Thought for the Week: "Australia was not a multi-racial country at the end of the 1939-45 war. After the war a plot was hatched to make it a multi-racial country without the knowledge of the public and without approval by a properly constituted Referendum on such an important issue as this. Secrecy was to be the keynote of the plot (emphasis in original) and in addition oft reported mis-statements of fact, namely that Australia had been from the first a multi-racial country. To cause further deception, the word 'multiculturalism' was used, instead of multi-racialism."

- Dr. J.C.A. Dique, in Immigration: The Quiet Invasion

THE JOHGERNAUT ROLLS ON: "It is a turning point in Australia's political history - perhaps the most fantastic bid for power in our annals. Sir Joh's victory at the weekend is the harbinger of a year of exacting political division during which our political norms are going to be rendered absurd."

- Paul Kelly, in The Australian, March 2nd.

With the recent Morgan poll showing the "Joh factor" steaming ahead, full-blast, the hitherto deeply-entrenched party politicians (and particularly some "leaders" such as John Howard, and Ian Sinclair) - are being shaken as the terrier shakes a rat. Even if the poll showed a strong trend (it shows much more than that), the prediction of Paul Kelly (above) would be validated.

As all supporters know, the League intelligence network is second to none. We are so far in front of the media political journos with respect to grass-roots currents and opinions of political intentions, that they are not even in sight. All our evidence indicates that the Coalition is finished; the "old" party alliances fragmenting. Yes, there are concerns which many people, swept away by the euphoria of seeing stale, outdated, worthless political parties disintegrating, don't want to acknowledge.

It's early days yet. O.K. the Coalition is finished, the changes in alliances haven't taken proper form yet: all the opportunists who are rushing to clamber aboard the Johgernaut have to be repelled.

power, like a pin, have to sing the cheerio song. Get rid of them. Then there's such a trivial detail as an election, to come. Early days, early days! What about the Federal "Labor" Party? Despite the cockiness of Mr. Hawke, it would appear that the cloud of political obliyion ("about the size of a man's hand!") is on the horizon. Senator Walsh, who has a penchant for self-castigation, hints that the economy will further decline (we guarantee it, Senator ... O.T.) and that it is difficult for any political party to retain government in a declining economy. Is he telling us something? The good Senator has instructed us all to tighten our belts: our expectations of future living standards are no longer feasible. In plain English, that means that our standard of living will continue to fall as our salaries and wages (purchasing power) are eroded by high taxation and inflation. And what of "The General"? That Socialist Brother, Paul Keating?

Well, we read that despite the 1986 Budget being "as tight as a drum" (Brother Keating's words) - he told the Economic Planning Advisory Council only recently that economic growth would be lower, and inflation higher than predicted in his Budget. But we must always have pie-in-the-sky: 1987-88 would be more encouraging; just you wait and see. Paul, we are not holding our breath that you will be there, in 1987-88.

Messrs. John Howard and Ian Sinclair are comporting themselves badly as they commence their death throes. They have now descended to nasty personal attacks on Sir Joh. John Howard, on weekend television, acted and looked like a "vindictive little man" as he strove to-project an air of confidence and control on the small screen. He deserves the political wilderness.

Ian Sinclair had the gall to face the T.V. cameras and assure viewers that the Coalition was "rock solid", when the very reverse was the case: and he knew it. Ugh! What mugs do they think we are?

We do not believe that Sir Joh is on some sort of ego trip; a mad rush for power, and all the rest of it. What rubbish. We don't believe a word of it.

We have warned for years that there is no hope whatsoever for Australia in the hitherto traditional party structures. ALL parties were taking us to the abyss; the Socialists a little more quickly; that's all. It is astonishing that one man has the qualities of leadership (whether he succeeds or not) to break up these politically exhausted groupings, and show us another direction. How nasty and ridiculous the other "little men" of the old Coalition look in comparison. How pompously sterile appear the bitter Socialists, whose ideology is a proven failure, but who are so blinded by their "religion" that they cannot see any reality, and insist on reading complex currents into basically simple issues. The high priests of Politics and Economics don't like issues to be simple: they are High Priests; they have THE SECRETS that lesser mortals could never even begin to understand. They have a vested interest in complexities. On with obfuscation!

We shall rejoin the Johernaut as it proceeds.

THE LIBERAL TRIPTYCH: "It is so divided that there now seem to be at least three Liberal Parties".

- Katharine West, in The Weekend Australian, Feb.28-March 1st.

People who take an interest in visual art know that a "trptych" is a painting consisting of three panels. Many famous artists of the Renaissance period of history produced fine pieces in this manner. One piece of the triptych is run by John Howard, supported by N.S.W. "heavies" (not nearly as heavy as they recently were!) Jim Carlton and John Valder.

Mr. Andrew Peacock heads another sector, with the Ian MacPhees, Fred Chaney, etc. Then again there is the New Right brigade. (John Elliott, Andrew Hay, etc.) Where will they all stand in relation to the Johnergaut? Will rats desert the sinking ship?

We hear this morning that Senator Janine Haines has voiced the opinion/suggestion that many of the "disillusioned" (we'd say "marooned") Liberal politicians could join with the Australian Democrats to form a new political alliance. Who knows!

We expect that outcast politicians would do practically anything to save their political hides. Anyway, we don't give the Aussie Democrats much hope of survival in the Canberra operating theatre.

A THOROUGHLY DISGUSTING SPECTACLE: "It takes three tough sheriff's officers, three police, and a bank manager to throw an Australian farmer, his wife and four young children out of their farm and family home and into the road".

- The Weekend Australian, Feb. 28th-March 1st.

Readers should get hold of a copy of the above newspaper, and turn to page three. Just take a look at it, if you have the stomach, for a disgusting sight!

A fine young Australian family, well respected in the district (we know this: the League of Rights is everywhere) being tossed off their farm by the "heavies". We don't really blame these officers: under the "system" they must do as they are instructed. We hope, for the sake of their consciences, that they took no pleasure in their deeds that day. What's it all about? Rural debt: rural debt: rural debt. This will happen to many more farmers. Fine young Australians. Marvellous!

On another page of the above newspaper we read (Des Keegan's item) that 750,000 (yes, seven hundred & fifty thousand!) Asians & Pacific Islanders are to be settled in Australia by the "Labor" Party EACH YEAR. Incredible? Read it yourself: page 27. We hope he's very wrong.

So. What masters is the Hawkeating Government serving? Fine young Australians being thrown off their farm/3/4 million Asians and Islanders to be introduced into Australia each year. The Hawkeating Government is not serving the interests of the Australian people.

We are forced, again, to put the question. What are the policies of a new conservative political grouping in Australia which will reverse the debt factor which is causing Australians to be thrown off their farms? If this debt factor (lower taxation, reduction of inflation, much lower interest rates, etc.) is not reversed, then the chaos in Australian politics will be even worse than it is now. The Johgnaut will have only one chance. Only one.

WAKE-UP AUSTRALIA: In conforming with our policy of assisting all organisations which are going in the same direction as ourselves, we are pleased to aid in the distribution of the new, excellent issue of the publication, Wake-Up, Australia, published by the Council for a Free Australia.

The Council, as do we, supports Sir Joh in what he is attempting to bring off viz. a return to traditional values in Australia, along with policies which will reduce the overall burden of debt. It sees difficulties ahead, as, again, do we. This issue of Wake-Up Australia is now circulating in its tens of thousands, particularly in rural areas of Australia, and is having the expected effect.

We now have supplies, and the prices are: $70.00 for 1000/ $12.00 for 100/ $8.00 for 50/ $3.50 for 10. Post free. Supporters also have valuable ammunition in the League's "Let the Australian People Speak" brochures.

THE SOCIALISTS AND PLANT VARIETY RIGHTS: As far as we know, the Plant Variety Rights legislation is now law.

In last week's issue of On Target we observed that Mr. John Kerin, the Federal Minister for Agriculture, was originally opposed to the legislation. What caused him to change his mind?

He may not have changed his mind at all. Many Ministers in the Cabinet Room fight against some legislation or other, but once "consensus" has been reached, it's "party solidarity" from then on. The Minister, or any other politician in that party; even the most humble back-bencher, must give an appearance to the public of "unswerving support" for the policy he privately does not believe in. Dirty game, politics!

John Kerin was caused to change his mind (if he really did!) because P.V.R. means (as has happened elsewhere where it obtains) capture of the seed industry by the multi-nationals, as has happened in Europe. This is in line with Socialist policy of larger and larger industrial combines before eventual socialisation by governments. It is much easier for a government to socialise 10 large industrial combines than ten thousand small ones. John Kerin, the Australian, was against the move-in by the multi-nationals, but John Kerin, the Fabian Socialist, fell into line with Fabian Socialist policy. That's what happened.
