Thought for the Week: "... The constant and mounting threat of guerrilla activity is likely to gradually raise the political temperature of the whole area, until a point may be reached where spontaneous combustion occurs in the form of outbreaks of terrorism - the objective of outside pressures.....As things are developing in the world, there is a point of no return for South Africa along this road. If it is not anticipated by an act of initiative consciously directed against the international forces, South Africa will be faced by massacre or surrender.

"..... members of the South African Government know very well what would be the consequences of handing over government in South Africa to 'black majority' rule. Yet 'World Opinion' is directed towards this objective ..... South Africa is, for the present, the one remaining country which could perhaps successfully challenge the emerging World Government..."

- Dr. B.W.Monahan, in The Moving Storm (1969)

THE SOUTH AFRICAN CRUNCH: "The dramatic deterioration in South Africa has comprehensively shattered Australia's formerly bi-partisan Africa policy."

- Michelle Grattan, in The Age (Melb) July 30th.

The above journalist also commented that the South Africa question has exposed "serious and ever-widening rifts" with the ranks of the Opposition coalition.

There is no doubt at all in our minds that the international forces of subversion are now in a big hurry. Events are moving quickly, and, as Dr. Monahan has elsewhere pointed out, there will be a brief time only between that period when the presence of a driving, thrusting, power-movement for World Government will be obvious to sensible, thinking people (and this excludes many academics and politicians!) - and the culmination of its objectives. This, we believe, is the reason for the sudden escalation of the on-going psychological war against South Africa.

Wilmot Robertson, in his "racial and political realities" blockbuster - "The Dispossessed Majority" ($18.50 posted) observes that South Africa will survive if it has THE WILL to survive. And this means the will of the European South African to survive.

The late Mao-tse-tung knew the truth of this observation; he said the same, but in a different context. He was referring to his China. A blue-print for the invasion and destruction of South Africa was ordered by the Carnegie Foundation of the U.S.A. some 15 - 20 years ago (it is in our possession) and this was published in Reveille, an R.S.L. journal, some 15 years ago.

Whilst we are anything but military experts, we are led to believe that the military conquest of South Africa (it is probable that South Africa has nuclear weapons) would be formidable: and the political implications of same would be most formidable. We know that.

And what of the "special" arrangements between South Africa and Israel? Where does that fit into the picture? Israel is not calling for any sanctions against South Africa"

So it appears to us that the forces of international subversion, masquerading behind the United Nations, will still have to rely upon their intensified psychological warfare, of which trade, economic, and sporting sanctions are but a part.

If the Afrikaaner has the will to stick it out, then what is happening amid the Australian Opposition, by way of fragmentation, could be repeated, greatly, elsewhere in the Western world. A distinct danger for our enemies. Time is not on their side. Time is on our side.

PROMOTING RACIAL DISCONTENT: The following passage is taken from the article, under the above heading, in On Target (New Zealand) July 15.

"It can be predicted with certainty that, far from 'multi-cultural' education leading to better relations between the Maori and European, it can only foster jealousies. 'Multi-culturalism' is a contradiction in terms. There is no such thing as the successful 'multi-cultural' society. No society has ever been able to survive where there has not been a system of cohesive moral and social standards - a type of unwritten spiritual agreement to which all agree to abide.

"In the main, European and Maori New Zealanders have been able to enjoy a stable relationship. But this is now being destroyed by the media, and an education system dedicated to highlighting cultural differences, many of these imaginary. The constant references to 'Maori needs', and 'Maori culture' is not intended to help Maoris, but it does promote discontent, which in turn can be exploited by the Marxist subversives.

"'Multi-cultural' education is an attack on the European heritage which is the greatest barrier to the advancement of the Marxist revolutionary programme for New Zealand. Ironically, while Mr. Marshall (Education Minister, N.Z.) is promoting multi-culturalism for New Zealand, the Lange Government condemns South Africa for recognising cultural differences among its people. Only, in New Zealand's case, it is the majority Whites who are being relegated to second-class status.

Many New Zealanders have expressed confusion when they see hundreds of Islanders pouring into the country while European foreigners with sufficient personal wealth to begin business ventures here have the greatest difficulty obtaining citizenship. But there is nothing confusing about this. It is part of the revolutionary attack on New Zealand."

DILUTING PATRIOTISM: We have more than once wondered what on earth would be our position, with respect to the United Nations Convention or Declaration against racial intolerance and discrimination, if another war suddenly broke out.

Would Al Grassby wave an admonishing finger at us, if we called the nationals who dropped a nuclear bomb on us a nasty name, with racial overtones? We know we must not use language which could incite racial hatred and intolerance if another race of people invaded our shores with tanks and other weapons of destruction. But perhaps our political masters would repeal the Racial Discrimination Act, but only for the duration! We could, lawfully, then let fly some racial expletives, whilst Al Grassby sulked in the background.

But this isn't all as silly as it seems! In the Thirteenth Power, by Major-General Richard Hilton, D.S.O., M.C., D.F.C., he observed: "It will be very much easier, when the time comes to force World Government upon mankind, to shepherd into the vast pen people without strong patriotic instincts, than people who still possess them. It will take many generations before the breast of a citizen of N.A.T.O. will swell with pride just because he is a citizen of N.A.T.O...."

Did someone just say that one of the effects of multi-culturalism would be to break down patriotism? To make it easier for World Government?

BRIEF COMMENTS: Treasurer Paul Keating is actively engaged in conditioning Australians for a hard budget. One press headline reads AUSTRALIANS MUST CUT LIVING STANDARDS. The story beneath is by one of Australia's numerous economists. He does not explain why Australians must accept lower living standards. A fall in living standards would be understandable if there was a growing shortage of food, clothing, building materials, furniture, necessary household equipment, heating and power. If there are any shortages then why aren't the unemployed used to overcome those shortages?

There is nothing wrong with the system of private ownership, and free competitive enterprise. But much is wrong with a financial policy which disputes reality. And there is also something wrong with economists and Federal Treasurers who deny reality. They have been brainwashed, or are too frightened to tell the truth. The situation will only change when enough commonsense Australians say they want access to the real world of plenty.

In his 1934 Melbourne Town Hall address, The Monopolistic Idea, C. H. Douglas warned that growing centralisation in industry and commerce was not the result of any natural law, but the result of financial manipulation. Amalgamations and take-overs have now become almost a way of life, with the will-to-power dominant. Coles is currently attempting to take over Myer, one report stating that it is proposed to borrow $800 million from the Bank of America in order to achieve this objective. What will be the end result of such a take-over? Will consumers obtain better service, higher quality production at lower prices, or any other tangible benefit? Will the lot of those employed in a super chain store improve? The answer to these, and similar questions, is NO.

The Fabian Socialists have always regarded the programme of amalgamations as an essential development for the establishment of the centrally planned State. That is why the Fabians have never attacked debt finance.

BRIEF COMMENTS: Several Melbourne Church leaders have urged their congregations to support Aboriginal Land Rights legislation in Victoria.

They include the Catholic Archbishop, the Anglican Archbishop, the Secretary of the Baptist Union, and the Moderator of the Uniting Church.

We don't doubt the sincerity of the above eminent gentlemen; we believe that they are inadequately informed and are allowing the spirit of Christian compassion and perhaps emotionalism to blur the realities of what has become a highly politicised issue, with the whole Communist apparatus pulling out all stops to ram Land Rights legislation into law. The ultimate aim of Land Rights legislation is a Black and White Australia (complete division) as set down in Australian Communist literature ("Red Over Black", $7.00 posted, and "The Evidence", $5.00 posted. It's all therein!) It goes without saying that the true Australian aborigines (not the radicalised, coloured, whites) will be thrown to the wolves once the aims of the subversives were achieved.

MURPHY AGAIN: Even the Financial Review (July 15th) has its say on the Murphy affair. It, also, takes the position that regardless of the outcome of any future appeal, after a sentencing, "he (Justice Murphy) should resolve the issue quickly and cleanly by retiring with those eulogies (from friends) echoing in his ears",
