed Service Committee has recommended building 2000 submarines because Russia has failed to keep her promise to destroy all German submarines she captured in excess of ten. In addition to this, Russia is reported to be building a submarine fleet in German plants with the aid of German engineers. With the recognised German technical ability behind it, the Russian threat becomes more ominous. It will be remembered that Russia permitted Germany to build planes and to train pilots in Russian territory to overcome the armaments limitations imposed by the Versailles Treaty, and it is plain to see that, despite the recent bust-ups, the Red Fascists and the German Fascists are once again collaborating for warlike purposes—only this time the Russian gangsters have full control.

CONQUERING CLAIM: Commenting on the claims made by opponents of Bretton Woods that it would give U.S. control of the world, the Albury "Border Morning Mail" of January 20 published the following from the book, "America Conquers Britain," by Ludwell Denny: "We were Britain's colony once; she will be our colony before she is done; not in name, but in fact. . . . We shall not make Britain's mistake. Too wise to try to govern the world, we shall merely own it. . . . our weapons are money and machines. . . . That is why our conquest is so easy, so inevitable." Wonder if by "we" he really means the "Jews." It sounds mighty like the plan outlined in the "Protocols." —O.B.H.

"THE MYSTERIOUS PROTOCOLS"

The book published under the above title contains the actual text of the "Protocols of The Learned Elders of Zion." There is also a summary of each "Protocol" and subject matter relating it to present-day events. It is available from the United Electors of Australia, McEwen House, 343 Little Collins Street, Melbourne, at 2/7d. posted. Make sure of your copy by ordering now.

HELP TO GET YOUR TAXES DOWN

Tax-reduction demand-letter forms are now obtainable from The Honorary Secretary, Victorian League of Rights, 9 Durham Road, Surrey Hills, E.10, Vic. The price of the forms is 2/- per 50/- or 3/6 per 100, post-free.

In addition to canvassing fellow-citizens, it is suggested that actionists who intend doing something about distributing forms should contact individuals in as many organisations as possible with a view to enlisting their aid.

This is an issue in which Laborites, Liberals and others of different political views, can co-operate for their individual and mutual benefit. Individuals in these organisations are, we are sure, just waiting for a lead to go into action.

The "New Times" is most anxious to receive progress reports as the campaign advances in the various centres.

Write for your tax-reduction demand-letter forms NOW, and let us know what YOU are doing from time to time.

SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS & THE F.B.I.

(From "The Social Crediter," England.)

From time to time we are confronted with the problem presented by our inability to decide whether we are in the hands of rogues or, as we believe, conceited fanatics, incompetent in practical matters but useful to hidden Masters who plan our ruin and will acquire the assets.

This question arises afresh in contemplation of the address of Sir Stafford Cripps to the F.B.I. [Federation of British Industries] on the subject of Exports. Sir Stafford said:

"With the existing level of exports round about 110 per cent, of pre-war volume [our emphasis. Notice the omission of price—Editor, T.S.C.], we were still well down on our balance of payments. [...] because 50 per cent, of our imports came from those countries [U.S.A. and Canada] whereas only 14 per cent, exports went there.

"We are therefore using the rest of our exports to pile up an excess of immediately unusable foreign currency—soft currency, because we cannot buy with them, or pay off some portion of sterling credits accumulated during the war, or else buy articles we need.

"... Hitherto, we had been accustomed to consider exports as the overspill from the home market [...] may it not be sound policy to make goods primarily for the export market, with an overspill into the home market, rather than the other way round?"

We pause to allow that idea to sink in.

Leaving Sir Stafford Cripps' ideas of Policy let us examine his figures. Only 14 per cent, of an "export drive," the success of which his fellow traveller, Dr. Dalton, says has exceeded his wildest hopes, goes to the countries, which supply 50 per cent, of our imports. An examination of the advertisement columns of U.S. and Canadian papers makes it fairly certain that these are all consumer goods, which we lack at home, and, like whisky, are being sold at one-sixth of home prices. In return for these, we get a certain amount of food, most of which we are giving to U.N.R.R.A., and Germany, and some of which is reaching Russian satellites, and after this, are running into debt to pay for the raw material of 86 per cent, of our exports to countries with "soft" currencies, in return for which we get nothing.

This is a state of affairs under a totalitarian Government, which gibbers the word "Plan" at every criticism of its actions. We shall return in a moment to the Economic Policy of Sir Stafford Cripps, as expounded by himself before the Federation of British Industries, but in the meantime we suggest that our readers consider the curious fact that only Great Britain, of the "victorious" nations, has a lowered standard of living and an increase in exports. And, also to contemplate the loss on our capital exports on (merely as exhibits); (a) the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada; (b) the Armavir-Touapsee, and the Black Sea-Kuban Railways in Russia, and (c) the British-owned Argentine Railways, the Primitiva Co., and Brazilian Loans in South America.

Now to revert to Sir Stafford Cripps' policy. Although only 14 per cent, of the 110 per cent, of exports (i.e., 15 per cent, of pre-war) goes to pay for the raw material imported or supplied for the whole 110 per cent, and this 14 per cent, includes consumable goods, such as whisky, biscuits, tweeds and many other articles vitally needed by our own population, the wages paid for the production of the whole 110 per cent, are distributed in this country as an effective demand against the limited amount of goods for sale to the general public. That is to say, a Minister, who with his colleagues is constantly mouthing "the danger of inflation," and a Chancellor of the Exchequer who says he is conducting the finance of the country "with a song in his heart," are paying out eight times the wage costs of every production unit for which they receive any return (as Sir Stafford will not buy the imports available to "soft" currencies). With a realistic financial system, P.A.Y.E. under these conditions ought to be 17/6 in the pound, instead of which Dr. Dalton is obviously hinting at transferring the inflation to prices.

So far as the situation is expounded by Sir Stafford Cripps, we have spent every working day since the cessation of hostilities in draining this country of its potential production, and piling up debt in order to do it. After the 1918 armistice we had a boom, followed by a comparatively mild slump. We have had no boom; we are heading for a far worse slump, and the immense stocks of surplus materials, which provided the public with a very real stockpile during that entirely avoidable slump, have disappeared.

The luxury goods, which this country can and does produce, and is producing for export, are being simply given away. They are urgently required here to counteract the dangerous temper arising from Sir Stafford and his "austerity." The Cabinet, of course, does not notice this in its periodic rounds of Food-Talks.

concern at the effect the high entertainment tax was having upon picture-theatre attendances. It was felt that the public did not realise that entertainment tax absorbed from 25 to 31 per cent, of the amount paid for admission. Film exhibitors should get behind the tax-reduction campaign. They could even distribute demand-letters to their patrons entering or leaving the theatres. They would find everyone in favour of cheaper amusement.

It was recently pointed out in these notes that the partial lifting of controls in America was having an immediate beneficial effect. The following item from the "Sunday Times" (England) of January 19, provides further confirmation of this:

"American prices have begun to drop. Each day brings new announcements of reductions. Ford Motors have cut prices up to £12 a car, though they have a million unfulfilled orders and are still making units at a loss, the theory being that mass output and production will turn the loss into profit. The prices of butter and milk in New York are falling at the season when they should be rising. Shops are announcing bigger than usual clearance sales, and assistants are becoming polite again. Simultaneously, production is rising. Dozens of lines have passed the pre-war monthly peaks, although accumulated shortages continue. While other nations started methodically down the re-conversion stairway when hostilities ended, the United States metaphorically jumped out of the window.

Controls over labour, prices and priorities ended with a rush, and America plunged precipitately into 'free enterprise' capitalism. The first year's results are now appearing. Private profits have been staggering. After taxes they are still a third higher than in the year before. Simultaneously, prices have shot up. Soaring living costs were largely responsible for the second worst strike in history, the first, significantly being 1919, another re-conversion period. But there is no question that production has been amazingly stimulated... Even in wartime the outpouring of goods raised living standards to an all-time high. Now civilian production has topped all peace records and is still climbing. The basic theory is that production, and production alone, will solve all problems and sooner or later automatically cut prices. The latter prediction is actually coming true, at least in part."

If the socialist planners in control of the unfortunate British people were as brilliant as they suggest they are, surely their planning would make provision for all emergencies?

It is all too obvious that the present power crisis in Great Britain was the result of Mr. Shinwell's inability to build up adequate coal stocks during the summer.

The disastrous results of planning from the top instead of the individual making his own plans are now obvious to all those whose minds are not completely addled with propaganda.

* * * *

Although his appointment as Governor-General was announced on January 31, only a few days later Mr. W. J. McKell reduced the institution of the Crown to the gutter of party politics when he tried to have his political nominee elected leader of the New South Wales Labor Party. When he failed in his endeavours, it is reported that he left the N.S.W. Labor Party Caucus room white with rage.

The most alarming feature of the McKell appointment to the highest public office in the country, is the number of people who either see nothing wrong with the appointment or who express the opinion that the institution of the Crown serves no useful purpose. There was a time when there was a more general understanding of the value of Upper Houses and the institution of the Crown. "Progress," now taken as something automatic, has produced a cynical rabble, which cannot replace with some practical alternative the traditions of the society they are tearing down. —E.D.B.

"THE VULTURES"

This heading is also the title of a pamphlet to hand from the British-Australian Association. The full text is as follows:—

Our country faces a very grave danger. The war has been "won." Our country, the Empire, the world, is "saved." But by whom, and for whom? Who has gained from the misery and suffering and the gallantry of six years of desperate warfare? Not the Australian people, nor our Empire kinfolk. Nor the people of America, of France or of any other nation, which sent its sons and daughters to fight the threat of world Fascism.

If we look facts squarely in the face we must see that the Jewish nation has won the war. In this, as in other countries they have, somehow, acquired what our men went to fight for. Houses, flats, other real estate, businesses, picked official positions have fallen to them like ripe plums.

The Use of "Persecution" as a Political Weapon.

They are using "persecution" as a political weapon, backed up by high finance, bribery and corruption as they have used it down the centuries. It is an important part of the Jewish plan of dispersal in order to gain a financial and political grip on countries where, other than as "persecuted refugees" they would not be welcomed.

The same tactics were responsible for transferring to America, Great Britain and the British Dominions, less than 30 years ago, millions of otherwise unwanted Jews. It is clear to those who study news reports that the hundreds of fantastic stories of "persecution" and "extermination" of Jews is mostly propaganda. Whilst it is not denied that the Nazis did perpetrate atrocities, there is no substance in belief that Jews suffered more than other races of people from the effects of the war. The story of six or more million Jews killed by Hitler—persistently plugged in Press, Radio and Film propaganda—is absurd in the light of cold logic. "Six million Jews killed." "Six million Jews killed." "Six million Jews killed." Week after week it is churned out. But this works out at nearly 3000 per day—every day of the week, for six years. Does it seem likely?

Do you know how many Polish people perished? How many English? How many French, Dutch, Norwegians, etc.? No! Only of "six million Jews"! The Jewish propaganda agencies churn it out, and because it is "big" news (after all, 6,000,000 people killed is big news) most of the world's press publish it. This is prepared the way for a "sympathetic understanding" for yet more "victims of Nazi persecution" to enter the country (with "nothing").

This influx must stop. This is no case of intolerance to aliens, for it is well known that the Jews are not at all tolerant to non-Jews. Their ruthless attitude toward the Arabs and the murdering of Britishers bear this out. Yet these dangerous anti-British people are flooding out to our country while 150 thousand of our own people wait with their names on the register at Australia House, London, hoping to join us in this (at present) British country. Furthermore, they are folk who did not attempt to leave their country at the first sign of war, and who suffered just as much persecution as the Jews—without complaint.

Both the Honourable Dr. EVATT and the Honourable Arthur A. Calwell, M.H.R., must answer questions on this question of Jewish migration to Australia. We don't want a further 50,000 anti-British Jews (with "nothing") flooding into this country that we have just fought a second major war for. There are already more than 70,000 Jews in Australia.

JEWS WHO HELPED HITLER.

Few people realise that Jews occupied top positions in the Hitler machine. Moses Myerbeer (alias Canaris), Director General of Military Intelligence (how many "refugee" agents did he send out to Australia?), General Milch, Nazi Air Force, and Doctor Hjalmar Schacht, German Finance Minister and close associate of Jewish International Banks, to name a few. Myerbeer, first reported killed by a British bomb, later reported at large in America—the other two were freed by the War Crimes Tribunal at Nuremberg! In fact Milch, who planned the air raids on London, was exonerated on the first day of the hearing. It is not very surprising to note that out of the 24 men charged with spying in Canada, 19 are Jews.

According to a Sydney weekly, in our own Canberra, of the fifteen examiners at the Patents Office five of them are foreign Jews. Significantly, 85% of the men in key positions in Russia are also Jews. Communism was founded by the Jew Mordecai, alias Karl Marx, who was financed by Bismarck, no doubt at the instigation of his Jewish advisers, Ballin, Rathenau and Bleichroder. And with the increase of persecuted Jews (with "nothing") Communism advances in Australia. Remember, it was the Jews imported from the East End of New York to Russia at the end of the 1914-18 War who lead the Revolution there.

Do not be misled by snarls of "Fascist propaganda" and the meaningless Jewish and Communist parrot-cry of "anti-Semi-

MR. BUTLER'S PROGRAMME

On Monday February 10, Mr. Eric Butler addressed an excellent meeting at Berri, South Australia. Stalwart Frank Watts was mainly responsible for the attendance. After the meeting a strong Voters' Policy Association was formed, and a decision made to start with the tax-reduction campaign immediately.

Mr. Butler arrived in Adelaide on Wednesday, February 12, and opened his tour under the auspices of the South Australian League of Rights in the Burnside Town Hall the same evening. In furtherance of the tax-reduction campaign being conducted by the South Australian League of Rights, Mr. Butler has addressed the following meetings: Burnside, February 12; Woodville, February 13; Unley, February 14; Lobethal, February 15; Walkerville, February 17; Prospect, February 18; Adelaide A.N.A. Hall, February 19; Thebarton, February 20. Tonight, February 21, Mr. Butler speaks at Henley Beach; tomorrow night, February 22, at Gawler; February 23, Botanical Gardens, Adelaide (afternoon meeting); February 24, Tanunda; February 25, Angaston; February 26, Kapunda. Where possible, lunch-hour addresses are being given.

Mr. Butler will leave Adelaide on February 27 and address a meeting at Horsham, Victoria, on February 28. This meeting has been arranged by the Horsham Voters' Policy Group.

SYDNEY MEETING.

Mr. Butler will leave Melbourne on the Sydney express on Monday evening, March 3. On March 4 he will address a meeting in Sydney. All Sydney readers who desire to help make this meeting a big success are urged to contact either the Social Credit Movement, 88 Pitt Street, or The Electoral Campaign, 296 Pitt Street.

QUEENSLAND TOUR.

Mr. Butler will open his Queensland tour in the School of Arts, Ann Street, Brisbane, on Thursday, March 6. Although we have received no details as yet, we understand that Mr. Butler will leave Brisbane immediately after the School of Arts meeting and address a series of meetings in the Federal electorate of Wide Bay. It is expected that meetings will be addressed at the following centres: Bundaberg, Maryborough, Coulston Lakes, Biggenden, Gooloolba, Gayndah, Eidsvold, Biloela, Monto and other centres. Mr. Butler will then return to Brisbane for a series of suburban meetings before leaving for Toowoomba. Mr. Butler expects to be in Queensland until early in May, so all those readers who would like to arrange a meeting are urged to contact Mr. A. W. Noakes, The Electoral Campaign, 142 Adelaide Street, Brisbane, IMMEDIATELY. Do not leave it until Mr. Butler actually arrives in Queensland. Arrangements must be made well in advance.

After his Queensland tour, Mr. Butler hopes to have some meetings in New South Wales to address on his way back to Victoria. New South Wales readers who would like to make use of Mr. Butler's services are urged to write to him, c/o Piron Yallock P.O., Victoria.

tism." This is used in order to confuse the mind and to stop critical examination of the activities of Jews. Furthermore, do not be misled by the Palestine propaganda. Most Zionists (and most Jews are Zionists) have no desire to go to Palestine and grow oranges! Palestine Jews are actually migrating to Australia. "Australuselum" comes within the Zionist plan of things to come, and by means of their wealth and "sympathy" they are flooding in, and with their "nothing," and aided by their cheque books (conveniently, most banks have a Jewish finger in their pie, with bank created credit-money out of the inkwell) plan to make this country theirs.

Protest to your Member of Parliament; demand an enquiry into what is going on, and ask your Representative if Madagascar would not be a more suitable home for these so-called "refugees." Ask your friends to read this article and bring the points raised in it up for frequent discussion. For this is a very grave matter for Australia, the ill effects of which will be felt by our children. Are they to be future slaves to Jewish exploiters? This is your responsibility.

Don't let this happen to Australia!
