Lower Living Standards Ahead

Government's "Drastic Remedies"

Speaking at a Country Party Conference in Brisbane on July 25, the Federal Treasurer, Sir Arthur Fadden, clearly indicated the "shape of things to come" when he said: "We do not claim we shall produce ideal solutions to Australia's problems, but we are confident we shall produce solutions that will work... We shall not hesitate to take bold and resolute action to deal with our problems. It will be like a strong dose of medicine — hard to take, but ultimately beneficial to the recipient. Drastic complaints need drastic remedies." Sir Arthur's statements are similar to those being made by other Government spokesmen, who are desperately attempting to create an atmosphere of panic in which the people can be high-pressured into accepting their "medicine" — more totalitarianism.

In spite of definite promises made before the 1949 Federal Elections, that he and his colleagues could and would deal with inflation, Mr. Menzies watched the inflation problem growing progressively worse and was apparently not going to take any action until the recent announcement of the 12/- increase in the basic wage forced him at least to give the impression that the Government was at last going to get to grips with the problem. But the proposals already suggested can only lead to even greater hardships for the majority of the people. We desire to go on the record now as saying so far from the Government's suggested policies producing "solutions that will work," they will strike a heavy blow against what little independence is left in this country.

It is true that at long last the Government has been compelled to admit that the Federal bureaucracy should be reduced and that the big immigration scheme has been contributing to inflation. But this belated admission means that the Menzies Government has been deliberately contributing to inflation over the past two years. It was prepared to continue doing so until pressure forced Mr. Menzies to make his dramatic announcement concerning reduction of the Federal bureaucracy. However, even this announcement does not impress us. It is largely "window dressing," as time will demonstrate. We venture to predict now that in six months' time the size of the Federal bureaucracy will be little less than it is today. The bureaucracy will strenuously resist any proposal to reduce their numbers. There is only one way in which a genuine reduction can be made, and that is by the Federal Government disgorging many of its powers and completely abolishing a number of Departments. The proposal to curtail immigration is welcome, but we would draw attention to the fact that already much actual and potential damage has been done to our community by the importation of a large number of undesirables from Europe.

The central feature of the Government's proposals to deal with inflation is, of course, a deflationary financial policy — although we feel that this may only be temporary in order to control the people to submit to more instalments of the centrally planned State. We are amazed that any logical person can accept the proposition that increased taxation and a policy of credit restriction are a genuine solution of the inflation problem. The "economic experts" whose views the politicians merely parrot, claim that there is a "surplus" of purchasing power which must be "mopped up" by heavier taxation. This will prevent a continuation of "luxury spending" which is allegedly diverting valuable manpower and materials from "essential" production.

Now inflation has become so severe that the great majority of the people are finding it progressively harder to maintain their standards of living. They are short of adequate purchasing power. There are comparatively few people with a "surplus" of spending power, while most of the

THE "PRACTICAL SOCIALIST"

"I always tell my Opposition friends that the only difference between us is that I am theoretically non-Socialist, yet an amazingly practical Socialist, while they are theoretical Socialists. People will take things from us they wouldn't take from the Labor Party . . . It is a question of speed. You get two views, which, in theory, are violently opposed. In practice, the extreme course of today is a commonplace of tomorrow."

—Vide Melbourne "Age," March 3, 1941.

"luxuries" being bought—washing machines and other labor saving devices for the housewife, are on the time-payment system. Surely it is obvious that heavier taxation must immediately reduce the already inadequate purchasing power of the people still further. All taxation imposed on industry must be costed into prices and thus paid by the consumer. Heavier taxation must therefore increase prices, not reduce them. But, again demonstrating his acceptance of Socialist propaganda, Mr. Menzies has inferred that industry can pay increased taxation out of profits without increasing prices; that industry has been profiteering.

OUR POLICY

1. The preservation of Australia's sovereignty as a part of the British Empire, and the exposure of all internal and external groups, which attack that sovereignty.
2. The preservation and extension of genuine local government.
3. The preservation and strengthening of all Constitutional safeguards for the purpose of protecting fundamental individual rights.
4. The encouragement of all activities designed to bring Governments under more effective control by the electors.
5. The preservation and extension of genuine free, competitive enterprise and private ownership, and opposition to all Monopoly, whether it be "private" or State.
6. The support of a financial policy which will (a) permit free enterprise to make available to all individuals an increasing standard of living and greater leisure for cultural pursuits; (b) result in no further increase in the community's indebtedness and the sound business practice of gradually reducing existing debt.
7. Recognising that the basis of any sound economy is agriculture, the encouragement of agricultural policies, which will ensure the preservation and building up of soil fertility by organic farming and gardening; and the prevention of soil erosion and the protection of forests and watersheds.

Now, when our land to ruin's brink is verging,
In God's name, let us speak while there is time!
Now, when the padlocks for our lips are forging,
Silence is crime.

TO THE POINT

The Forgotten Taxpayer

Last week the Federal Secretary of the Taxpayers' Association, Mr. J. Pettigrove, complained that his Association had not been invited by Mr. Menzies to attend the anti-inflation conference. Surely Mr. Pettigrove realises that the major role of taxpayers in the new "anti-inflationary" policy is to pay more taxes. Anyhow, are Mr. Pettigrove and his colleagues genuine defenders of the taxpayers against the Government? Mr. Pettigrove is reported as saying that "Increased taxation was not the only method of lifting the country from its difficulties." Increased taxation always increases the individual's difficulties and never lessens them.

Liberal - Socialism

"The Times' (London) finance editor sees very little difference between the reactions of the British and Australian Governments toward inflation, despite their political differences."

Exactly. As the "Liberals" have no genuine understanding of the real cause of inflation, they can merely follow the Socialists—even if some of them are rather reluctant about doing so.

* * * *

Dr. H. C. Coombs

We note with interest a newspaper report stating that Dr. Coombs is playing a key role in formulating the Government's "anti-inflationary" plans. This highly trained product of the London School of Economics will ensure that the Government advances further and further along the Socialist road. Dr. Coombs is a strong advocate of heavier taxation. When a Member of the Federal Opposition Sir Arthur Fadden was a persistent opponent of high taxation, which he said deterred maximum production and increased prices. But now he is the Federal Treasurer "advised" by Socialist planners, and supports what he previously condemned.

Hypocrisy

"Australia can expect a tough economic future after the Defence Preparations Bill is enacted."—Liberal Senator Cormack, as reported in the Melbourne "Sun" of July 19. Senator Cormack and his fellow Liberals did not talk like this before the last two elections. And they are the hypocrites who attacked the Chifley Government for its undemocratic policy of introducing Bank Nationalisation when it had made no mention of the issue at the previous Federal election.

Persian Oil

Isn't it strange how the Persian Government decided to re-open talks on the oil issue after being visited by President Truman's chief "fixer," Mr. Harriman? We were not at all surprised to note that Mr. Harriman may be successful in having established a Persian-American-British organisation to handle Persian oil. The total result must be not only a further weakening of British economic sovereignty, but also a further lowering of British prestige in the Middle East. This is, of course, essential for the furtherance of the Big Idea. —"World Monopoly."

One Result of Korea

It is reported from America that America and 42 other countries, including Australia, are preparing a one-year £111 million reconstruction programme for South Korea. However, some "experts" claim that thousands of millions will be required and 10 years to complete the task. This will enable the internationalists to divert more of the wealth of "United" Nations countries and to bring the internal economies of these countries under more centralised control. This is the price of "defeating" Communism.

Jewish Communists In Lithuania

Dr. James Kaskelis, Lithuanian D.P. who escaped from his Red-occupied homeland, in a recent interview with Jacob Dawson was asked: "Was there any Communist movement in Lithuania before the Russians took over?" His reply:

"There were less than 3,000 in the Lithuanian Communist Party out of a population of 3½ millions. However, the Party members were not Lithuanians; they were mostly Russians and Jews living in our country."

—"The Canadian Intelligence Service," May, 1951.

Dean Acheson

Senator Taft and others have actually revealed that Dean Acheson, our Secretary of State, advocated in 1946 a bill that was introduced in the Congress for the United States to finance the training of ten divisions (150,000 men) of Communist Chinese troops.

—"The Letter," Washington.

Liquidation, Not "Diversion"

In recent speeches Mr. Menzies has revealed how he has not only accepted the ideas of the Socialist planners, but also their jargon. Instead of honestly saying that his Committee for the Diversion of Resources from Luxury Production proposes, by regulation, to liquidate certain sections of industry, Mr. Menzies uses the term "diverted." But the results will be just the same. We await with interest an interpretation of "luxury production" by the "experts."

If the Government is determined to impose higher taxation upon industry, and at the same time implement rigid price control, we have no doubt that many industries will have to close down. And this is exactly what the planners desire. They know that the financial policy the Menzies Government is going to implement will break the independence of the smaller and medium-sized businesses, strengthen Big Business, and force the production system into a mould, which they have deemed necessary.

Nothing but disaster faces us if the Government is permitted to go ahead with its proposals. We must take firm action to

U.S.A. Government Helped Communists Steal Atomic Bomb

In his book, "The Red Plot Against America," Robert E. Stripling, Chief Investigator of the House of Un-American Activities, 1938-1948, writes that "The Soviet Purchasing Commission flew more than half a ton of Lend-lease uranium oxide and 25 pounds of uranium metal out of the U.S. over the protests of Gen. Leslie R. Groves, in the midst of our secret development of the A-bomb." Although Groves appeared before the Un-American Committee, he was unable to give a great amount of detailed information concerning Communist espionage in the American Government because of a Presidential direction.

The following article from the May issue of "The Canadian Intelligence Service" provides further evidence of how highly placed persons in the American Government made it possible for atom bomb information to be passed to Soviet Russia: "The American Mercury" magazine (April) reveals, for the first time, how the American State and Justice Departments in 1943 actually helped Soviet agents steal our atomic secrets, refusing to let F.B.I. and Army Counter-intelligence officers arrest Red agents as they handed secret atomic formulas over to Soviet officials.

Mr. Bradford Huie, editor of "Mercury," brings out the following revealing points:

That the American Government first tried to deny that espionage crimes had been committed, and then, when this could be denied no longer, did everything possible to shield the criminals.

That there are two groups of guilty Americans: (1) the men who actually conspired to deliver information into Russian-employed hands, and (2) the officers of the U.S. government who knew that such deliveries were being made and who, nevertheless, prevented the arrest of the conspirators.

That the Comintern is believed to have learned of our experiments in nuclear physics as early as 1939, and by 1940 had organized espionage cells to relay developments to Moscow.

That the head of the cell in the important Radiation Laboratory at the University of California was Steve Nelson, who was born Stefan Mesarosh in Yugoslavia, entered the U.S. illegally and under an assumed name, and went to Russia about 1931 to study treason at the Lenin Institute. "Nelson" went to Spain about 1937, under the name "Fleischinger," fighting as a Lieutenant Colonel with the Reds in the Spanish Civil War.

It is believed that one of the reasons Nelson was given this important atomic secrets assignment was because he was a friend of a woman named Katherine Harrison, whom he had first met in Spain in 1937. She was a biologist with pinkish leanings, who returning to America, transferred to the University of California and married Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, the man who was to direct the assembly of the atomic bomb!

Dr. Oppenheimer has testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee that he was never a member of the Communist Party; his wife has not yet been called to testify; but his brother, Frank Oppenheimer, has admitted Party membership.

The "Mercury" article then discloses:

That included in Nelson's cell were:

Giovanni Rossi Lomanitz, David Joseph Bohm, and Joseph Weinberg.

That agents of the F.B.I. and the Army's Counter-intelligence Corps, working together, knew the members of this cell and tailed them. "And the agents were not asleep on a dark night in March, 1943, when Dr. Weinberg made his way to 3720 Grove Street, Oakland, which was Nelson's home." He delivered to Nelson vital information on the atom bomb.

American security agencies, knowing the importance of this formula, were appalled. Hurried appeals were made to the State and Justice Departments to allow the arrest of Nelson, Weinberg, and the others. These appeals became even more frantic when the F.B.I. and A.C.I.C. officers a few hours later heard Nelson telephone the Soviet Consulate in San Francisco and make a date to meet the vice-consul, Peter Ivanov, that afternoon at the "usual place."

With perhaps the future of Western civilization at stake, both the State and Justice Departments refused to authorize an arrest, and the next afternoon the officers had to endure the ordeal of watching Nelson meet Ivanov on the grounds of the St. Francis Hospital in San Francisco and hand him the formula.

The F.B.I. and A.C.I.C. officers kept the Government informed day by day of the treason of these conspirators, but the pro-Communists in the State and Justice Departments refused to "interfere."

On July 1 1944, Dr. Martin David Kamen, a chemist at the Radiation Laboratory, was observed by Counter-intelligence Officers passing secret information to Kremlin agents.

In August 1943, according to sworn testimony, a meeting was held in the home of Dr. Weinberg in Berkeley. In attendance were Bernadette Doyle, Nelson, Lomanitz, Irving David Fox, David Bohm, and Ken Max Manfred, formerly known as Max Bernard Friedman. All except Doyle and Nelson were then employed at the Radiation Laboratory and working on the atomic project, and all have been identified as members of the Communist Party.

No actions against any of this group were taken by the United States Government between 1943 and 1948. Nelson became chairman of the Communist Party in Western Pennsylvania. Weinberg found a safe haven as an assistant professor of physics at the University of Minnesota. Dr. Bohm stayed on at the Radiation Laboratory in Berkeley until 1946, then going to Princeton. Lomanitz batted around from California to Cornell until 1948, when he went to Fisk University in Nashville. A word raised against any of them, or against Frank Oppenheimer, was denounced as "persecution" by most of America's "free" press, including Time Magazine and the like.

A classic example of the kind of sloppy "tolerance" the Reds and left-wingers are pumping out today has been our failure to deal effectively with these traitors, these enemies of America.

In September 1948, the House Committee on Un-American Activities recommended that Nelson be prosecuted under the Espionage Act of 1917. The Department of Justice declined to act.

The House Committee recommended that Dr. Weinberg be prosecuted for perjury, but the Department of Justice has taken no action, and Weinberg continues to teach American youth.

Giovanni Rossi Lomanitz is still openly promoting Communist activities.

In all the history of governments there is perhaps no parallel to this incredible treachery in high places. It is this same administration, which by secret agreement, sold out Poland and Eastern Europe to Russia, undermined and double-crossed Nationalist China, finally plunging us into Korea.

As informed observers in America now know, the hidden hand behind this treason is the Niles (Neyhus)—Lehman—Morgen-thau—Frankfurter conspiracy. Until these elements are dismissed, treason will be the order of the day in America. The first step back toward the redemption of America is: Clean out the traitors and replace them with loyal, Christian Americans.

CREDIT POLICY

In their desperate efforts to try and placate an outraged public opinion, it appears that the politicians are prepared to accept the proposition that a policy of credit restriction is necessary to defeat inflation. It is now generally known, of course—even amongst politicians—that any policy of general credit restriction must result in deflation. One major result of a deflation policy is the intensification of the process of economic centralism taking place under inflation. Small and medium-sized businesses are immediately destroyed, or are compelled to amalgamate with sections of Big Business. Apart from its effect upon industry, a policy of general credit restriction, even if only maintained for a short period, must ruin hundreds of thousands of individuals who are attempting to buy homes, furniture, and household appliances under various systems of time payment.

As we have demonstrated time and time again over the years, and surely events have confirmed what we have had to say, while present financial rules are maintained, the economic system can only function while the volume of financial credit is being progressively expanded. But this expansion automatically results in inflation and all that it means. All the talk about increased production and harder work does not alter this fundamental fact. The alternative to growing disaster under a policy of credit expansion is not even worse disaster under a policy of credit restriction. We believe that those responsible for credit policy today, the economic planners like Dr. Coombs, are well aware that irrespective of whether credit is restricted or expanded under present financial rules, the independence of the individual is progressively undermined and the power of monopolistic organisations over the individual increased. Many of the politicians may be panic stricken, but their panic is being shrewdly exploited by the planners who are calmly imposing their policy of monopoly.

We are well aware that there are many well-meaning people, including some politicians, who believe that the volume of credit has been "over-expanded" and that there can be a "moderate" policy of restriction, not sufficient to produce depression conditions. Those who have this conception of credit policy, something to be "managed" arbitrarily by planners, irrespective of whether they are bankers or bureaucrats, are supporting a policy of monopoly. A little thought should convince any reasonable person who supports the idea of individual sovereignty, that credit policy, which governs the entire economic life of a community, should not be the plaything of a few people. There is much talk about our "scientific age," but apparently credit policy is something to be decided arbitrarily. Thus the fantastic spectacle of a proposed credit restriction policy because of political panic. The volume of credit required by a community should be governed automatically by the facts of production, not by a few individuals. Credit policy should be decentralised in the hands of all the individuals who make up a community. They should decide how their credit is to be used. If over a given period the economic facts reveal that an expansion of credit is necessary to help the community purchase what it has produced, this credit should pass directly to the individual via a system of price subsidies, which would prevent inflation. As both inflation and deflation are the direct results of present financial rules, surely the first step towards stability is a critical examination of these rules with a view to suitably modifying them?

PROPHETIC WORDS

"The Prime Minister, Mr. Menzies, in a speech to 300 businessmen who entertained him at a dinner at the Australia hotel last night, expressed his conviction that the war-time controls now being exercised by the Federal Government would continue to operate after the war . . . 'I believe that the new order is being built now . . . In the last two years you have seen the introduction of profits control and prices regulation. You have seen new departments lay their hands on private enterprise, and policies pursued which are designed to affect the cost of living and interest rates. I hope that none of you will imagine that these just and equitable things that have been done during the war will cease when peace has been won. They will not.'"

—Vide "Sydney Morning Herald," August 20, 1951.

Letters to Press

The following two letters, which appeared in the Melbourne "Herald" of July 23, indicate an avenue of profitable activity, which we urge our supporters to exploit:

I am not an economist, but I notice that the coming increase in the basic wage will increase wages by over £40 million a week.

Why not use the £40 million to subsidise food prices further and thereby prevent further basic wage increases?

—V. M. WILDE, Dobson Street, South Yarra.

Many industrial leaders have declared that increased production is the solution to inflation. They could put their theory into practice in a simple way.

Employees in any factory could be notified that an increase in production would be followed by a comparative decrease in the manufacturers' selling price.

—E. J. GROGAN, Maribyrnong Road, Moonee Ponds.

A Lesson on Flood Control

The special article War Against the Rivers (20/7) fills me with extreme disquiet. By all and every means keep the rivers free of snags, but to straighten a river, which is subject to floods, is sheer waste of labor and money.

There is worldwide evidence to prove that the only place to organise flood control is in the upper reaches of rivers and their major tributaries.

Chapter eight of the book, "Out of the Earth," by Louis Bromfield, tells how this has been successfully achieved for the Muskingum River, Ohio, U.S.A. — to the profit, and not the loss, of the taxpayer.

What happens even to a stream, when straightened, is factually set out (page 116) in the same book.

—JOHN MANIFOLD, in Melbourne "Age," July 24.

"United" Nations Fomenting War

By Robert H. Williams

Douglas MacArthur made it clear in his address to Congress that he had no faith in any United Nations scheme as a means to prevent war.

This writer often has pointed out that no world government could keep the peace unless it were an all-powerful world police (such as Stassen and Eisenhower call for) — which would suppress all liberties—and that even such a dictatorship would have to wage wars constantly in order to "enforce peace."

Here are some other reasons why the United Nations should be abolished or America should withdraw (and set up a committee of co-operating nations, with no world government designs).

Twenty-nine percent of all foreign U.N. officials are known Communist spies, under surveillance by U.S. Intelligence (as stated in a Fulton Lewis column, January 30, 1951).

The U.N. is freely claimed by leading Zionists as their invention. It is their power device. And it was the Communist Alger Hiss who presided as Secretary-General at the formative conference in San Francisco in 1945; and it was Hiss who principally steered the important committees, including that which established U.S. participation policies—as files in your public library will substantiate. Thus, the U.N. was effectively shaped to suit the Kremlin and the Zionists, who worked closely with Hiss.

A third reason for abolishing the shoddy peace hoax was brought out in an article in the September, 1950, issue of the Jewish Exponent, entitled Jewish Personalities in the United Nations. The article named nine Jews, all evidently Marxists, who wield great, if not dominant, influence over the most important policies and bureaus of the U.N.

"The three leading Jewish personalities among the delegates to the United Nations," read the article, "very neatly reflect the three main lines along which all U.N. debates wind their tortuous course. On the left is Poland's permanent representative, Julius Katz-Suchy; in the middle is Israel's permanent representative (and U.S. Ambassador), Aubrey S. Eban; on the right is the American delegation's key political expert, Benjamin V. Cohen.

"Although diverging thus sharply in doctrine, they have qualities remarkably in common. All three stand high in the judgment of their colleagues as skilled parliamentarians, first-rate minds, impressive debaters and incisive thinkers . . ."

The background of each of these three delegates reveals that indeed the three have much in common, so much that it is farcical to refer to them as representing the left, middle and right, politically. Katz-Suchy is the delegate from Communist Poland; Eban is the delegate from the Marxist-dominated Zionist state; Socialist Cohen is well known as a leading "architect of the New Deal"

Does the situation suggest the reason why U.N. minds follow policies destructive to the West and helpful to the Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics and Israel?

The three masterminds are assisted by Abraham H. Feller, "director of U.N.'s legal department and the organization's general counsel. In that capacity he acts as one of Lie's chief advisers."

The reader may recall, too, that Lie himself was Moscow trained, calls himself a Socialist and does not deny that he was a Communist.

The article describes Feller as "a 45-year-old ex-New Deal lawyer" who "plays a central role in the doings themselves. Abe Feller . . . went to the founding and organizing conferences at San Francisco and London as an adviser to the United States delegation" (on the staff of Alger Hiss).

Another contributor to the Socialist policies is "David Weintraub (who) came to the U.N. by way of long and high-level services with the New Deal and then U.N.R.R.A. . . . Weintraub was director of procurement (for U.N.R.R.A.—Ed.), was snatched up by U.N. and has been running its division of economic stability and development ever since . . . Weintraub became a top government economist in the United States, directing research for Harry Hopkins' social welfare programmes.

"Today he is looked upon as the father of U.N.'s technical assistance programme, providing technical aid — personnel and know-how—to under developed countries . . . in industry, agriculture and social welfare . . ."

This seems to be the planning body through which the international bankers and proletarian organizers have inspired President Truman's "Point Four" to develop "backward areas all over the world," using U.S. tax money to build jungle roads and otherwise pave the way for investments by international financiers who in turn will compete with bona fide American industry. Over the same jungle roads travel the gentlemen who stir all the coloured races against the white race in Mr. Wientraub's "social welfare" programme, organizing the East against the West, promising a third world war—the United Nations thus bringing "peace" to the world!

We have not yet finished with the revealing article in the Jewish Exponent. There is also Mr. Benjamin A. Cohen of Chile (not to be confused with Benjamin V. Cohen of the U.S. delegation). Benjamin A. Cohen, or "Chile Ben," is "Boss of public information" for the United Nations. He heads a staff of "over 400 people of 43 nationalities. This is what it does every day: It runs a full fledged 'city room' . . . for the benefit of the world's press . . . It prepares radio broadcasts that go out to every area of the globe in 22 to 30 languages. It cuts records in a constant stream for distribution the world over. It produces newsreels and documentaries, both radio and film, publishes a weekly newspaper in three languages and countless pamphlets, digests and full-length volumes and operates U.N. information centres in more than a dozen countries . . . Ben Cohen is seeing to it that every corner of the planet earth is appraised of U.N. doings. ."

Mr. Cohen's "information" service is so slanted it is readily recognizable in the press. It supports Mr. Weintraub's "welfare" designs, making natives of "under developed areas" demand more "democracy" and "equality," and hate the "White bigot" who is guilty of building a higher standard of living.

Facilitating the various processes at the U.N. is Monsieur Georges Rabinovitch "who heads up the world organization's famous group of interpreters." M. Rabinovitch, the Jewish Exponent tells us, "fled from Czarist Russia," but it does not say why. I have not found any instance in authentic Russian history where a Jew had to run from the Czars except for crime or revolutionary activities. (Many Jews held public offices under the Czars.)

Teeth and the Organic Method

By J. I. Rodale

One of the first dividends our family received from the practising of the organic method and the eating of foods raised organically was a noticeable improvement in our teeth. There were less and less cavities every time we went to the dentist.

In the case of our youngest child, Nina, who is now thirteen, the condition of her teeth is perfect. She does not have a single cavity in any of her teeth. This was made possible in her case because she was only about three years old when we began to eat food raised organically. In my own case I have not had a cavity in five years. Hundreds of our readers have also noted a wonderful improvement in their teeth. Typical is the case of a family of three that came to see me recently, who told that where they used to have a yearly dental bill of about a hundred dollars, it is now reduced to about ten dollars, and consists only of routine cleaning. Only a few days ago a woman from Rhode Island told me that she stopped having cavities five years ago, after she began eating organically grown food. And, the peculiar thing is, far from their entire diet is organically produced. Usually the organic portion consists only of the vegetables that they raise in their own garden. Some purchase organically produced food through the mails. It is amazing what a small amount of organically produced food will do for the health of a person.

Permit me to quote an item from the "Field Magazine," published in England, dated January 6, 1945:

On Planning the Earth

BY Dr. GEOFFREY DOBBS

This brilliant work not only exposes completely the falsity of the propaganda issued by the advocates of the Tennessee Valley Authority and similar large-scale land planning and hydroelectric schemes, but reveals them as part of a world-wide conspiracy designed to drive the individual down the scale of human existence. Foreword by Major C. H. Douglas.

"I was interested in your letter from 'Dental Surgeon,' because my seven-year-old son and I have only just paid a routine visit to the dentist. He seemed quite unusually impressed by the excellence of my son's teeth and asked me if he had had any special diet. I told him: No. That he had eaten no meat (including eggs) up to the age of three years, but since then had eaten meat and exactly what he liked. I added, however, that we grew as much of our food as possible on compost soil and that for more than his lifetime we have never used an ounce of artificial fertilizers.

"'You have given me the answer,' said the dentist. 'Now I understand why he has teeth like that.'

"In my own case, my teeth used to collect huge quantities of tartar. Every year it had to be scraped off. We began using compost instead of artificials toward the end of 1936. When I went to my dentist in 1942, after a lapse (I am ashamed to say) of two-and-a-half years, I expected a terrific scraping to occur. There was no tartar to remove. Another two years elapsed before I went again, this last time. There was a very little tartar behind two teeth, and that was all.

"We have used compost for just about eight years, and for the last five of those years my teeth have lost their unpleasant habit of collecting tartar. Is this a coincidence? It might be. But I was telling this story to someone else, and she has had exactly the same experience. Incidentally, I asked the dentist if wartime diet could have anything to do with it. He did not think it had, because he finds now just as much tartar collecting on his other patients' teeth as before the war."

"TRACES BAD TEETH TO SOIL"

"Schenectady, N.Y.—Tooth decay as well as serious illness might be traced to our eating vegetables and other foods that were grown on soil deficient in calcium and other minerals, Dr. George D. Scarseth of Lafayette, Ind., director of research of the American Farm Research Association, declared in a General Electric Farm Forum address here.

"'It is not difficult to see how a deficiency of essential vitamins and minerals may cause weakened teeth, with subsequent decay and abscesses,' Dr. Scarseth pointed out. Neither is it difficult to suspect that prolonged abscesses, pouring toxins into the blood stream, might well show up eventually in kidney disturbances, high blood pressure, or heart diseases.'

"Dr. Scarseth said that data collected by physicians, biochemists, agronomists and engineers working on the problem of soil deficiencies 'indicate there must be a close relationship between the fertility of the land and well-being of the animals that consume the crops.'"

In the March 1946, issue of the "Dental Magazine and Oral Topics," published in England, appears an article that shows the remarkable effect of organically produced food on the teeth of young boys and girls. I am going to quote the entire article. It was written by and represents the experience of E. Brodie Carpenter, a dentist:

"The effects of increased quantities of healthy food on the teeth of the children of the Royal Commercial Travellers' School.

"This school was founded one hundred years ago for the orphans of commercial travellers. The numbers vary from term to term, but in recent years there have been about 95 girls and 135 boys in two separate establishments in the same buildings. There is a good deal of land attached to the school, and from it in the years before the war the school was getting a certain amount of its vegetables. When war was obviously inevitable, the head gardener ploughed up a further five and a half acres, which used to be a paddock for the horses, and brought this under cultivation for vegetables also. Every year since then he has grown more and more vegetables until now the school buys none at all.

"The system of agriculture would meet the approval of the most fastidious of the 'natural manure school.' Every ounce of waste is returned to the soil, and up to a hundred pigs are kept for their manure, which is composted with clippings from the playing fields and with straw. No artificial manure is used at all. The vegetables grown are like the pictures on the seed packets.

"It is a curious fact that part of the five-and-a-half-acre field is silt from the River Pin: this is in accordance with agriculture on the banks of the Nile. It is even more extraordinary that a smaller field was used by the L.M.S. for spreading the night earth from Hatch End Station in the days of earth closets: this is the method of the Chinaman, who has cultivated his own bit of land with his own and his animal's wastes for 4,000 years.

"The produce of the school's land has gone up by 33-1/3 percent since the war for nearly a hundred fewer children, the number now being 240-250, whereas before the war they numbered as many as 340.

"Now what is the effect on the teeth? I took up the appointment of dental officer at the school in 1939, and at the first examination was very perturbed at the state of affairs. I graded the boys and girls into 'A' for none to two cavities, 'B' for three to five, and 'C' for six and upwards. 'A's' were 50 percent, 'B's' 32 percent, and 'C's' 18 percent, and I found a number of cavities in 'fronts.'

"I settled down to an oral hygiene campaign and started with the 'fronts,' but the trouble was that all the children leaving had to be completed by the end of the Christmas term. I toiled on through that school year and the next, examining them every nine months.

"In September, 1941, things were no better: 'A's' were 56 percent, 'B's' 27 percent, and 'C's' 17 percent. In 1943 and early 1944 there was a very obvious general improvement—cavities were fewer and the unhealthy, gluey sort of saliva so often seen in the adolescent age was decreasing. By 1945 the examination showed that 'A's' were 97 percent, and 'B's' 3 percent.

"This was dramatic enough, but in September, 1945, there was an average of a quarter filling per child, and the boys were 100 percent. 'A'. Out of 230 girls examined in a period of nine months, the child (a girl) with the most cavities had four. (Grading of the girls: 'A's' 97 percent, 'B's' 3 percent.)

"This simply astonishing change, I feel quite certain, is to the credit of the Board of Management and of the Gardener—not mine. How else could one account for the absence of incidence?

"I am well aware that there are other items of diet, but I am convinced that, provided that there are no excesses in the rest of the diet, fresh vegetables provided by a sound system of agriculture are the corner-stone of dental health.

"The bread at the school before the war was not white but a special bread 'Nevill's loaf. I consider 100 percent, wholemeal to be the ideal. The children have always had enough milk, and sweets (if these make any difference, which is doubtful) have always been regulated. The animal protein is restricted, as are fats. Eggs are new-laid on the premises. The diet, in short, is an ordinary all-round one, except that the 'vegetable protein is properly synthesised' and in abundance."

Now let us compare this with what workers at the School of Dentistry of the University of Minnesota are discovering about the teeth of the students of that institution. There were three successive studies that began twenty years ago which were written up in the April, 1951, issue of "The Journal of the American Dental Association." I quote a portion:

"The 3,388 freshman students, both men and women, who entered the University of Minnesota in 1929 averaged 9.95 teeth affected by dental caries. The 4,348 students who entered ten years later, in 1939 had 11.8 teeth so affected. The 4,412 who came to the University in 1949 averaged 13.7 teeth affected by caries. All differences are statistically significant.

"Though started only 20 years ago, these decennial reviews of the dental condition of university freshmen really cover a period of approximately 40 years. The young people who entered the University in 1929 at an average age of about 19 years were born in 1910 or thereabouts. The period since that time has produced more benefits for dental health than any other period in the world's history. Nutrition, particularly among the American people, has greatly improved. Dental hygiene has become an almost universal practice, at least by the majority of persons in the higher socio-economic levels to which university students belong. Dental health education has been carried on at a constantly accelerating rate since 1910, and its emphasis has been increasingly on the desirability of early and frequent dental care to prevent the deterioration and loss of teeth.

"Nor has all this good advice been disregarded by the public. The teeth of most of these university students had been given good care. These young people keep their teeth clean and they go to their dentists to obtain fillings and other repairs or replacements when these are needed. The point is that they are needed. Despite all the care and attention that has been and is being given to the teeth of university students, these teeth are now decaying to a greater degree than they were 10 years ago and a still greater degree than they were 20 years ago.

"In the 1929 group of university freshmen there were 3,388 individuals, of whom 61, or about 1.8 percent, had teeth entirely unaffected by caries. In the 1939 group, consisting of 4,348 students, there were only 51 who showed no evidence of caries, about 1.15 per cent. In the 1949 group, consisting of 4,412 students, only 30 had perfect teeth, a percentage of 0.68."

It is stated in the above article that the nutrition of the public has improved since 1910. That positively is not so. The ever-increasing amount of chemical fertilizers used in growing our food crops and the greater amounts and increasing potencies of the poison sprays is causing an alarming degeneratism in the nutritional quality of our food. This does not take into consideration the increasing amount of tampering with foods in the factories where it is processed. Our foods are becoming more and more devitalized and our teeth and general health will retrograde more and more as this tendency continues. Where will this all lead to? If the present method of food production continues for another fifty years, I see chaos in our mouths and in our bodies. Also, more cancer and polio will result, until there will be complete revolt by our bodies. The figures at the University of Minnesota are only one sign. There are many others.

That the health of the teeth depends on the fertility of the soil in which our foods are grown has been demonstrated in an experiment conducted at Tufts College Dental School of Boston, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It was written in the March 8, 1951, issue of the "New England Journal of Medicine." The intention in this experiment was to compare the soil fertility of New England with that of Texas. Two groups of hamsters were used. One was fed on milk and corn that originated on a New England soil, the other from a North Texas soil. Both groups also received alfalfa that was purchased without regard to the place it was grown. It was found that the Texas-fed hamsters suffered 50 percent less cavities in the teeth. The article winds up with the statement that "a mechanism operated in the New England foods that aided materially in production of dental decay. Investigations to determine whether this factor is organic or inorganic are contemplated."—"Organic Gardening" (U.S.A.), June 1951.

The ninth man named by the Jewish Exponent is "Dr. Leon Steinig, controlling illicit traffic in narcotic drugs . . . a man who doggedly avoids the spotlight." The article unfortunately does not give us any reason why a man in such a worthy undertaking should avoid the light. The opium business always has been a shady business, and we are reminded that it is the Sassoon family, the famous "Baghdad Jews," tribal kinsmen of Dr. Steinig, who for several generations have dominated Asiatic finance and the opium trade. The Sassoons are British subjects and it is well known that their extensive holdings in China constitute one of the reasons why the Anglo-Saxon yes-men of Britain, Atlee and Churchill, insist on business-as-usual with Red China, though such business knives their own sons in the back in Korea.

The political leaning of the nine Marxists — all Zionists, apparently — and of the Jewish Exponent, seems to be summed up in a reference to "the long fight to seat Communist China and kick out the Nationalists." I cannot believe anyone genuinely anti-Communist wants to seat the Communists and kick out the anti-Communists.

We see at last that it is Mr. Feller, the general counsel, who is heading the drive for U.N. recognition of Red China and ousting of our ally Chiang Kai Shek. "Feller prepared a memorandum for the Secretary-General that held that a government in actual power (in this case the Communist) should be recognized by the U.N. as the representative of the people of a member nation."

Small wonder that the United Nations failed to support the world's foremost anti-

Communist leader, Douglas MacArthur, and refuses to establish policies, which would bring victory to American sons fighting the Communists in Korea. How long must we remain a member of and pay 85 percent of the bills of the fraudulent "peace machine which renders aid and comfort to the enemy against our own troops? Will you not get in touch with your Senator and Congressmen urging withdrawal from the United Nations?" —"Williams Intelligence Summary," May 1951.
