WHAT COMES AFTER COMMUNISM?

by Eric D. Butler

While it is clear that the peoples of the Soviet Empire are breaking free of the worst features of the totalitarian system under which they have suffered for 70 years — mainly the system of terror directed by the feared K.G.B. — it is far too early for hats to be thrown into the air with the joyful acclamation that a new and better era is arriving for mankind. Consider the plight of the Eastern European peoples, only yesterday caught up in the euphoria of developments like the tearing down of the Berlin Wall. Solidarity hero, Lech Walesa, presides over a Poland in deepening crisis as it attempts to follow the financial advice of the International Monetary Fund. Unless the victims of Communism can now challenge financial orthodoxy, they, along with the rest of the world, are doomed to never-ending convulsions.

Events are moving with such rapidity that it is impossible to predict with any certainty detailed developments concerning the break-up of the Soviet Empire. But we can be sure that International Finance, with its intelligence services, has been carefully monitoring the situation with a careful eye to the future. Of special interest is the fact that the Ukraine and other republics are moving towards creating their own currency. Even before the abortive coup, Gorbachev had entered into an agreement with nine of the Republics, granting them greater financial independence in an attempt to get their co-operation for his proposed reforms of the Communist Party. The central feature of this policy was that the Republics would remit money from taxes to help finance the central government in Moscow. Significantly, the Bush administration, with Dr. Kissinger as one of the main advisers, expressed great concern about this development.

GORBACHEV FAVOURED BY INTERNATIONALISTS

In spite of the fact that Gorbachev has never renounced Marxism-Leninism, and right up until forced by his adversary, Yeltsin, to disband the Communist Party, had insisted that the Party could be reformed, he remained the favourite of the internationalists. The tumultuous developments, which have followed the coup attempt, have proved both a serious rebuff for Gorbachev, possibly ending his political career, and a disturbing development for the International planners.

It is important to recall at this time that the imposition of Bolshevism upon Imperial Russia was financed by the International Money Power which dominated the Versailles Peace conference at the end of the First World War, which left behind it a legacy of problems which have been exploited in furthering the

OUR POLICY

To promote loyalty to the Christian concept of God, and to a society in which every individual enjoys inalienable rights, derived from God, not from the State.

To defend the Free Society and its institutions — private property, consumer control of production through genuine competitive enterprise, and limited decentralised government.

To promote financial policies, which will reduce taxation, eliminate debt, and make possible material security for all with greater leisure time for cultural activities.

To oppose all forms of monopoly, whether described as public or private.

To encourage electors always to record a responsible vote in all elections.

To support all policies genuinely concerned with conserving and protecting natural resources, including the soil, and an environment reflecting Natural (God's) Laws, against policies of rape and waste.

To oppose all policies eroding national sovereignty, and to promote a closer relationship between the peoples of the Crown Commonwealth and those of the United States of America, who share a common heritage.

long-term objective of a New World Order. Without the backing of the International Money Power, the Soviet Empire could never have been sustained as long as it was. But the Soviet defeat in Afghanistan, coinciding with the serious growing deficiencies in the Soviet economy, forced Gorbachev and other senior members of the Soviet Politburo to realise that they were faced with a threat of disintegration. A major dialectical step was essential in an attempt to maintain a secure base from which the long-term Marxist-Leninist objective could be pursued. Following the lead of Lenin with his New Economic Programme of the early twenties, Gorbachev had to turn to the West for economic assistance.

THE RUSSIAN FEDERATION

But Gorbachev unleashed developments, which eventually he could not control. Universal hatred of Communism as practised in the Soviet Union, combined with the forces of nationalism, has resulted in massive revolts. But important realities remain. One is the Russian republic. Far-sighted observers have always stressed the tremendous political importance of Russia in world affairs. In his classic work, Democracy in America, French writer Alexis de Tocqueville predicted as far back as 1835, that Imperial Russia had the potential to become a major world power for the same reasons that he saw the United States emerging as a great power: a big geographical base, abundant natural resources and a growing population. De Tocqueville wrote before the American Civil War, a conflict that basically had nothing to do with slavery, but was the result of the Northern States insisting that the Southern States must not be allowed to secede from the Union. Whatever virtues Lincoln may have had, he was the instrument of the forces of centralisation. The question of power is the basic issue which is going to determine the future of Russia and policies concerning the constituent parts of what was originally Imperial Russia, and later the Soviet Union. Just as Hitler took over and consolidated the centralised Germany created by Bismarck with the support of the Socialists, Lenin and his Bolsheviks imposed their tyranny on the foundations of Imperial Russia.

Whatever finally emerges from the current situation in the former Soviet Union, the Russian Federation will be the biggest single State, with a population of 150 million, easily the largest population on the European continent, with a vast territory dwarfing in size any other European nation. The second biggest nation in size, France, is only a thirteenth of Russia. Already Boris Yeltsin is causing concern in neighbouring Republics, with the suggestion that there will have to be a "re-adjustment" of borders where there are sizeable numbers of Russians living in those Republics. Such a move must encourage movements for the realignment of present borders, which have resulted in large ethnic minorities in European, Central and Southern Russia, with its big and fast-growing Muslim communities.

As in Eastern Europe, the millions of hard-line Marxists in the vast bureaucracies, which ran the Soviet Union, are not going to go away. Irrespective of what they call themselves, the Marxists and their influence are going to remain. Free market policies cannot, in the absence of a change of financial policies, solve the basic problems confronting those who have lived under Communism for 70 years. And there remains the problem of the massive armoury of nuclear missiles, the bulk of these to be located in the Russian Federation.

A CHANCE TO DECENTRALISE

Any Western economic help to Boris Yeltsin and his colleagues should be linked with insistence that the current decentralising developments throughout the former Soviet Union continue and be stabilised. But such a programme would run contrary to the centralising philosophy of the New World Order advocates. That philosophy has been badly dented by developments in both the former Soviet Union and Yugoslavia. Now is the time for the peoples of the English-speaking world to redouble their efforts to oppose all aspects of the New World Order and to press for decentralisation, particularly concerning the creation of financial credit. It is possible that a new era is about to open in the world drama.

"THE MONOPOLY OF CREDIT"

By C.H. Douglas

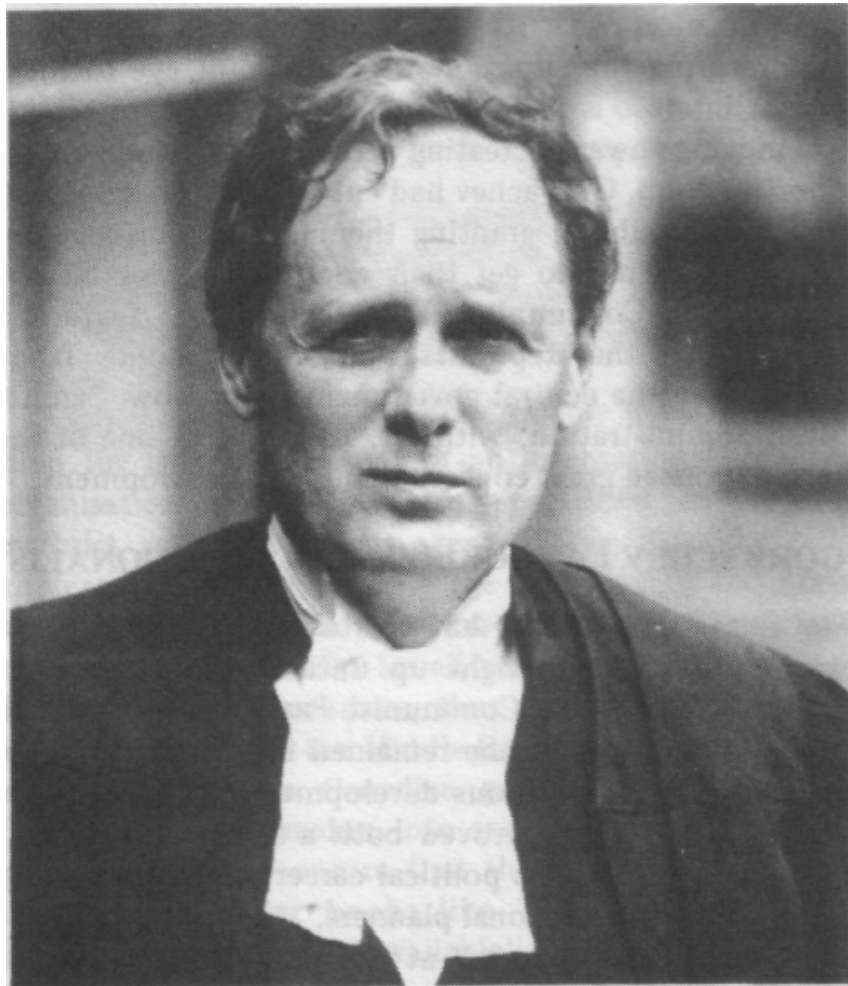

This classic work, which first appeared in 1932, during the Great Depression, contains the authoritative A + B theorem and shows the connection between the chronic purchasing power in relation to prices and the increasing centralisation of power.

In a Preface to the third edition, C.H. Douglas wrote, "To anyone who will take the trouble to analyse the course of events . . . it must be obvious that the Monopoly of Credit, which means the effective domination of human activity, is being pursued with relentless persistence. On the outcome of this policy, so far as can be seen, depends the earthly destiny of the human race."

In an Introduction to the Centenary Edition, 1979, Dr. Geoffrey Dobbs points out how world events have continued to demonstrate the central theme of "The Monopoly of Credit." The inflation, which Douglas warned about, has become the most destructive social factor threatening Civilisation.

Without a study of this book, no one can express an intelligent opinion on the deepening crisis now afflicting what is left of Civilisation. It opens the door to real understanding of world politics.

THE WILL-TO-POWER

"The danger which at the moment threatens individuals liberty far more than any extension of individual enterprise is the Servile State; the erection of an irreversible and impersonal organisation which the ambition of able men, animated consciously or unconsciously by the lust for domination, may operate to the enslavement of their fellows....

"In attacking capitalism, collective Socialism has largely failed to recognise that the real enemy is the will-to-power, the positive complement to servility, of which Prussianism, with its theories of the supreme state and the unimportance of the individual (both of which are the absolute negation of private enterprise) is only the fine flower; and that nationalisation of all the means of livelihood, without the provision of much more effective safeguards than have so far been publicly evolved, leaves the individual without any appeal from its only possible employer and so substitutes a worse, because more powerful tyranny for that which it would destroy

"Because the control of capital has given power, the effect of the operation of the will-to-power has been to accumulate capital in a few groups, possibly composed of large numbers of shareholders, but frequently directed by one man; and this process is quite clearly a stage in the transition from decentralisation to centralised power. This centralisation of the power of capital and credit is going on before our eyes, both directly in the form of money trusts and bank amalgamations, and indirectly in the confederation of the producing industries representing the capital power of machinery. It has its counterpart in every sphere of activity: the coalescing of small businesses into larger, of shops into huge stores, of villages into towns, of nations into leagues, and in every case is recommended to the reason by the plea of economic necessity and efficiency. But behind this lies always the will-to-power, which operates equally through politics, finance or industry, and always towards centralisation. If this point of view be admitted, it seems perfectly clear that to the individual it will make very little difference what name is given to centralisation."

— C.H. Douglas in Economic Democracy. 1920.

FABIANISM

"Fabian Socialism is a formulation of Marxism, which in turn is a formulation of a conspiracy whose documental existence goes back more than a quarter of a millenium. This genealogy of Fabianism guarantees the use of force in the last resort. The idea of world government has for those who entertain it the force of religious conviction. The idea of dialectical materialism is a metaphysical idea, in which history is conceived as a force bringing about events inevitably but through the agency of beings under a supra-national necessity to carry out its dictates. Thus, Professor Laski again: ' . . . The main issue the Left has to decide is when it will co-ordinate its forces for the victory which is its historic right.... ' (New Statesman, June 5, 1943). Laski envisaged a full understanding with the leaders of the Soviet Union, to give to the revolution 'a creative power against which the forces of reaction will hurl themselves in vain'. "

Dr. Bryan Monahan, The Social Crediter, October 7. 1967.

After the Second World War, Laski visited Moscow and after a long discussion with Stalin, said that while the Bolsheviks and the Fabians were travelling on separate roads, they were travelling to the same objective, inspired by the objectives of The Communist Manifesto.

DINNER WITH DOUG CHRISTIE

Guests at "The New Times" Annual Dinner, on Friday, October 4, at the YWCA Banquet Hall, 489 Elizabeth Street, Melbourne, will be a privileged group, hearing an off the record address by Canadian barrister Mr. Doug Christie, the man who successfully defended the Hungarian-born Imre Finta, the first man in the Western world tried under the type of War Crimes legislation introduced in Australia.

Other highlights of the Dinner will be an address by Mr. Bill Daly, National Director of the New Zealand League of Rights, and a keynote address by Mr. Eric Butler, "Australia's Hour of Destiny". Speaking to the toast to "The New Times" will be brilliant young West Australian, Mark Mansfield, the first speaker with an economics degree to address the Dinner. And much more. Chairman, David Thompson.

A few more late Dinner bookings can be taken. But time is running out. $28 per person, all-inclusive. Cocktails from 6 p.m. onwards. Guests must be ready to be seated at 7 p.m. sharp.

DISCOUNTED AIR FARES

We did warn interstate League supporters wishing to take advantage of discounted airfares to attend the League National Weekend in Melbourne, that they book early. Those who may miss out have only themselves to blame. We are informed that the discounted air ticket situation is extremely "tight", but every effort will be made to help those wanting to come to Melbourne.

MESSAGES FOR DINNER

All those who, for many reasons, cannot attend the annual "New Times" Dinner, are invited to be present in spirit by sending a message. All messages will be published in the special Dinner issue of "The New Times".

NATIONAL ACTION SEMINAR

Open only to hard-core League supporters and those involved in or concerned about action programmes, the National Action Seminar is held in the Douglas Memorial Hall, at "Runnymede" on Sunday, October 6, starting at 9.45 a.m. with a short non-denominational Divine service. Light lunch provided at nominal charge. A series of high-powered reports and the outline of major League projects for the coming twelve months.

"THE OLD ISSUE"

*However great their clamour, whatso'er their claim
Suffer not the old King under any name!*

*Long-forgotten bondage, dwarfing heart and brain -
All our fathers died to loose he shall bind again.*

*Here is naught at venture, random or untrue —
Swings the wheel full circle, brims the cup anew.*

Rudyard Kipling, The Old Issue.

THE MERGER OF PEACE AND WAR

The following article appeared in "Home", a British quarterly providing "A Review of Policies As Seen From The Home". "Home" is edited by Mrs. Elizabeth Dobbs, Bodifyr Lonpobty, Bangor, Gwynedd, LL 57 1HT, United Kingdom.

"War is nothing but the continuation of politics with an admixture of other means."

This is the full translation of the much-quoted dictum of the Prussian general Karl von Clausewitz. Usually the 'nothing but' and the 'admixture' are left out. Either way, it has a corollary, namely that what we call 'Peace' is the continuation of war by means other than military; although nowadays there is an increasing admixture of violent, sub-military means such as bomb-terror and rioting, tending towards the merging of the states of 'peace' and war.

It requires only the briefest reminder of the history of this century of wars interspersed with economic crises, revolutions and famines to illustrate the point. The century itself started with the Boer, or South African war, which is being continued to this day by economic means. Viewed in this light we have had a continuous World War by one means or another from the Great War of 1914-18, through the Great Depression, the Soviet, Nazi and Fascist Revolutions, Phase II of the military World War, followed by the disintegration of the British, French and other Empires, the vast Communist Revolutionary conquest of China, the reduction of Africa to a misery of endemic wars, rebellions and famines, and the successful conquest of Europe by monetary and economic means, starting with a Common Market. And this, of course, is to mention but a few examples.

It is safe to say that not one of these disastrous events was desired by 95 percent of the common people who were subjected to them.

As we write this the latest phase of world political warfare includes a monetary recession, a dire economic situation in the disintegrating USSR with reversion to 'tank politics,' in Africa mass-starvation threatening in war-torn Ethiopia, Sudan, Liberia, Mozambique and Angola; and a new and unique form of warfare in the Middle East... (We regret that at this point one line of Mrs. Dobb's article was lost in transmission. The meaning, however, is clear — emphasising the difference between the Gulf and Falkland wars. — Ed.) Falklands, but there patriotism and kinship were involved in the war, in Kuwait and the Gulf the interests are commercial and financial. Indeed, with the war scarcely fully engaged there was already public bargaining about what share we shall get in the rebuilding of Kuwait.

WHOSE NEW WORLD ORDER?

The major economic interest in the whole region is of course oil, without which most of our rush-about civilisation would grind to a halt. Iraq, which was armed and supported by half the World in its unsuccessful invasion of Iran, was now equipped after eight years of grim warfare to take over all the other 'oil States' in the region. This threat was bound to be met in some way. But we are not being told that our men were out there to fight for Queen and country, for British interests, or even for oil, but for the New World Order as represented, at least in embryo, by the UN and its Security Council.

We, and they, were not asked if we wanted a New World Order, let alone perhaps to kill and die for it, but we now have an opportunity to see what it would be like in practice since this is widely claimed to be the first major demonstration of its multinational world power.

Since the objective of all wars, whether military or otherwise, is psychological — to change the minds, and especially the wills, of governments by attacking the people under their rule, it may be said that the primary war is the direct attack by propaganda on the minds of the people, then follows the economic assault on their health, comfort and nutrition, and the final admixture is the military assault designed to maim or kill their bodies, but even this is only as a means of breaking the will. With this war we are assured that the mind of one man, Saddam Hussein, has to be changed. Has it been?

In former times there was little opportunity for the mental assault then limited by the carrying range of the human voice and eye. Today the extent and power of the mental weaponry are even greater than those of the physical armaments. In all modern wars this weaponry is directed mainly at the 'home' population, only secondarily and to a minor extent at the enemy who does, in any case, hear or see and study it all. It was mainly the 'home' media, which defeated the USA in the Vietnam War. But in this Gulf War the propaganda contest is quite unprecedented.

JOINT IRAQI-ANGLO-U.S. PROPAGANDA

On the American side we had, at the outset, almost continuous, repetitive non-news, going on and on about the tremendous blasting the Iraqis were getting from the air, well calculated to arouse sympathy for them, at least among that quarter of the European population who can remember being at the receiving end of such assaults. We had endless speculations and opinions about the results; the same repeated every half-hour or less ad nauseam.

But from the Iraqi side we received, astonishingly, the familiar accents of our own nationals — not of abhorred traitors and quislings, but of named journalists and broadcasters such as Alan Little of the BBC. At the start we had the Iraqi News from the same US agency (CNN) as the American News. Later, foreign journalists were expelled from Iraq, but then invited back again for a short stay, to do a splendid job of describing, in censored but most moving and effective terms, the horrors and pitiful effects of Allied bombing on women and children in Baghdad. Whether it was a trap or a blunder, the worldwide broadcasting

BASIC FUND SET AT $70,000

The League's Annual Basic Fund appeal for 1991—92 is now open. A "target" of $70,000 has been set, slightly less than last year. Every aspect of the League's planned programme was carried out last year, with the League finishing with a small credit. But events, both national and international, challenge major new initiatives next year. The open challenge of the Republicans must be met with a major educational programme designed to reach young Australians. Only the League is equipped for this task. At last year's annual general meeting of League members, one member expressed the opinion that it was "little short of a miracle" what had been achieved with such a relatively small amount of money. The Basic Fund makes it possible to conduct the activities, which, like collections at meetings, make the League's work possible. of the slaughter in the bombed ?air-raid shelter/? Command post on February 13 was a highly effective Iraqi-Anglo-U.S. joint assault on the World public's mass-psychology.

Whether or not Saddam Hussein still has chemical, bacteriological or even nuclear weapons available for use, their psychological work in arousing fear and anxiety has been most effectively done for him by 'our' media, which even went so far as to terrify people with the idea that he might infect the atmosphere with deadly germs of plague or anthrax as far as Northern Europe. Now just who wanted that?

Again, in earlier wars such aid to the enemy would have been regarded as treason, unless solely the work of enemy agents. So what has happened? For one thing the power of the 'media' has extended enormously, immensely reinforced by the television, the universality of the radio, and the centralisation of the press in a few hands. It has become virtually a State in itself and far more powerful than most States. Though some editors, broadcasters and journalists may be patriots, their work and careers are ruled, through owners and advertisers by money, which is worldwide and without national or cultural allegiance. Hence the wielders of money-power are automatically inclined to the promotion of a World Order, of which they are already a sort of advance guard, controlling much of public opinion, politics, economics and armament. The bloodless conquest of the nations of the E.G., after Hitler's temporary New Order had 'softened' them is their major achievement to date.

THE COWING OF CHRISTENDOM

It has also to be remembered that the monstrous wars, revolutions, depressions and miseries of this century, together with continuous devaluation of money values throughout the world, have slaughtered much of the finest youth of Christendom, destroyed the faith of many of those who survived and with it the standards of a Christian society. Hence our submission to a 'permissive', multicultural society with no common morality, the Big-Money Pop Culture, the Big-Money Drug Cult, the Big-Money Pornography, Sex and Homosex Cults with AIDS as a youth-killer product, and the transfer of the slaughter of the born in warfare to the slaughter on an even bigger scale in 'peacetime' of the unborn.

Even the natural instinct of self preservation, older than humanity itself, is under bitter attack in what remains of Christendom — the instinct to defend the family, the clan, the territory, the nation, the group of our own sort, against the alien and the foreign invader who attempts to 'unify' us with his power-group. Without this instinct no group can survive; and as we cannot survive as lone individuals, humanity itself is threatened. Ironically, the tables are turned upon us, so that wars and conflicts are blamed upon the instinct to resist unification rather than the will to impose it.

Hence the Great Liberal Death Wish, the constant battering with guilt-images and propaganda, and the daily and hourly assault on our minds with every sort of crime, scandal, corruption and brutality, whether in war or in 'peace'. Graphic images and accounts of the fate of people in Iraq arouse not only guilt and sympathy, but fear also; for next time it may be ourselves at the receiving end.

This is often subconscious, but is the natural reaction of people conditioned by years of permissiveness and Welfareism to seek for some remote and mighty power and creep under its protection. If our problems are too much for us, let us enlarge them until they reach the limits of the planet. If we cannot control our local bosses, let us look to fearful, utterly remote and inaccessible bosses for our salvation.

At the time of writing we cannot possibly know how the present military phase of the World War against almost everyone will turn out. There is no need to add to the innumerable speculations about it; but the underlying conflict of religions and their expression in policies is much more our concern.

Much is made of the Islamic religion of Iraq, and Saddam Hussein has been trying to make his warfare into a jihad or Moslem holy war. In fact, he is a Ba'athist, a mixture of Marxist and Pan-Arab imperialist and has no right to call a jihad, far less so than, for instance, Saudi Arabia. But the centre of Islamic religious revolutionary resurgence is Iran, against which he was pitted in the 8-year war by many of those now attacking him. The certain winners from this war can only be Iran and Israel.

THE WORLD POWER-RELIGION

On the other side we have the UN Security Council, dominated by the Super-Powers, USA, USSR and China, plus at present, two middle-sized ex-colonial nations, Britain and France, due, no doubt, to be replaced by another Super-Power, the EC, as soon as it can be consolidated. If one looks for a common faith, which binds these powers and the many nations of the UN together, there is only one: the worldwide loan-credit system, which is not usually recognised as the religion it is.

But along with this is the much-promoted new One-World religion that attempts to merge all other beliefs, and is corrupting Christianity into a Unitarian Judaeo-Christianity — quite compatible with the failing atheistic Marxism of the Communist Super-Powers — and with almost anything else. The only great religion, which has challenged this Merger, is the Islamic faith (though by no means unaffected). So it seems that, at a deeper level, the removal of a powerful Ba'athist Iraq will but clarify the fundamental conflict between Islam and the World Order ideology.

On which side are we? Neither! We want a World dominated by neither side — but anything is better than a World monopoly of power. While the powerful are divided there is at least a chance for some of the meek to inherit the earth. Like everyone else who is sane we do not want this war, but we are now in the War Trap, mental as well as military. Our basic and sacred instincts demand that we back our own kind and above all do nothing to endanger them. Those who march about with slogans and banners to feed the war-weaponry of the media with their revulsion against war, are merely fighting on the enemy's side in the war 'by other means', and are helping to prolong it.

What we can do, however, if we are Christians, is to stand firm in the faith, which we have received and which alone, if uncorrupted, can bring to the world a peace, which is not another form of warfare.

BANKERS' ADVICE

"It is advisable to do all in your power to sustain such prominent daily and weekly newspapers, especially the agricultural and religious Press, as will oppose the issuing of greenback paper money, and also that you withhold patronage or favours from all applicants who are not willing to oppose the Government issue of money. Let the Government issue the coin and the banks issue the paper money of the country, for then we can better protect each other.

"To repeal the law exacting national bank notes, or to restore to circulation the Government issue of money, will be to provide the people with money, and therefore seriously effect your individual profits as bankers and lenders."

- Circular sent to the American Country Banks after the American Civil War. Quoted by C.H. Douglas in "Whose Service is Perfect Freedom".

FROWNS FOR ISRAEL

by Ivor Benson

A startling number of young Jews are suffering from anorexia and other nervous disorders, the first national conference on mental health in the Jewish community, held in Leeds last month, was informed. Ms. Marilyn Lawrence, a senior clinical lecturer at London's Tavistock Clinic said that she was surprised by the very high proportion of young Jewish anorexia patients. Other psychotherapists, she said, were reporting that up to 50 percent of referrals were Jewish.

There may be some connection between this phenomenon, reported in the London Jewish Chronicle (May 17), and the highly invidious situation in which Jews in general find themselves as a consequence of recent developments in Israel and the occupied territories.

Commented the London Daily Telegraph on May 24: "Israel is looking more beleaguered than ever these days. Its more candid friends are openly criticising it over the impasse that has befallen Mr. James Baker's four attempts at Middle Eastern peacemaking". President Bush, the paper pointed out, had endorsed his Secretary of State's criticism of continued Israeli settlement on occupied Arab land. More surprisingly, the outgoing Chief Rabbi, Lord Jacobovitz, had criticised Israel's policy towards the Arabs as a 'stain on humanity'.

Sharp criticism has been coming from some unexpected quarters. Sir Yehudi Menuhin, the violinist, in Jerusalem to collect this year's Wolf Prize, was listened to in stony silence as he said from the podium: 'One fact is surely abundantly clear, namely that this wasteful government by fear, by contempt for the basic dignities of life, this steady asphyxiation of a dependent people, should be the very last means adopted by those who themselves know all too well the awful significance, the unforgettable suffering of such an existence.'

Asked why he had chosen to make a political speech at a prize-giving ceremony, Menuhin replied: 'where else could I have made this speech? I came here to deliver this speech.'

One of the speakers at the conference on mental health remarked that the high incidence of nervous disorders among young Jews 'could have links with the Holocaust'. That could be so but in what way? It seems unlikely that young Jews today would be more acutely disturbed by events of the World War 2 period than their elders. A more likely explanation is that historical revisionism, which has been fast draining all credibility out of the gas-chamber story, has deprived many young Jews of a framework of beliefs, which helped to harden them against all criticism of the community. In other words, as Lord Jacobovitz suggests, the moral factor, one of life's great imponderables, is beginning to weigh heavily on them.

Words used by Churchill about the Soviet Union, 'a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma' are equally applicable to Israel — a 'national homeland' from which Jews who arrive there from the Soviet Union escape just as soon as they can find somewhere else to go. Recently, according to the London Jewish Chronicle (May 17), two hundred such migrants, rather than stay in Israel, travelled on to South Africa, where they have become a burden on that country's dwindling Jewish minority.

Anxious to maintain their numbers against an increasing Arab population, the Israelis, usually so strict about Jewish identity, are now ready to accept Jews of whatever cultural completion, from anywhere, and air-ferried some 18,000 'Black Jews' or Falashas, from Ethiopia. And about 18 months ago they flew in 50 Peruvian Indians, having, as Christopher Booker remarked in the Sunday Telegraph, 'found some extraordinary theological reason for designating them as Jews'. To such lengths are the architects of a planned New World Order prepared to go to preserve the illusion of a Jewish national home which they need as an Archimedean point of political and military leverage in an area regarded as strategically of vital importance.

All this must be very confusing for young Jews trying to make sense of the rapidly changing mental world in which they find themselves.

BEHIND REVOLUTION

"There is a greater amount of artificiality in revolution than is believed. This is not solely to be imputed to the Jews. It is not certain that they form its most numerous elements, but, thanks to their racial qualities, they are the strategists and directors of the movement, from which they, almost alone, derive advantage."

- Leon de Poncin, in The Secret Powers Behind World Revolution

TAXATION REFORM

All schemes for taxation "reforms" are based upon the false premise that governments must have taxation in order to operate. Taxation has long since been the only means by which governments finance their activities. Recent Australian Federal and State budgets have included major deficits, which almost certainly will be even greater than budget estimates. Where do these thousands of millions come from? They are, of course, created by the banking system. They will increase the total indebtedness of both Federal and State governments, this in turn increasing interest charges. "Opposition" politicians invariably criticise governments' budgets, but never raise any questions about how much taxation is used to meet debt charges. They endorse the view of C.H. Douglas, that in reality there is only one party, the Financial Party.

Modern governments operate a form of subtle dictatorship through the taxation system. For every dollar taken from the taxpayer, they give him back, in various ways, a fraction of what they have taken, with conditions imposed. Special interest groups such as those involved in the multicultural growth industry are given favoured treatment with an eye to potential voting support.

Any genuine reform of the taxation system would start with a drastic reduction in total taxation, instead of attempting to juggle the impact. Collection should be simplified to the point where everyone knows the total amount of taxation being paid. But this would cause such a shock that a major tax revolt would occur. The present system is designed to ensure that the individual is not fully aware of what he is surrendering to governments. All forms of taxation like a General Services Tax are designed to ensure as far as possible that no one escapes the taxman's net. The false argument is advanced that a GST-type tax will ensure that taxation is "fairer", the inference being that taxation would be lower under such a system. No one can point to any country where total taxation has been reduced as a result of consumption taxes.

The real purpose of the modern taxation system is to control the individual, not to provide necessary government revenue. A spokesman for the Australian taxation department has recently expressed concern about the rapid growth of different kinds of barter systems. Barter systems are expanding for the one basic reason: people are desperately short of purchasing power because of the current restrictive financial system. Those engaged in bartering systems are not interfering in any way with the alleged purpose of the present financial policy, one major objective being to keep the inflation rate low. But the barter system increases the purchasing power of the people without contributing in any way to price rises. And it helps to increase the living standards of those engaged in this form of economic activity.

Irrespective of the type of taxation "reform" imposed, with the majority of people finding the total level of taxation repressive, they will seek to minimise its impact. Attempts to make taxpayers conform leads inevitably to the totalitarian State.

WAR VIA TELEVISION

War is a dangerous and bloody business, as those who have participated in it know. But as the complete picture of the Gulf War becomes clearer, it confirms the view that Saddam Hussein foolishly allowed himself to be "set up" for purposes other than liberating Kuwait. The real winners of the Gulf conflict were Zionist Israel and those internationalists seeking to convince the world that a United Nations police force, using those smart bombs, which can be used so surgically that very few people are actually killed, is essential. One report says that an American

THE BOOK YOU HAVE BEEN WAITING FOR!

"BEHIND THE NEW WORLD ORDER"

We have been informed by the publishers that Mr. Jeremy Lee's book, "The New World Order And The Destruction of Australian Industry", is now off the press. 100 pages of dynamite, carefully documented and illustrated with appropriate photos, this book should be in the hands of every Australian who wants to defend his country and its tradition. With a striking cover, it is moderately priced at $10 posted. Order from all League addresses.

schoolgirl, after watching the Gulf War on television, remarked how marvellous it was that war could now be conducted without killing people!

The big loser in the Gulf War was the wretched Palestinian people and the Iraqi civilians, who in spite of smart bombs, were killed by the thousand. The video films being carried by American bombs were carefully sanitized before being shown on the world's television screens. The mass destruction of Iraqi civilians has only become known later. Conditions in Baghdad are a frightening testimony to what can be done with modern hi-tech destructive power. With the whole infrastructure of Iraq destroyed, it is not surprising that there is widespread disease and near-starvation, except for Saddam Hussein's ruling group.

Was it really necessary to inflict such barbaric destruction on Iraqi civilians in order to achieve the alleged objective of forcing Saddam Hussein's troops out of Kuwait? These troops were defeated, not by the mass killing of Iraqi civilians, but by the superior military power used against Iraqi troops in Kuwait. But when these demoralised Iraqi troops sought to flee the carefully sanitized pictures showing on the world's television screens did not show what became mass slaughter. Reporters have now revealed how they arrived too early at one scene of destruction before the scene had been sanitized for television audiences. Tens of thousands of Iraqis were piled in heaps ready to be bulldozed into mass graves by American troops, some of these sickened by the task.

As more evidence emerges, it is not surprising that many British and American pilots also became sickened by what was virtually a programme of mass killing of defeated and demoralised Iraqi troops.

In the meantime, there is no democracy emerging in Kuwait, while the whole of the Middle East is now more destabilised than it was before the Gulf War. The West was also the big loser, and will pay a stiff price for the Gulf "victory" in the years to come.

GREENHOUSE EFFECT - SCIENCE OR FICTION?

by David Thompson

This little booklet is most timely. It documents what the scientists are saying about the alleged threat to the ozone layer and the possible greenhouse effect. A balanced presentation and an exposure of the political purposes behind what is the latest inspired campaign to condition the individual to make further surrenders of control over his own life.

THREAT TO DOUG CHRISTIE

We note with concern that the Canadian Friends of Freedom newsletter of May—June reports that there are suggestions that Canadian barrister Mr. Doug Christie could be disciplined by the Law Society of Upper Canada because of a speech he made in the Latvian Hall in Toronto during the Finta War Crimes trial. Mr. Christie's cross-examination of a witness during the case concerning the New Brunswick schoolteacher, Malcolm Ross, resulted in a suggestion by the witness that he was going to report Christie to the Law Society of New Brunswick. It is obvious that the enemies of free speech will do anything to hamper the professional work of a man like Doug Christie.

CHRISTIE "ON THE LINE"

On Saturday, May 4th, Doug Christie appeared on the C.B.C's news network's national television open line show called "On The Line". It asked the question, "Should there be special rules for teachers?" Ironically, that so-called defender of liberty, Alan Borovoy the Jewish General Counsel for the Canadian Civil Liberties Association said definitely "yes" to the question! His reasoning was that teachers like Malcolm Ross set a role model and must be free of discrimination or minority children will be disadvantaged. He maintained that a teacher who held views, which were so extreme as to create a reasonable apprehension of bias, could not remain a teacher even in a school district where no such minority children were students because they must be open to such students.

Mr. Christie responded that this rule would apply to all professions and all teacher's views to go so far as to preclude teachers who oppose abortion, members of small or even large political parties, members of religious groups who oppose other religions, and so on. In short, teachers could have no private controversial views of any kind.

The moderator of the show took Mr. Borovoy to task because he detected a double standard in Borovoy's maintaining the right of a gay rights advocate who was dying of AIDS to teach in a school over the objections of parents in the district.

The videotape is interesting and shows Mr. Christie being calm and rational while Mr. Borovoy is extremely agitated and hostile. He could not shake hands with Mr. Christie at the outset of the show.

USURY

"Every effort has been made to present the Jew as primarily a usurer. I doubt whether the Jew was ever primarily a usurer. He has been in possession of a technique of credit-money creation for thousands of years, and his power has come not so much from charging interest as from creating new claims and appropriating them. The technique probably came via Egypt from Chaldea. There is, I believe, in existence somewhere a baked Chaldean tile which has inscribed on it an almost perfect prototype of the modern Bill of Exchange — the most basic document of international finance."

"THE HOLOCAUST ON TRIAL" THE CASE OF ERNST ZUNDEL

A brilliantly written book based on the court record, of the second, 1988, trial of Ernst Zundel in Toronto, Canada. Over 500 pages of gripping drama concerning the question, not merely of whether Zundel knowingly published "false news", but of how a myth can be propagated to the point where it becomes, a reality to millions.

Author Robert Lenski takes the reader into the court room where the courageous barrister Doug Christie demolishes the evidence of the Crown's "star" witness, Professor Christopher Browning, demonstrating the unreliability of written history, and for the first time brought forward scientific proof that the mass gassing of Jews could not possibly have taken place in Poland, when he questioned American authority on gas chambers, Fred Leuchter. The chapter concerning Leuchter's testimony is followed by the equally gripping chapter on British historian David Irving explaining why the mounting evidence had compelled him to doubt the Holocaust story.

Some excellent photos and a comprehensive index make this a major source book. Perceptive observers have pointed out that what makes the Zundel case an exceptional one in Canadian and North American history is its impact on two distinct fields: the law and the study of twentieth century history. The case concerns more than this; it concerns one of the most powerful myths in history, one which dominates the Middle East crisis and world politics.

THE BOOK THE ZIONISTS WANTED BANNED "BY WAY OF DECEPTION"

The Zionists took every possible step to prevent the publication of the ugly revelations of a former official of Israel's Mossad. They continue under cover of the Middle East crisis to try to have it dropped down George Orwell's famous "memory hole".

Israeli terrorist leaders like Shamir have been responsible for the development of an international intelligence organisation, which has also specialised in illegal and terrorist activities. Secret agent Victor Ostrovky tells an unpleasant story concerning the activities of the State of Israel, and what he has to say about the Palestinian issue is most revealing. Official Israeli policy is to expand control of the occupied territories, thus ensuring there can be no peace or stability in the Middle East.

Offices of the Canadian publishers of "By Way of Deception" were broken into and files rifled. Every effort has been made to ensure that this explosive book suffers the fate of similar books like "The Thirteenth Tribe". Gradually they are "not available" and eventually "are out of print".

The League has managed to import a limited supply of this book, which will be available shortly from all League bookshops. Price $44 posted.
