Christian Principles and British Civilisation

At this time of the year the thoughts of many of us are more consciously focused upon our Christian Faith. But surely it is now obvious to all professing Christians that our Christian civilisation cannot survive much longer unless there is a greater recognition of the fact that all our policies must be based upon the Christian philosophy. Most of the policies being imposed upon us today are evil; they are the product of a false and anti-Christian philosophy.

The fundamental Christian philosophy was clearly outlined by Christ when He said that the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath,

In other words, individuals are greater than institutions. All institutions and organisations should merely exist to serve the individual and not to enslave him.

Christ also said that the Kingdom of God is within each individual. The Christian philosophy conceives of all power originating from within the individual. The anti-Christian philosophy conceives of all power originating outside the individual, who is regarded simply as suitable for planning by those who wield this power.

The whole emphasis of Christianity is upon the importance of the individual.

The most important effect of Christianity was to elevate the individual above the domination of the group. It was the Christian philosophy, which gave rise to the idea of Constitutional safeguards, which would guarantee the individual rights which no Government or any other group could take away from him.

The Mediaeval Church

The Mediaeval Church fought the deadly idea that the State should have the power to encroach upon every aspect of the individual's activities. It took its stand on the principle that the individual should only render unto Caesar—i.e., the Government—those things, which were within the province of Caesar to control. How different is the position today, when so many Church leaders are failing to resist the increasing pressure to force the individual back to that collectivism from which Christianity liberated him.

While mouthing abstract phrases about Christianity we also have so-called political leaders actively engaged in furthering collectivist policies, which further destroy the fabric of our Christian civilisation. The challenge of Soviet Russia is not merely a challenge on the material plane; it is a challenge to the whole Christian idea. The controllers of Soviet Russia understand the fundamental issue clearly. Unless we understand this issue as clearly as our enemies, we most certainly will not survive. Once we grasp this point, we can see what a dangerous role our local collectivists have played.

Political Leaders' Role

We have many political leaders who are now drawing attention to the menace of Soviet Russia without having the Christian humility to admit that they themselves have helped further this menace. Two classical examples in Great Britain are Mr. Attlee and Sir Stafford Cripps.

After years of advocating the destruction of national sovereignty and the introduction of collectivist ideas a la Soviet Russia, Mr. Attlee now tries to unite the British people against the Soviet.

We can best assess Sir Stafford Cripps' role of corruption by the following statement reported in the Communist Daily Worker (England) of April 3, 1936: "I am prepared to risk working with the Communist Party and supporting their affiliation to the Labour Party. The great thing is to get the government of workers in this country to work in conjunction with the Government of Russia. That means a united front with the Communist Party."

Here in Australia we have had such men as Dr. Evatt assuring us that the controllers of Soviet Russia only require security and have no designs on the sovereignty of other people.

The whole Socialist idea is in direct conflict with the Christian idea; like Communism, Nazism, and Fascism, it places the individual at the mercy of the group.

Professor Laski, who has attacked the Christian idea as outlined in the New Testament, knew what he was talking about when he said that after seeing Stalin in 1946 Socialism and Communism are merely two different roads to the same objective.

We cannot defeat the collectivist menace unless we first defeat it internally in our own country. This is just what we are not doing at present. The application of Socialism internally is a "soften-

OUR POLICY

- 1. The preservation of Australia's sovereignty as a part of the British Empire, and the exposure of all internal and external groups which attack that sovereignty.
- 2. The preservation and extension of genuine local government.
- 3. The preservation and strengthening of all Constitutional safeguards for the purpose of protecting fundamental individual rights.
- 4. The encouragement of all activities designed to bring Governments under more effective control by the electors.
- 5. The preservation and extension of genuine free, competitive enterprise and private ownership, and opposition to all Monopoly, whether it be "private" or State.
- 6. The support of a financial policy which will (a) permit free enterprise to make available to all individuals an increasing standard of living and greater leisure for cultural pursuits; (b) result in no further increase in the community's indebtedness and the sound business practice of gradually reducing existing debt.
- 7. Recognising that the basis of any sound economy is agriculture, the encouragement of agricultural policies which will ensure the preservation and building up of soil fertility by organic farming and gardening; and the prevention of soil erosion and the protection of forests and watersheds.

Now, when our land to ruin's brink is verging.

Christian StabilityIt has been the fundamental Christian idea, which has given our civilisation stability. The destruction of the Christian idea has naturally led to increasing instability.

Values and standards are no longer clear and definite, but are becoming increasingly blurred. As instability grows the cry of "all power to the State" gets Propaganda seeks to convince the individual that he is merely a pawn in the grip of blind forces over which he can have no control. It is cleverly suggested that the British Empire and the European Age are passing. The effect of this suggestive propaganda is to paralyse the individual's initiative. It does more; it creates fear. And fear results in the destruction of judgment. Fear can only be eliminated by the restoration of that Christian Faith upon which our British way of life was so successfully built.

We must first reach back into the past, and once again understand and fiercely uphold those fundamental principles, which resulted in the high water mark of modern civilisation during the late 19th Century.

There were, of course, defects in the social structure last century, but with the maintenance of stability there is little doubt that these defects would have gradually been eliminated. However, the anti-Christian forces responsible for the First World War, the Russian Revolution, the Great Depression, and the Second World War destroyed stability.

Private incomes and private decentralised property rights have been increasingly attacked.

The family tradition is weakened and the individual becomes more and more a cog in a vast industrial machine, the policy of which he cannot control

The Division of Power

The growing emphasis is upon material needs to the exclusion of all other considerations. The individual is offered material security of a kind in exchange for his soul. And never let us forget that every political party has helped this programme along.

Now, as never before, we must loudly proclaim the great truths, which Lord Acton never ceased to proclaim:

That man does not live by bread alone; that the State was made for man, not man for the State; that every citizen counts; that minorities should have their place in the sun; that liberty is not a mere political contrivance, but a spiritual principle; that ordered liberty is the highest prize of civilised society; that men and women, like flowers, need light and air to have their chance and produce their best; that since all power tends to corrupt, the only way to prevent its abuse is to cut it up into little bits.' (G. P. Gooch).

During this Easter period it is well that we should meditate upon these matters. But we must be prepared to acknowledge the fact that the resurrection of our civilisation can only take place if we are prepared to repent of those evil policies which led to the present terrible chaos.

THE TYRANNY OF ABSOLUTE POWER

When absolute power has been established long enough for the violence of its first origin to be forgotten; when the majority of the men in the prime of life have been born under its yoke, and have never known a better state; the usurper finds himself supported by the inert part of the nation—by those who, incapable of thinking, or of investigating for themselves, must be contented with borrowed ideas, and with blindly assenting to every doctrine which the Government may promulge . . . in slavish countries, the Prince alone speaks amidst universal silence: he dictates the proclamations of authorities, the sentences of the tribunals; he even inspires the language to be uttered from the pulpit or the confessional: because the disposal of the revenue is at his will, he appears as a dispensing providence; and makes the people believe he gives all that he does not take from them . . . Slavery, it is said, so debases man as to make him love it; and experience confirms the maxim.

Price Control And S.C. Principles

(To The Editor.)

Sir, —The real test of Social Credit principles comes in the attitude and action adopted by Social Crediters regarding the actual problems imposed by current circumstances, and not in the challenges, vague, abstract, and imponderable, which those who wish to ridicule or impeach Social Credit ideas are liable to resort to.

The Prices and Rent Referendum is just such a problem and issue. Only Social Crediters can fully assess the added menace of permanent legalised control of prices (Federal or State), because they alone comprehend the depth of degradation still spreading through the community because of the existing conventional control exercised by those few people who determine financial cies. The result of this control is that price levels rise continuously in a most disconcerting way. Actually prices to consumers could, and should, fall or rise automatically according to the degree of efficiency attained in production.

Electors should note that the Government, which wants to appropriate to itself the permanent power to limit prices in an arbitrary manner, are themselves a major factor in making prices soar by imposing high taxation.

The technical and mathematical train of argument justifying the release of new money to subsidise retail prices, so as to banish the stupid and unnecessary war between producers and consumers, is incontrovertible and undeniable. That governments (separately or by arrangement between them) have full power to operate under this idea, and to demonstrate the beauty of the corresponding devices, also cannot be denied.

Every Government in Australia is wedded to advisers of the London School of Economics type, and the School itself is the creation of international financiers and Socialists.

The problem here, as elsewhere, is to keep electors' attention directed towards desirable results and away from theories and labels of all kinds. Yours, &c.,

C. H. ALLEN.

Liberal Minister Admits He Believes In Socialism

Some clue why the present Liberal Government at Ottawa has brought in somany socialist policies and has taken Canada far in the direction of socialism was given to the House of Commons at the recent session when Hon. Ian MacKenzie, Minister of Pensions, openly declared that he believed "very largely" in the principles of socialism, and that he was "very proud" for helping to bring socialism into our country. It would be interesting to know how many other members of the MacKenzie King Administration are socialists at heart. Canadians are beginning to see the reason for the close friendship of the Liberals and the C.C.F. top-rankers . . . possibly the "idle rumour" that C.C.F. Chief Coldwell was considering accepting the Liberal leadership if it was offered to him was not "so idle" after all.

It helps us to understand also why there was no change of policy in the Bank of Canada after it was nationalised by the Liberals.

We must thank Mr. MacKenzie at least for being honest.

"Occultism" v. Christianity
Most of us, because we have been conditioned to think that way, have a natural reluctance to accept "occultism" as a considerable force in world affairs. There could hardly be a greater error—it is the primary adversary of Christian civilisation. The forces of which it disposes are probably amoral; but the intention of those most evidently in pos-session of them is Satanic. The Jewish Cabala is one of its main roots.

We might briefly note that our British forefathers, who gave us our basic conception of a free society, took action against King John in 1215, at Runnymede, because he was doing what Dictator Nash is doing today [1939]: Taking the means of livelihood from certain people.

Our forefathers did not demand anything new from King John. They wanted their ancient rights restored. Among the things enumerated in Magna Carta was the demand that even the lowest in the land was entitled to his accustomed means of livelihood.

Even if a man broke the law he was to be left with his livelihood. It was stated: "A freeman shall only be amerced, for a small offence after the manner of the offence, for a great crime according to the heinousness of it, saving to him his contenement: and, after the same manner, a merchant, saving his merchandise, and a villein, saving his wainage; the amercement in all cases to be assessed by the honest men of the

'Amercement" meant a fine. "Contenement" refers to that which is in-dispensable for a man's support and maintenance, according to his rank or social condition. "Wainage," his rank or social condition. "Wainage" was the crop or tillage of the villein or husbandman. (Taswell-Langmead's English Constitutional History.)

RED HERRING?

While we are uncompromising in our attitude to the Communists and their activities, we note with alarm how they are being increasingly used to divert attention from even more important activities of the centralisers. Communist action is part of the story; but it is not the whole story.

Our controlled Press is steadily priming the public with the idea that we must have either "English" Socialism or Russian Communism. This is the technique of the false alternative and it is being played for all it is worth. Unless it is grasped that ultimately the same international gang are behind our "capitalist" Press news, Communist activities and our "Labor" Government "advisers" no clear understanding of our plight is possible.

The devil is backing every horse in the race, and if important advances can be made on one horse, while focusing attention on and discrediting another, it will be done without compunction.

A little late in the day we are being deluged with articles and dramatised radio talks on the Communist conspiracy. Meanwhile, under cover, the centralisers are consolidating their position.

The Communists are all too convenient for some people, and any "exposure" which goes no further than a superficial survey of Red technique in the unions merely serves the enemy and his designs. Beware a Red herring.

Miss Instone now, literally, calls the tune, for there are a quarter of a million records under her control, and none is played without her sanction. And her job is not only a matter of looking after the records and seeing to their classification, but of hearing every new record that comes in, passing judgment on it, and deciding whether it is to be added to the library. Even this is not all. Miss Instone also arranges for famous musicians to introduce special programmes, and herself arranges the overseas programmes which supply 43 services—one of which is relaved to Australia.

THE ATOM BOMB And "Diplomacy"

It is a strange story that Charles F. Kettering, former research director for one of the great automotive companies, tells the U.F. correspondent at Miami. Mr. Kettering, who wanted to offer a $15,000 prize to the scientist developing the best plan of defence against the atomic bomb, "was told not to do so because it would cause the bomb to lose its diplomatic value.'

Who told him not to offer the prize Mr. Kettering does not say. From the context of his statement it would seem that the anonymous personage spoke with authority in government policy. Whoever it was the episode is revealing. It indicates a curious estimate of diplomacy and a singular ingenuousness with respect to American common sense and the competence of other peoples.

Why, having devised this weapon (exclusive possession of which is by no means assured us) we should fail to press intensively for defence against it, is surely a mystery beyond understanding. Why it should be supposed that other nations are not working on this problem, as well as on the bomb, is another. Mr. Kettering says that if we are smart enough to make the bomb we are "smart enough to design protection against it. But then he is only one of the top-flight practical scientific technologists in America! —Washington Times Herald.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT: The Transformation of Democracy

The following outstanding article, which appeared under the above heading in the pages of the "Hibbert Journal" for January 1947, is from the pen of that review's editor, the noted writer, L. P. Jacks. The "Hibbert Journal" is an English Quarterly Review of Religion, Theology, and

As the dark cloud of the totalitarian state settles over Britain there is a clear indication that its nature is being realised, if somewhat belatedly, in many quarters and some serious heart-searching is taking place.

1. Whether the democratic method was originally intended to give the people control of their political interests, and is burdened with a task for which it was not designed, and cannot sustain, when extended to the control of their industry, property, commerce, income, health, education, housing, feeding, clothing, light ing, heating, furniture, transport, loco motion, and general consumption of goods and services.

2. Whether, with the extension of political control to this unlimited field, the people have lost control over the growth of taxation and the principle of "no taxation without representation" become irrelevant.

3. Whether it was an aim of democracy, as originally conceived and instituted, to limit the activity of law-making to what is necessary for the safeguarding of liberty, give the people a tight hand on legislation, and prevent it running to excess under the force of habit or the love of power, and whether the constitution of the United States was framed with that object in view.

Law and Parliament

4. Whether this aim has been progressively lost sight of in subsequent developments of the democratic method and abandoned in favour of the oppo-

5. Whether, while the saying is true that "law is the safeguard of liberty," it is equally true that nothing is more fatal to liberty than an overdose of law, just as a drug taken in a small dose may save life but destroy it if taken in a large dose or too often.

6. Whether the recent claim of a Cabinet Minister "that the present Parliament had broken all records for Bills passed into law in a single session" would have been heard by the fathers of democracy with dismay, and taken by them as a sign that lawmaking is out of hand and liberty in grave peril.

7. Whether, in the discussion of each new Bill as it comes before Parliament, attention is too confined to the effects of that particular Bill when passed into law and negligent of the cumulative effect of passing so many.

The Political Franchise

8. Whether the condition of the addict who depends on drugs for his vitality and the condition of a community in the habit of looking to legislation for the satisfaction of its wants are phenomena of like nature and equally pathological.

9. Whether the extension of the franchise irrespective of the political competence of the enfranchised, concurrently with the extension of state control to vast and complicated operations, such as control of the nation's industry, requiring a high degree of specialised competence in many forms, inevitably necessitates the withdrawal of such matters from control by popular voting and the assignment of their control to administrators armed with dictatorial power.

10. Whether the fact that during the lifetime of the present British Govern ment 1,744 Orders, Rules, and Regulations have been imposed on the country without debate in Parliament proves that the process of withdrawing the conduct of affairs from democratic control is already far advanced in this country.

11. Whether state control has been, or is being, extended to matters as insusceptible of popular control under universal suffrage as would be the navigation of a ship by a majority vote of the passengers, or the treatment of disease in a hospital by a majority vote of the patients, and whether the end of democ racy as originally conceived and its transformation into a totalitarian system is hereby plainly foreshadowed.

12. Whether the transformation of democracy into totalitarianism is the chief of those indirect, unforeseen, and undesired effects of state control, which Herbert Spencer maintained, were apt to be more important than the direct, foreseen, and desired effects.

Growth of the Bureaucracy

13. Whether the conversion of Government into a powerful vested interest through the growth of a vast body of Converted the finish tensions of their Government officials, tenacious of their offices and emoluments, is another of the indirect, unforeseen, and undesired effects of state control.

14. Whether the fact that in this country the number of persons employed in the Civil Service and local government exceeds by a million the number in mining, and by three-quarters of a million the number in agriculture, indicates that the industrial structure is top-heavy with government, and whether the political control of industry is conducive either to incorruptible politics or to profitable business.

15. Whether the morality of the corporate state is so far superior to that of the individual citizen that the transference of industry from private to state control will raise the moral standard of industrial operations, or give them a more distinctly Christian character; or whether the contrary is true and the contrary to be expected.

16. Whether it is a characteristic of state control that each extension of it is apt to prove ineffective unless followed by a further extension into connected regions, the process thus acquiring an irresistible momentum which cannot stop itself, or be stopped, short of complete control over the lives and activities of the people.

Capital and Labour

17. Whether state ownership and control of the material means of production (capital) would be effective, or even workable, unless followed up by owner ship and control of the human means

MR. MENZIES AND COMMUNISTS

It is not often we agree with Mr. Menzies, but his criticism of the Communists, "Sun" (Melb.), 13/3/48, was very much to the point. The fact that "Communism is more than a political philosophy" was brought home forcibly at the Canadian Spy Trials.

One thing that Mr. Menzies' supporters must not overlook, however, is that, while verbally opposing Communism, both the Liberal and Labour Governments are constantly acquiring more power by forming new boards, &c., which further restrict and regiment the individual. Government control is just another name for Communism, but unless it is labelled as such so many people cannot recognise Another point to remember is that Mr. Menzies is now the Opposition leader, and experience has taught us that many politicians say the right thing when in the Opposition but vote the wrong way when members of the Government.

Some months ago the charge was made that the Commonwealth Literary Fund was being misused to subsidise Communism.

The committee in charge of that fund were Messrs. Chifley, Scullin, and Men-

Also, it was the Menzies Government that first forced farmers to obtain permission to grow wheat and established the notorious Apple and Pear Board.

The solution is not in sweeping the recognised Communists into the sea, as suggested by Mr. Menzies, but electors must instruct their members of Parliament to oppose the Communistic policy of centralising all power in bureaucratic bodies that are not responsible to the

A substantial reduction in both direct and indirect taxation would remove most of the industrial discontent, which is such a fine breeding-ground for Communism. -H.G.

SUPERPHOSPHATE HARMFUL TO SOIL Claim by Arthur Yates & Company

The New Zealand branch of Arthur Yates & Co. has in no uncertain manner condemned artificial fertilisers as being harmful to the soil, and as being detrimental to the nation's health. This revolutionary claim is likely to cause widespread repercussions in Australia, where the use of artificial fertilisers has become almost a fetish with farmers.

Arthur Yates & Co. sell large quantities of artificial fertilisers, and therefore stand to lose much financially as a result of their bold policy of attacking what they consider to be an evil.

This is a condensation of an article by Arthur Yates & Co., of Auckland, in a recent seed catalogue:

"In the early days of New Zealand our virgin land bore plentiful crops which were affected by few diseases, and nourished a healthy people of remarkable stature. . . The soils were then rich with the reserve of humus and minerals, which all fertile soils contain. But, by the aid of chemicals, acid-forming, water-soluble stimulating manures such as sulphate

Action Group Appeal

Response to the appeal for fighting funds by the Social Credit Action Group has been excellent, and we wish to take this opportunity of thanking those supporters who have contributed, for their generous and valuable assistance.

But we are sure there are many of our supporters who intend to contribute who have not yet done so. Remember, these funds are urgently required, and our activities are getting nearer to that stage when such financial support may be clearly recognised as a vital investment for our future.

of ammonia and superphosphate in its various forms, these reserves have now been largely consumed. We have been living on the soil's capital and mining the reserves which nature provided, and now the capital is giving out.

Soil Is Sick

"Consider the gradual lapse from the early peak of healthy products to the present day, when farming, orcharding, and gardening have become a constant losing struggle against an increasing host of fungoid, bacterial, and insect pests. Consider our ever-growing and overflowing hospitals. Everyone should know that all life comes from the soil, and we are what we eat, and if the soil is sick, all other forms of life will be sick.

"Thousands of New Zealanders will remember the time when peach trees grew almost wild, and bore generously, and brown rot and suchlike diseases were unknown, and tomatoes grew without the least trouble, and the use of poisonous sprays was unheard of. Today, however, if the weather is unfavourable and muggy, whole orchards of peaches fail, whole crops of tomatoes are lost.

"Absolute Disgrace"

"It is hard to realise what a comparatively few years it took to poison our soils and foods. We have now become a people with some of the worst teeth in the world; about 90% of our children grow up with bad teeth. We are told by our medical examiners for military service that we are fast deteriorating into a C3 nation . . . For a country with the finest climate in the world, with ample stocks of food, sunshine hours, plenty of clothing, and an outdoor life, this is an absolute disgrace.

"The truth is that the theory of chemical fertilisation was founded on a misconception. It was argued that because a plant is formed of chemicals they need only to be applied to the soil in chemical form for the plants to get all they fact that plants do not naturally absorb these chemicals in their chemical form, but extract them from living organisms, was ignored by the founders of Chemical Agriculture. That the result of forcing unnatural chemical foods on to the plant world would be nearly as fatal as a diet of the chemical constituents of meat and bread in their original form as lumps of iron, &c., would be to man, was overlooked in the early days of chemical manures.

"What for? A particularly interesting fact about this New Zealand fertiliser subsidy is that it is only payable to superphosphate manufacturers, but not to blood and bone, bonedust, basic slag, &c. WHY? Another significant fact is that you will very seldom hear the Department of Agriculture give favourable mention to any other manure than superphosphate, which is absolutely wrong, especially when a Government acknowledges that about 90% of all watersoluble phosphates (super.) applied to clays or ironstone soils are fixed and lost to plants.

Basis of Life

"The basis of all life starts in the soil, and if health is to be maintained, the process as laid down by nature must be followed, which processes are known to the average man as compost or humus. Only the soil life can change the various complex substances that are added or returned to the soil into forms that can be assimilated by plant life without becoming unhealthy.

"Humus is derived from organic matter; it includes the dead residue of plants, animals, worms, and insects, together with myriads of live and dead minute organisms . . . All organic waste and refuse should never be burnt or wasted, whether it be dead fowl or potato peelings from the kitchen, but should be added to compost heap. Add everything except tin cans, bottles, &c.

"It is sometimes said that making compost and applying it involves an excessive amount of work. The answer is that if the work is put into the healthy fertilisation of the land it will not have to be put into fighting diseases. . . . Returns from crops would be surer, and deterioration in the productive value of land would be stayed.

"In England it was argued that the labour costs of replacing chemicals with compost would be prohibitive, but compost has won out on a business basis. Since Biblical times farmers and peasants have fertilised their soils with Nature's manure—compost—and have not been troubled with sickness and disease in plants or animals.

SELF SUFFICIENCY

"The more a thing is found to be self-sufficient, the better it is."

—St. Thomas Aquinas

The Working of Nature

"Although we sell and supply what our customers demand, we have formed our own ideas by generations of experience of the workings of Nature, and we have taken the liberty of expressing some here, although the loss of sales of super., insecticides, plants, trees, &c., will result through a general improvement in the health of plant life.

"Yours sincerely for our country against rackets."

This article is all the more startling when it is realised that the authors are large-scale retailers of the products they so strongly attack.

The Rich Man

"He who knows what sweets and virtues are in the ground, the water, the plants, and the heavens; and how to come at this enchantments, is the rich and royal man."

—Emerson.

Yates & Co. may lose monetarily as a result of their outspoken policy, but they are to be congratulated for their decision to put the welfare of the nation before financial gain. The nation would be better for it if more commercial firms followed suit.

At the present moment a revolution seems to be taking place in scientific circles. The men of science are just beginning to realise that the fertility of the soil is almost entirely dependent on the living population of the soil itself. If fed on natural foods such as a plentiful supply of decomposed animal and vegetable wastes (compost) the organisms, which comprise the under-earth population, thrive and multiply and perform all the functions necessary to make food available to plant life. In other words, they create rich, productive soil.

Chemical fertilisers provide only a temporary stimulant, like opium to the human body, and while "pepping up" plants momentarily, has an adverse effect on the soil population generally.
