Can We Stop The Dollar Gangsters?

A Call to All Loyal Britishers

The present British crisis is a major crisis for the whole British Empire. Looking back to the stability and, compared with today, comparative prosperity of the British Empire prior to the start of the First World War, it is almost inconceivable that this Empire should be reduced to the state where the people of the heart of that Empire are semi-starved while their Government openly submits to domination by Dollar Diplomacy from the United States of America. And there is obviously worse to come.

For years people laughed at the idea of a plot by International Zionist Jews to destroy or control the British Empire as a prelude to establishing complete World Dominion. But now they are being shocked from smug complacency by the ruthless tide of events. Several weeks ago we called attention to the disastrous terms of the American Dollar Loan, forced upon a British Socialist Government, which cowardly surrendered to the Dollar Diplomats, domiciled in the U.S.A.

So subservient to "America" has the British Government become, that obscure references in the cables prove that the details of Mr. Attlee's crisis speech last week were made available in America prior to their presentation in the British House of Commons. How do Australian Britishers like that? Before even the so-called representatives of the British people, or the British people, are told by their Prime Minister how much further they are expected to pull their belts in and how many more controls they must endure, their fate had to be made known to the Dollar Diplomats!

In spite of the present crisis, the result of disastrous policies pursued by a combination of fools and gangsters, we have no hesitation in saying that the British way of life can be saved from the utter destruction threatening. But it means a fight. It means that every responsible citizen in this, and every other British country has got to stand up and expose and oppose the policies, which have reduced us to the present state.

Moves for the centralisation of power over all metropolitan traffic are now nearing completion, and a Bill to co-ordinate (blessed word) rail, road and tramway systems under a SINGLE AUTHORITY is likely to be introduced by the State Government next session. Thus the tentacles of socialistic bureaucracy are being fastened on transport facilities. This centralisation, alias "co-ordination" is Communism in PRACTICE, and yet many who denounce Communism support this move.

We already have had experience in Victoria of the Transport Board stifling road competition to bolster-up inefficient State and semi-State transport monopolies, and we can be sure there's worse to come if the new Bill is passed. Another example of restriction comes from Tasmania where Transport Komissars refused 12 additional road licences to the private transporters, because of a lack of road accommodation. Of course these Komissars would know better than those who were prepared to back the venture with their own money.

HOUSING HANDICAPS

Mr. Oswald Burt, of the Housing Commission, recently gave some interesting figures on housing costs, which illustrated the terrific handicaps facing potential home owners. He says that the minimum income necessary for reasonable home-ownership, excluding Government sponsored types, was nearly £800 per year. Because of inflated prices (caused by our wages-into-prices-system), would-be homeowners must forego their needs or risk being dragged into a financial abyss. This is almost as true of the Government sponsored near-slum types, which may now be let to those on the £500 p.a. mark. While our debt finance and inflationary wage system continues, this situation will remain. Unless wages and incomes are distributed without going through industry as costs, workers and others will have to remain in rooms—or, at best, Commission compounds—at inflated rentals.

PRODUCTION PEACE PARLEY

From a maze of words poured out at the Peace-in-Industry Conference, the tangible results appeared to be: (1) Government would give no clear-cut indication of assistance by reducing taxation; (2) Union Leaders opposed daily or weekly incentive payments (although prepared to examine yearly bonuses). All agreed that workers should receive proportionate share of increased production, but differed on method of achieving this end. Neither sides considered the all-important matter of distributing incomes in such a way that it would not go through industry as a cost, thus preventing price inflation. This is by far the most important matter for all sections of the community, especially those on low wage levels. Any yearly, or any

We have got to know the groups who have foisted policies of destruction upon us.

So-Called "Conservatives"

Mr. Churchill's criticism of the "British" Socialist Government was excellent as far as it went. But when Mr. Churchill mentioned the onerous conditions of the now infamous Dollar Loan, he neglected to point out that a large number of the British "Conservatives" voted for the acceptance of the Loan and all the conditions attached to it—including Bretton Woods.

There was no reference to the fact that the Socialism, which had reduced our British kith and kin to the present sorry pass, has been built upon the very foundations, which his Coalition Government laid.

Neither was there any reference to the Industrial Charter released by the British "Conservatives," which states that the British "Conservatives," if returned to office at the next British elections, will carry on the nationalisation programme set under way by the Socialists.

other form of incentive payments that are recovered through prices will be quite use less. The National Production Bonus, based on production, and paid direct to individuals through the banking system is the only solution to this problem. Time will show the conference to be abortive. Meanwhile this idea must be pushed through all sections of the community.

COLLAPSING CONTROLS

State Ministers for Agriculture were recently warned by the Minister of Commerce (Mr. Pollard) that Commonwealth controls on marketing of agricultural commodities "were being retained on a doubtful constitutional Charter, and might collapse at any time." If that is correct it is all to the good, but fancy any Government which professes to strictly uphold the Law, operating under even a shadow of illegality? One could understand racketeers or confidence tricksters doing so, but not a Government, and a Labor one at that. Incidentally this may be a propaganda stunt to scare Primary Producers into retaining Marketing Boards. Other reports of "recessions" in food commodities may also be a part of this stunt. All of it may well be preparatory dope for another Referendum to fool the people into surrendering permanent power over food and Marketing to the Canberra Cabal. The fact that the people wisely said "No" previously will not worry these power lusters.

SATURDAY SHOPPING

Unionists are organising special campaigns to overcome the strong public opposition to No-Saturday-Work, or the five-day week. It should be possible for Unionists to operate the principle of a 40-hour week without the inconvenience of closing all

Here in Australia Mr. Menzies and Mr. Fadden have reacted to the British crisis by demanding that an Empire Conference be held. This may be reasonable as far as it goes, but we repeat that nothing can save the day except determined opposition to the policies of the international gangsters who are responsible for the present crisis. Neither Mr. Menzies nor Mr. Fadden have said anything which indicates that they are going to give any lead in opposing these gangsters.

The Totalitarian Technique

The present crisis in Great Britain is the direct result of socialist planning and the adherence to financial rules, which create the conditions, which the Communists and other agitators exploit, and the damnable surrender of local sovereignty by a succession of treacherous "British" Governments. The present crisis in Great Britain has been deliberately manipulated to drive the British people to accept further serfdom.

Mr. Herbert Morrison made this very clear when he said: "We have no preconceived notion precisely how it is proposed to use the Bill, but what we want is the power . . . We are not going to be cross-examined in advance on exactly what we will do with the powers when we get them." This is the totalitarian technique at its best.

Can Empire Support Itself?

The resources of the British Empire, if quickly and efficiently mobilised, are more than sufficient to provide the people of all parts of the British Empire with security and freedom. Nothing is more nauseating than the whine that the future of the British peoples depends upon the struggle for dollars. Have we lost our spirit and our belief in ourselves? Was the British Empire built up chasing after U.S. dollars? What happened before Columbus discovered America?

It has been reported that the further imposition of serfdom upon the British people has been designed to impress the Dollar Diplomats. Already there are suggestions that a second Dollar Loan to Great Britain will be required. Such a Loan will carry the same type of conditions as attached to the first loan. The threat of a new Dollar Loan must be primarily met by the British people themselves, who alone can reverse the policies being imposed upon them.

But Australia and other Dominions can play a vital role in helping to save Great Britain and, in the process, themselves, by removing every artificial barrier to full production, particularly of foodstuffs. Action must be taken to get this food to the British people. Our productive capacity is so enormous that we could send large quantities of food, even more than we used to send before the war, as a gift if necessary. After all, this would be a policy of self-defence. If the food is not given it could at least be made available as a long-term loan, repayable by British production when our kith and kin in the British isles have thrown off those who are at present oppressing them. Here in Australia we must react to the new British crisis by an intensification of our work. More and more people are eager to learn why we stagger from one crisis to another. We want to conduct an ever increasing educational campaign which will reflect itself in a public opinion that will compel individual Members of Parliament, to realise that we have stood enough—that we are going to play our part in preserving and extending that British heritage handed down to us by our forefathers.

OIL ROARS SKYWARD IN WEALTH FOR ALBERTANS

In spite of the fact that the Albertan Social Credit Government has been prevented from introducing Social Credit financial technique in Alberta, it has done everything possible to make the Province as self-contained as possible. Since its inauguration, the Department of Economic Affairs, of which the Hon. A. J. Hooke is Minister, with Mr. L. D. Byrne (Deputy Minister), has been encouraging the maximum development of the Province's resources.

News to hand from Alberta reveals that this Province may become one of the greatest oil producing areas in the world. Recent results in oil production indicate that the Leduc oil field will, by the end of this year, be in a class with the famous Pennsylvania oil fields in U.S.A.

The following article from the "Canadian Social Creditor" of May 29, briefly tells of what oil is going to mean to the people of Alberta: —

Blasting out of their Devonian, confines over 5000 feet below the earth, "twin" oil wells in Leduc roared skyward during last week, in one of the most dramatic occurrences in the history of Canadian oil exploration. Officials believe that the three producing wells at Leduc (20 miles south of Edmonton) offer sufficient indication that this area will become one of the greatest oil fields of the world, rivaling the great fields of Pennsylvania, Iran, Roumania and Baku. Oil officials remain conservative in their predictions, but sources close to the facts reveal that there is no longer any doubt as to the terrific potentialities of the field. The eyes of the commercial world have turned to Alberta again.

Alberta citizens should profit immensely by this great new development; and a fair share of credit must be given to the Alberta Government, which, during the past two years, has encouraged an all-out industrial development in Alberta for the material benefits of Alberta people.

First Results

The first discovery well gushed in on February 13 of this year, producing at a rate equal to almost a thousand barrels per day (although this has been placed under control for the time being, and is now producing 200 to 300 barrels per day according to general requirements, road conditions, transportation facilities, etc.). No. 2 and No. 3 wells came in within twelve hours of each other; and Imperial Oil Co. officials expressed gratification over the indicating production possibilities.

On May 22, Well No. 2 flowed at the rate of 100 barrels for 18 hours, through a tiny aperture of 1/2 inch in diameter, indicating existence of great pressure. No. 3 well squeezed 443 barrels of crude into the storage tanks in eight hours. (A "barrel" contains 35 Imperial gallons and 42 American gallons). No. 4 well, which on Thursday reached a depth of 5420 feet, is expected to reach the gas and oil-producing horizon over the weekend; and other wells are being drilled as rapidly as conditions will permit.

Token of Riches

Few people realise just what far-reaching effect this tremendous oil field may have on the future lives of Albertans. Great industries may move in and open up. Oil-hungry nations may cast covetous eyes on this province, as they did during the war years on Iran and Roumania. This sensational oil discovery brings back home to Albertans the message that they are living in one of the richest provinces under the sun.

THIS IS THE ONLY WAY TO STOP SOARING PRICES

(Radio Talk by ERIC D. BUTLER, over 3CS Colac.)

In spite of the events of the past two years of so-called peace, there are still some people who believe that in due time there will be a return to what they term normal conditions. How often we hear people who have a few pounds saved saying that they are waiting for prices to fall before they buy this or that.

Those people who think that so-called normal conditions will arrive inevitably, without any effort on their own behalf, are merely deluding themselves. As we have so often said, the present chaos is the desired result of DELIBERATE POLICIES pursued by powerful anti-social groups seeking to enslave this and every other country.

If the people of this country make no effective effort to resist these groups and their dupes, so far from there being a return to what are called normal conditions, the security and liberty of every individual must be progressively destroyed.

Take only one aspect of the present situation, which we must all be very concerned about; that is, high prices:

While the existing financial rules of this country are maintained, it can be said very definitely that prices generally will never again return to pre-war levels.

Looking back no further than the beginning of this century, we can see how prices have steadily increased in spite of temporary reductions during depression periods.

Instead of increased production with less manpower benefiting the individual, which would be the case if prices were automatically reduced as production became more efficient, we find that exactly the opposite takes place. So far from prices falling, there is every probability that they will further increase in the immediate future. From New South Wales comes information that the introduction of the 40-hour week has resulted in a drastic increase in rail and tram fares. Increased transport costs must be reflected in higher prices of all goods and materials transported.

THE FORTY-HOUR WEEK

The introduction of the 40-hour week in New South Wales was quickly seized upon by the Communists in the steel industry, who insisted that the 40 hours should be worked in five eight-hour days, and that there be no work on Saturdays or Sundays. The introduction of the 40-hour week in the steel industry would, of course, have resulted in increased costs of production, but it is estimated that the insistence by the Communists that there be no weekend work may easily result in the cost of steel increasing by upwards of 35 per cent.

The price of steel must affect the prices of all manufactured goods. The Communists are well aware that, so long as the present financial rules are maintained, rising prices must result. Reduced working hours help to increase the price level still further.

The Communists are not concerned about increased benefits for "the workers"; they merely use the legitimate desires of "the workers" for better conditions to create grievances and intensify them. "The workers" are misled into believing that the profits of "the wicked capitalists" are such that hours can be reduced and wages increased without any increases in prices.

The most elementary knowledge of productive or other organisation must convince any reasonable person that increased costs in industry must be passed on in increased prices. If industry is not going to be permitted to adjust its prices to meet its increased costs, then obviously industry will stagnate. This is already the position where price-fixing has made it unprofitable for some manufacturers to produce. This results in shortages, which eliminate competition, create black markets and help to force prices up.

ATTACKING FREE ENTERPRISE

All this aids the Communists and Socialists, who use high prices as an argument in favor of abolishing free enterprise.

With the general introduction of the 40-hour week all over Australia, it can be confidently predicted that either the price level will soar, or, if the Government uses price control to prevent business organisations from passing on their increased costs in increased prices, there will be further industrial chaos. This will provide another excuse for further socialisation.

Note that we are not condemning the idea of reduced working hours as efficiency in production increases. We merely point out the fact—obvious to any observant person—that so far from the benefits of increased efficiency in production and distribution being passed on to the individual under the present financial rules, the retaining of these rules can only result in increased prices and the destruction of private ownership and free enterprise.

COMMUNISM AND BIG FINANCE

The Communist menace has been fostered by the conditions resulting from the policies of the controllers of the present banking system. This system is, of course, now highly centralised on an international scale.

The policy of the local trading banks is controlled by the policy of the central bank, which in turn is controlled by the International Financiers.

Before the Second World War the central banks in various countries were part of the international system of which the headquarters was the Bank of International Settlements, in Basle, Switzerland. Now we have the World Bank and the International Fund, resulting from the "Bretton Woods" Agreement, situated in the United States of America. The policy of the International Financiers and their associates, the most important of which are Zionist Jews, is to centralise the financial system so effectively in every country that it can be more easily dominated from their international headquarters. We can see how our own banking system is being centralised further as the central bank, the Commonwealth Bank, is used to dominate the trading banks.

The primary function of the banking system is, of course, to create financial credit and advance it for the purposes of industry. It can be seen, therefore, that the controllers of the banking system are in the position of being able to select the industries to which credit will be advanced. It is very significant that, as the banking system has become more and more centralised, financial policy has been directed towards building up monopoly at the expense of small, decentralised enterprise. This has suited the Communists and Socialists very nicely.

THE CREDIT SYSTEM

However, there is another aspect of the matter to which we desire to draw attention. Apart from the small change of the nation (our paper money and coins), practically all our money comes into existence as the result of the banking system creating it in the form of what is termed bank credit and advancing it either to industry or to Governments.

Let us imagine a man who desires to produce boots, and let us assume that the banking system will advance him the necessary bank credit to start production—say, £1000.

Now note: this new financial credit is created and advanced before the boots have been produced. The real credit of the community is the ability of the community to produce goods and services required. Financial credit is advanced against this real credit.

In the case of boot production, the £1000 we have mentioned would be advanced in the belief that the boot manufacturer borrowing the money had the requisite ability to make use of a portion of the real credit of the community to produce boots.

With few exceptions, all new production is dependent upon new financial credit being created and advanced by the banking system. Now, in view of this fact, it should be obvious that, if all new production is financed by new money created by the banking system, and if no other new money is made available to the community, the question arises: Is sufficient money distributed during the production of, say boots, to enable the boots to be bought at a reasonable price, and thus permit the boot manufacturer to repay his loan of £1000 from the banking system?

SHORTAGE OF PURCHASING POWER

Staggering though it may appear to people who have never thought about the matter, it is a fact that no industry distributes sufficient purchasing power over any given period to enable its production for that period to be bought at a profitable price to the producer. And the more efficient industry becomes, the less purchasing power is distributed. This discovery was first made by Major C. H. Douglas, a famous British engineer, during the First World War.

For many years the orthodox economists and others sneered at Douglas, but now they tacitly admit the truth of what Douglas discovered. When you hear the so-called financial experts now saying that there must be large-scale public works in order to prevent another depression—or recession, as it is now called—they are simply saying that modern industry does not distribute sufficient purchasing power to buy its own production and that extra new money has to be put into the hands of the consumer by some method that will not result in consumable goods being produced. Public works no matter how useless, are very suitable for this purpose. The financial credit for these works is also supplied by the banking system—as a debt, of course.

WHAT THE WAR PROVED

The war also helped to solve the problem of the deficiency of purchasing power distributed by industry. Hundreds of millions of pounds of new financial credit were made available for the production of goods for which there was to be no sale—they were manufactured to be "given" to the Germans and the Japanese in the forms of shells, etc. Isn't it remarkable that we need to have a war before we can have a little prosperity!

Consider the following proposition: Why couldn't the hundreds of millions of pounds of new credits created for war purposes have been created during the years before the war, when industry was having the greatest difficulty in selling its products at a profitable price? Why couldn't these new credits have been placed direct into the hands of the people to enable them to buy what their real credit was easily capable of providing?

"What," some people may exclaim, "and create that very inflation which you say you are opposing?" If the new credits were placed in the hands of the consumers before production took place, obviously inflation would take place. But surely it is a most elementary matter to ensure that the consumer only gets the advantage of the new credits at the time he buys the goods.

The new credits could easily be used to subsidise prices. Reduced prices would automatically increase the purchasing power of the consumers. There could be no inflation with reduced prices. Retailers would simply be credited with the amount by which they reduced prices.

And where would the new credit, or money, come from to finance retailers to reduce prices? It would be created in exactly the same way as was the credit created to finance production to give to our military enemies. We drew upon our real credit, our ability to produce, to give our military enemies portion of our production. It is simply commonsense to use financial credit in such a way as to give ourselves the benefits of our real credit (i.e., our ability to produce), which, incidentally, the war vastly increased.

THE ONLY ALTERNATIVES

If we will not face the fact that every improvement in productive methods should result in the automatic reduction of the price level, and we continue to permit what is called "controlled inflation" to continue, we are going to allow the present social structure to be destroyed completely. The controllers of the present financial system are rigidly adhering to financial rules, which create the conditions they desire for the furtherance of their policy of dominating the entire world.

Once complete domination is obtained, the financial system as a means of control could be either dispensed with or suitably modified. But the price level is being forced, upwards. People with fixed incomes and those with savings are having the value of their money destroyed. Producers are striving to pass on their increased costs in increased prices. Meanwhile the Communists and Socialists use the situation to attack free enterprise and the wicked "profit motive."

We ask Australians to decide whether they are going to demand the use of the financial credit of the community to reduce prices while preserving and extending free enterprise, or whether they are going to submit to being reduced to mere serfs.

ALBERTA S.C. BOARD REPORT

In recent issues we have published four instalments of the Alberta Social Credit Board's Report, recently presented to the Alberta Legislative Assembly. Here is a further instalment of this notable document:—

Majority rule is definitely not a democratic concept, though false propaganda has led many to accept it thoughtlessly, as such. The majority should certainly obtain the results they want from the management of their public affairs. Just why the minority should be denied the same privilege is hard to understand. If the majority of a group want three meals a day, there seems to be no sane reason why the minority should be compelled to eat three meals as well when they only want two.

There is no place in a Democracy for compulsion in matters of policy. The demands of the majority for a definite result should be given a priority, but that should be the limit of their privilege in a true Democracy. Businessmen recognise this principle when, let us say, a clothing dealer stocks a larger number of hats than caps, when the majority of his customers want to buy hats. Nevertheless, he is quite willing to sell caps to the minority who prefer them.

The Secret Ballot

It is of real interest and importance to consider the secret ballot as an instrument of Democracy. Its original purpose was to protect the voter against being unjustly penalised because he voted for the candidate of a political party contrary to the wishes of his employer or other person. This is a very laudable purpose but it is also true that there must be something wrong with the system under which we live when individuals are so insecure and subservient to other individuals that they dare not let it be known how they marked their ballot.

If the World Plotters permitted the secret ballot, then it was the political party system, which they used to render it harmless to their vested interests. Meanwhile, the generality of people were deceived in the belief that they had made one more stride towards true democracy.

The great weakness of the secret ballot lies in the fact that it relieves the voter of the personal responsibility, which every democratic citizen should assume. When a voter casts his ballot in favor of the candidate of a political party, he is also voting for the party "platform" and it may contain a policy, which, when implemented, harms his fellow citizens. Because his ballot was secret, the voter may then disclaim any responsibility for the harm done. He may blame the government, the politicians, or anyone but himself and those who voted likewise who actually should assume the responsibility and blame.

It cannot be emphasised too strongly that, personal responsibility is the very basis of genuine democracy.

The people cannot enjoy the authority accorded them in a democracy unless they assume the corresponding responsibility. This is fundamental.

The political party system makes it very difficult for the people to exercise their democratic privileges and assume their personal responsibility even if they are so inclined. If political parties were non-existent, and the citizens were permitted to vote as they should, they would cast more than one ballot. Ballots would be cast:

(a) For the candidate of their choice, preferably the one whom they believed would be the obedient servant of his constituency.

(b) For the policy or policies which would yield the results the people wanted.

Secrecy Unnecessary

Given the foregoing democratic conditions, there seems to be no reason why a voter should not place an open signed ballot into the ballot-box, thus openly declaring the results he wanted and automatically assuming responsibility for the policy adopted. It may be taken for granted that a voter would, under such circumstances, ponder carefully the manner in which he proposed to mark his ballot, knowing that, as a result of a wrong decision, he would suffer the consequences and moreover, be obliged to foot the bill.

Minority Rule

We seriously question whether the political party system can properly serve Democracy. Once every four or five years, the people are given the opportunity to vote simultaneously for a candidate and a party "platform."

The people as a whole have no voice in deciding the contents of these "platforms." They are prepared by a small minority group with an eye to vote catching. Often the platform deals for the most part with "methods" concerning which neither the drafters of the platform nor the general public are qualified to form a wise judgment.

Nothing could be more confusing. Elections find the voter wondering whether to vote for a candidate, a platform, or a political party.

During the election campaign each party viciously attacks the platform and candidates of other parties. The people, being unorganised, become the victims of high-pressure propaganda, in which extravagant promises, abuse, deceit, and even intimidation are used to trick them into voting power-seekers to office.

After the election, the successful candidates cannot be controlled by the electorate. They vote themselves their own indemnities and submit to the dictates of the few party "bosses" who are the party organisation between elections. The policies, which have been implemented under party government, are certainly not in accordance with the will of the people.

Political parties need a considerable amount of money. Those who provide the party funds expect their reward. Having paid the piper, they can compel the party "bosses" to play any tune they desire. The results are exactly what may be expected under the circumstances. The history of political parties has been an unsavory record of graft, patronage and political corruption.

Political parties divide the people into many conflicting camps. Even the most sincere politicians (and there are many) cannot serve the people when they are so hopelessly divided and while the system itself does not enable the people to express their will in any definite manner.

"Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation."
(To be concluded.)

William Cobbett on "Social Security"

Early last century, the great Cobbett wrote: "The tendency of [Pitt's] funding and taxing system was to draw the produce of labor into unnatural channels, into the hands of upstart cormorants, and to deal it back again in dribbles, under the name of relief, or of charity, just to support the life of those from whose pores it had been drained."

The technique has been extended under the guise of "social security" schemes. And, as Cobbett so clearly revealed, the result is the destruction of the liberties of the people.

THE JEWISH QUESTION IN GREAT BRITAIN

This important article by Philip Faulconbridge throws some light on the effect of the Jewish invasion of the British Isles. Not without very sound reasons the Briton is objecting.

Entitled originally "The Truth About Anti-Semitism," the following is condensed from the well-informed British journal "Tidings": —

Mr. Ben Hecht, the gentleman who incites the Palestine terrorists to murder, while himself remaining in the security of his luxurious home near New York, recently explained his technique to an "Evening Standard" reporter. "Writing propaganda is like falling in love with yourself and the veiled wonders in your brain," he said. "While I write I grow mystic. A feeling of great power comes over me."

It was presumably in this trance-like spiritually onanistic state that Mr. Hecht declared: "I freely admit that the Jews have no legal right there (in Palestine), but nobody in history has more blood on their hands than the English. This time, though, it won't be Jewish blood. It will be the blood of the English themselves—those heroic fellows who fight unarmed minorities."

The Hecht mentality appears to be representative of a large part of the Jewish world. Mr. Walter Winchell, "America's most widely read columnist," himself a Jew, may have been spared the ardour of self-love when, in support of Mr. Hecht, he wrote: "The Palestinian patriots are actively fighting the British because 'the British' are fighting undeclared war against them." The effect is nevertheless the same. Nor is such language the monopoly of unofficial zealots.

Mr. Ben Gurion, chairman of the Jewish Agency, told a plenary session of that body in Jerusalem: "We shall indict Britain before the U.N. for its regime of tyranny and racial discrimination in Palestine—a regime which assists, and is assisted by, terrorists." As this remarkable statement follows a suggestion by the same speaker that there are contacts between the terrorists and the police, the only inference to be drawn from it is that the British authorities, for some occult reason, are deliberately co-operating with the murderous wretches of the Stern Gang and Irgun Zvai Leumi to spill British blood. Whether or not Mr. Ben Gurion, before voicing this opinion, "grew mystic" is not known.

Fantasy or Propaganda?

It may be that these Jews, and many thousands of others, are so obsessed by their cause that they really do believe everything they say and write. They may genuinely have forgotten that the British "invaders of the Jewish homeland" as Mr. Hecht called them—invaded Palestine only in the course of driving Turkey out of the first World War, and that under the subsequent British Mandate the Jewish population there has been allowed to increase from a mere handful to many hundreds of thousands, to protect whom Britain has been obliged to expend life and treasure suppressing several Arab rebellions.

They may even have forgotten the part played by British arms in defeating Nazi Germany, and really believe that her present attempt to keep some kind of faith with the Arabs is what they proclaim it to be—"a regime of tyranny and racial discrimination," inspired by Nazi principles.

If so, the Jewish memory is so short, and the Jewish sense of proportion so gravely disordered, that all those who come within the scope of such criticism must be accounted not responsible for their actions: in other walks of life, indeed, men harboring delusions much less grievous and dangerous are cared for in mental hospitals, where they cease to be a menace either to themselves or to the general community.

In general, however, this "fantasy" theory is untenable, and we are forced back upon the theory of "propaganda." The pattern is a familiar one. By means of "propaganda" the British and American Governments were induced to reject the patriot, Mihailovitch, in favor of the Soviet stooge, Tito. By the same means the Russians planted on the Nazis blame for the 15,000 Polish officers whom they had themselves murdered, and even placed the "crime" in the indictment at Nuremberg. There is no qualitative difference between these lies and the dastardly, malignant suggestion that the British authorities in Palestine are encouraging the terrorists to shed British blood.

"America's Got An Empire"

At the present time, the Jewish propagandists against Britain are cock-a-hoop for two main reasons. The first is their belief that this country is "played out." Mr. Hecht made this point when he said to the "Evening Standard" correspondent: "I'll kick you out of Palestine . . . I'll tell the terrorists to kill British troops. It's quite easy, because England isn't anything now. She has no cause and she has no Empire. She's sour, and vague, and stupid. She's lost her manners. But America's got an Empire. We could teach Britain how to behave. . . ."

This leads to the second reason why the Jews these days are exceptionally arrogant—their power in the United States. Although not absolute, that power is formidable. It is not developed to the point where American Jews can secure all that they want by persuading their Government, as a lesson in deportment for the ill-mannered English people, to use atom bombs on London, but it is sufficiently developed to ensure that American statesmen walk exceedingly warily wherever Jewish interests are involved. American Jewry hopes to extend this influence until it becomes paramount, in which event the American Empire would become, even more than now, a Jewish tool. One should bear in mind, however, the possibility that hopes sometimes miscarry and that the two Jewish theses may prove false. Britain may not be "played out." And the Americans may decide that they do not really like the freedom of action of their own Government to be circumscribed by Jewish pressure groups: they may revolt. The Jews will then be thrown back, so far as the British lands are concerned, upon the tolerance shown them by the British people ever since Cromwell reversed the decree of Edward I. They ought, therefore, to treat that tolerance with a larger respect. It might help if, instead of whining about anti-Semitism, they could be induced to stand back, as it were, and study their own effects—the effects of what they say and do—upon the Gentile world in which they live and in which, Palestine or no Palestine, the overwhelming majority of them are determined to go on living.

Genuine British Sympathy

The British are among the kindest people on earth, and as administrators, both at home and abroad, their record is perhaps the cleanest, as it is certainly the mildest, in the annals of mankind. When the war ended, and the full horror of the extermination camps became known, every Jew was accorded a passport to British hearts; it was felt that the survivors of a race which had suffered such fiendish wrongs deserved all the sympathy which could be showered upon them. That was only two and a half years ago. Today, from one end of the country to the other, there is scarcely a shred of that sympathy to be found. It has been wantonly dissipated by the Jews themselves. It would be a mistake to ascribe the growth of "anti-Semitism" only to events in Palestine. The average Briton is willing enough to believe that Palestinian outrages are the work of a few fanatics, for he has never been a close observer of what happens in distant lands and does not know that the entire community, as represented by the Jewish Agency, refuses to co-operate with the British authorities in tracking down the murderers. He does not read the "Jewish Chronicle," and thus does not know that week after week British Jews are regaled with reports which place the British Army in the most unfavorable light, suggesting that it behaves with unconscionable harshness—this of an Army which goes to foolish lengths in its endeavors to deal gently with civil rioters—and even on one occasion complaining that our men, enforcing orders which a whole series of outrages had made necessary, neglected to say "please!"

The International Set-Up

Neither does the average Briton know much about the perversion of U.N.R.R.A., which he helped, unwittingly, to subsidise that it might feed the organised trek across Europe of illegal Jewish immigrants, or about the suborning, in the same cause, of many European Governments, or about the part played by the Jewish Brigade, equipped and maintained out of British funds.

In the same way he is happy to believe that the mystical Mr. Hecht is no more than a stray eccentric, being mostly oblivious of the hundreds of thousands of dollars which such propaganda places at the disposal of those who seek to do Britain mischief, and no less oblivious of the world-wide befouling of the British name which is all part of the process. In so far as these matters impinge at all upon his consciousness, they create no new impression, but rather strengthen the impressions already there. Where, then, must we look for the origin of the "anti-Semitism" which is taking so firm a hold of the British mind?

Very few people understand how international finance, which is predominantly Jewish, works. There is thus almost complete ignorance of the real power behind the modern scene—a power capable of holding up to ransom almost any nation on earth. Neither is there any general awareness of the close ties, which have existed between international finance and the Soviet system ever since the 1917 Revolution. The ordinary man sees these two agencies, not as twin-power mechanisms, but as mighty opposites—a pathetic delusion. Since there is the same lack of knowledge of the hidden purposes to be served by U.N.O., the World Security Council, the World Bank and all the other international institutions, Jewry incurs no odium because of the part its leaders play in the ordering—or disordering—of international affairs.

Local Jewish Behaviour

No, the Jews in Britain have made themselves disliked, not because of world-policies, however malign, but because of their behavior in the localities where they have gone to live.

The war scattered them all over the country: they became visible for the first time

In countless country towns and villages. And the people felt the presence in their midst of thrusting, alien personalities, which—rationally or irrationally—they resented. Housewives complained of being elbowed in shops by arrogant Jewish women, of queues being violated, of preferential treatment being secured. (A Jewish district of London was granted twice as many milk priorities per thousand of the population as were granted elsewhere). It was asserted—rightly or wrongly—that the Jews were doing very well out of the war, as now out of the war's aftermath; that pleasant houses and luxury flats sooner or later inevitably come their way; that they thronged the best hotels; experienced the least difficulty with clothing and petrol coupons; had money to burn, and proclaimed the fact by the air of proprietorship they assumed.

The natives said that they were made to feel strangers in their native land, and when soldiers from all over the Empire arrived here with the same story to tell of Jewish behavior in South Africa, in Canada and in Australia, the British people knew that these things were not merely the products of their own imagination; that, however unfair it might be to generalise, there were distinctive Jewish traits which non-Jews everywhere found unamiable, if not repugnant.

Jewish Pressure Tactics

The Jews meet this criticism by ascribing it to envy. No doubt an element of envy in the situation does exist. There is no more bitter enemy of the Jews than the Gentile, who using the same methods, has unsuccessfully competed against them. But that is only a very small part of the picture.

The real trouble arises because of the importation into Britain of habits of thought and action more becoming to the Levant than to our own good-natured, tolerant and easy-going mental climate.

At the moment the Jewish tactic of bringing furious pressure to bear upon newspapers and politicians who dare to express opinions hostile to Jewry is meeting with such success that criticism in public has been almost stifled: there is scarcely one of the 650 Members of Parliament who is willing to face the obloquy of saying in the House of Commons what his constituents are saying in every pub, in every bus or train, in every place where men foregather. This fact, if it reflects unfavorably on our public men, is a still more damning criticism of the Jewish leadership. Intimidation, whether it takes the form of smashing meetings or confines itself to bringing pressure to bear in milder ways, is a despicable weapon.

This does not mean that Jews will ever be persecuted in these islands—unless, of course, the character of our people undergoes a radical change. Should that change take place, and the racial tolerance of the British be replaced by racial intolerance, it will not be the Nazis who serve as mentors, but the Jews.

B'NAI B'RITH AND HAROLD STASSEN

"The death of Henry Monsky, the late President of the B'nai B'rith, will go hard with Harold Stassen, announced candidate for President of the United States. Monsky was one of Stassen's chief advisers and was preparing to give Stassen great financial support. Other leaders in the Jewish lodge are divided over Stassen. Some prefer to throw their support to Thomas Dewey of New York."

American Ammunition For Jew Terrorists

MELBOURNE, July 9. — American freighters were supplying Jewish terrorists with large quantities of ammunition, Sgt. J. McFeat, a former Palestine policeman, said on arrival in Melbourne today in the Tamara. Sgt. McFeat, who was in charge of a mounted section, said that terrorists had accumulated large stocks of ammunition and weapons. They had obtained some of it during the war but the major part was being deposited along the shores by the freighters.

Shares Are Rolling In, But . . .

Since we published our first special issue on July 4, in which we informed readers that £1000 of share capital was desired immediately for a big expansion programme, a comparatively small number of readers has responded magnificently. The initial response has encouraged the Board of Directors of the "New Times" to go ahead with the publication of an eight-page issue at least once every four weeks for a start. No doubt most readers enjoyed the second special issue as much as they did the first. The decision of the Directors to go vigorously ahead with their expansion programme is based upon the belief that the £1000 share capital desired will be subscribed. The Directors appeal to all readers who have not subscribed to do so immediately.

Not only is it essential that we obtain sufficient share capital over a period to publish an eight-page issue every four weeks; our revenue must be increased IMMEDIATELY by a rapid increase in circulation and the obtaining of selected advertising revenue.

If the expansion programme is to be successful, it is absolutely essential that by the time we expend the £1000 share capital our sales and advertising revenue be sufficient to allow us not only to continue with regular eight-page issues, but that a better eight-page issue be produced EVERY WEEK.

With sufficient share capital subscribed immediately, it will be possible to get our sales expansion programme under way NOW. Our readers have and are doing magnificent voluntary work in expanding the sales of the "New Times" (there would have been no "New Times" without this voluntary work), but this work must be supplemented by having a full-time competent business representative selling advertising revenue and subscriptions, particularly to business people, who are becoming increasingly interested in the fight the "New Times" is making.

Readers will all agree that our first two special issues proved that we can "produce the goods." But more than this is required: THE GOODS HAVE GOT TO BE SOLD. Every pound of share capital subscribed NOW will be invaluable in getting our expansion programme under way.

The local and international position now reveals that, just as we have warned, we are rapidly moving to a great crisis, which will decide our fate. It is a fight for survival. Readers who subscribe to our expansion programme are not sacrificing their money; they are investing their money in a fight, which will decide whether they are to have a future. Do not let us fool ourselves. There is no future unless we fight effectively and win.

How much is a future of freedom and security worth to YOU? Let us know immediately. Send for YOUR shares TODAY. Five Directors set the ball rolling by subscribing £60 between them. Others have followed their lead. Yes, the shares are rolling in, BUT THE GREATER PART OF THE SHARE CAPITAL DESIRED HAS YET TO BE SUBSCRIBED.

"Coal, The Key" (P.E.P. Slogan)

By C. H. DOUGLAS, in "The Social Creditor."
(Concluded from last Issue.)

Where the selling price to the ultimate home consumer of an article is little above the direct cost of production as, for instance, in the pre-war price of coal, the items which go to make production cost are the dominant consideration. Most coal exports were a loss.

One of the difficulties in assessing the real effect of export trade lies in the absence of true cost figures, and it is therefore most helpful to be provided with a case, that of Scotch whisky, in which true cost is so small a percentage of selling price to the consumer that no great error is introduced by taking the F.O.B. price (4/9) as the cost, although in fact the true cost is probably not one quarter of that figure. The price to the consumer of somewhat weaker whisky than that shipped F.O.B. at 4/9 is nominally 25/9 but more nearly averages £2/10/-. (There is more whisky sold in the Black Market at £3/10/- per bottle than at the controlled price. Why not? Vive les racketts!) But we will take the controlled price as a basis. Imagine for a moment that the amorphous bulk figures of exports given by the "B".B.C. did reflect something amorphous—that all "production" is whisky or can be accounted for as whisky; that the country to which we export the whisky lives solely on whisky, as above defined, imported from us, paid for in dollars, which are used by us to buy the raw material for more whisky. Then, on the premises we are using, the standard of living of the country to which we export is to ours as the inverse of the bulk prices—i.e., 25.75 to 4.75, and that standard is brought up to its high level by free subsidies from us. The extent to which this example corresponds with fact simply depends on the ratio of capital and export goods to home-produced consumable and imported consumable goods on sale, measured in a common unit of account.

This somewhat tricky process is clearly a matter, not of absolutes, but of ratios. For a given amount of "production," you can maintain any standard of living by exchanging a portion of it for an excess value—a profit. And conversely, you can have a falling standard of living quite irrespective of how much you produce, if you export more and more for the raw material of further exports. And since your "production" is not production at all, but is simply changing one thing into another by the application of energy, you can use more and more coal, labor and material for less and less satisfaction. This is, of course, what we are doing, and have been doing in this country for a century at least. It may, of course, be asked, quis beneficiat? Who is the criminal? That is another story.

The situation disclosed by the A plus B Theorem, which required money from capital and export goods to be provided for the home purchase of a diminishing percentage of consumable production, enabled this process to be carried on more or less un-noticed by anyone but the International Bill-brokers, so long as the greater part of the earth was unindustrialised. Any intelligent child ought to have been able to see that, if the coal-operated, power-driven machine age was really so efficient in comparison with the England of the sixteenth century, there was something very queer going on when fifteen millions of employees, working nine hours per day, could not maintain a decent standard of living, without robbing, by taxation, a diminishing number who had attained a fair standard. But the attention of the intelligent children was diverted, and the grown-ups were treated by the London School of Economics, so that any fact which was less obvious than a lump of coal escaped them.

That the present Finance-Socialist Administration is Satanic in intention is demonstrated by the extension of the process just indicated. More and more coal, more and more employment, including that of women, more and more export for less and less return, £800,000,000 free to U.N.R.R.A., are not now left to the working of the A plus B Theorem. They are ensured by Order-in-Council.

EVATT'S DEPT. SUPPRESSES CANADIAN REPORT ON COMMUNIST ESPIONAGE

Complete and adequate publicity is the only effective method of dealing with the subversive activities of the Communists as revealed in the Canadian Royal Commission's Report on espionage and other activities. The Canadian Report revealed clearly the damnable role of the undisclosed Communists in Government Departments, Universities, etc. It also deals with the Communist technique of skilful propaganda in all types of organisation.

Very few copies of the Canadian Report are obtainable in Australia. We understand that only one copy has been available at Canberra for Federal Members.

As a result of the publicity given to the Canadian disclosures in this and other Australian Social Credit papers, Dr. Evatt's Department made available a summary of the Report. For a few months this was obtainable upon request, but now the Secretary of the Department of External Affairs, Mr. J. W. Burton, has informed an inquirer "No summary of the Report has been prepared for distribution by this Department, and it is therefore regretted that it is not possible to forward you a copy."

This is a most alarming situation and prompts the question of how many undisclosed Communists there are in the Department of External Affairs. Electors should take the matter up with their Federal Members immediately.

The suppression of even the summary of the Canadian Report should result in all readers obtaining at least one copy of "THE REAL COMMUNIST MENACE" which contains the most important chapter from the Canadian Report, and passing it on to friends and associates.

"THE REAL COMMUNIST MENACE," price 1/7 (post free) is obtainable from New Times Ltd., Box 1226L, G.P.O., Melbourne.

BEGINNINGS OF CENTRALISED INDUSTRY

"There was something new in the manner and shape of manufacturing. Formerly the business was carried on in all parts of the country: now it had been so managed; the taxing and paper money system had created such a mass of monopolies; had drawn the wealth of the country into such great heaps, as to cause the manufacturing work-people to be collected into enormous masses, and that, too, in those parts of the country least productive of food."

—"The Autobiography of William Cobbett."

FREE BACK NUMBERS

Readers desiring to help our drive for more circulation, by introducing the "New Times" to their fellow-electors, are advised that a parcel of back-numbers will be sent, free of charge and post-free, to anyone who writes to us and asks for it. Melbourne readers may obtain a parcel by calling at our office. Our postal address is: New Times Limited, Box 1226L, G.P.O., Melbourne. The "New Times" office is on the 5th floor of McEwan House, 343 Little Collins St., Melbourne. The time to act is NOW.

From all, all they can do; to all, as little as they can live on, or less.

At the moment, Dr. Dalton and his gang appear to be getting away with it. I think, not for long. It is going to dawn on an increasing number of people that this "need for more labor," "the export drive," "austerity," the unique importance of "organised labor," "no room for parasites," "the rest don't matter a tinker's cuss"—and so on—is a pretty scheme to create a Soviet "aristocracy" such as exists in Russia—an "aristocracy" which for vulgar corruption and callous indifference to the "proletariat," together with a complete absence of cultural grace or value, appears to parallel the gangster elite of Chicago and New York. That is the kind of "aristocracy" the world-rulers like. The aristocracy, which grew out of the mediaeval chivalry, may not have been flawless but a perusal of Magna Carta is sufficient to demonstrate that it was an effective barrier to the kind of racketeer we now elevate to power.

What to do? Quite easy: Arrest one dozen men and one woman in this country, and about twice that number in New York and Chicago. Put them on the island of Runnymede with a guard of Coldstreams, commanded by Officers who were arrested without notice under 18B.

Give them three weeks to find a solution—or else.

But perhaps another world war is more agreeable, or death by slow starvation.

Finally: IF the future of this country depends on "the workers," it has no future. The Trades Unions have done their work well, and not one man in twenty understands the meaning of an honest day's work. Many would be glad to work; but most of these emigrate. The rest imitate the Hitler Youth, and play politics.

Notes on the News

shops at the same time. If this were done the opposition would not be very great. If shops, transport and other facilities were not available the extra holiday could be a very dreary affair especially for housewives lacking refrigeration services. So long as two clear days, including Sunday were arranged, that should suffice for the present. This could be satisfactorily arranged between the parties concerned, and would retain shopping and other services for all. There's no need for mob violence or dislocation to achieve such a simple objective.

RATIONING RACKETTS

Arising from a prosecution by the Rationing Commission, the chief witness under cross-examination admitted that he was paid £6/10/- a week as a professional witness for the Rationing Department. He said he had received £25 a week in bribes from butchers and that he had made out false returns for the accused. This illustrates what low-down practices are adopted by these socialistic departments. Similar disclosures are now coming to hand about the Prices Branch activities. Apart from restricting production, encouraging and maintaining black marketing, these two despicable Departments have set an all-time high record for Government utilities of graft and corruption.

FOOTNOTE ON GOVERNMENTS. Blessed is he who expects nothing from a Government, for he shall not be disappointed.

Build Your Own Home

Any intelligent, energetic man can build his own home in his spare time. He can build the first section in about 18 months and move in with his family, completing the house in a further 2½ years. In this way he can save approximately £1000 in building costs. Hundreds of amateurs are building their own homes today. Tomorrow thousands will be doing it. "Build Your Own Home" (price 10/-) is a book, which explains clearly the step-by-step procedure. If you want more particulars of this unique book, send stamped-addressed envelope for free 16-page booklet.

Home Builders' Advisory,
Box 4397, G.P.O., Sydney.

Copies of "Build Your Own Home" may be purchased from the "New Times" by calling at the office, 5th Floor, McEwan House 343 Little Collins St., Melbourne, or by writing to New Times Ltd., Box 1226L, G.P.O., Melbourne, and enclosing remittance for 10/5.
