Thought for the Week: "In 1929 the central bankers initiated a general contraction of credit - what is now known as a 'credit squeeze'; but at the same time, when it was not officially admitted that the volume of money depended on the policy of the banks (the trading banks, of course, being dependent on the policy of the central bank), the consequences of the credit contraction - the Great Depression - were variously attributed by obliging 'economists' to falls in prices, sun-spots, and other remote causes. The Great Depression, however, was an act of high policy, designed to provide suitable psychological preparation for a major change in the economic system which would preserve and consolidate the power of those in international control of the financial system."

CONSTITUTIONAL COMMISSION GEARING UP FOR ASSAULT ON OUR CONSTITUTION

"The recommendations made public on Friday by the Constitutional Commission would, if put into effect, reduce the role of the Senate to insignificance and fundamentally transform Australia's system of government."

- The Australian, October 5th

First of all, we are anything but impressed with many of the so-called "experts" sitting on the various Committees of the Constitutional Commission.

Men like Gough Whitlam, Sir Rupert Hamer, ex-Senator John Wheeldon, David Solomon, and others don't fill us with confidence. Some are Fabian Socialists, and the ultimate ideal of Fabian Socialism is World Government with all its accoutrements, such as a world police force. Government can only obtain powers at the expense of the individual: the stronger the government (as in the Soviet Union), then the "weaker" the individual, in the sense of having less power; less personal sovereignty. World Government could not possibly be anything else but a World Tyranny (read, "World Government Is Anti-Christian", by John Mitchell, and "Christianity and World Government", by the Rev. Henry Swabey, $2.00 posted from League bookshops). Paul Kelly in The "ON TARGET"

Australian (October 3-4) writes that both Gough Whitlam and Sir Rupert Hamer see the Constitutional Commission recommendations as a "total package": they would: they are, or were, politicians. Politicians are used to getting policies through the parliaments as a total package, but this is not in the interests of the individual, who wants the maximum possible freedom; the maximum personal sovereignty, even if he/she does not know what the words "personal sovereignty" mean. True freedom for the individual is the right to select, or reject, one thing at a time. Policy packages, dished out by politicians, can have a series of totalitarian policies which reduce the personal sovereignty of the individual, dressed up with a thin layer of "sugar coating" (such as an extra family allowance; more money for this or that) - to make it seem acceptable. The totalitarians, ever contemptuous of The Mob (meaning "us") are confident their Constitutional "package" can be "sold" to us. A big weakness of the totalitarians (the Fabians) is that they believe their own propaganda because they are themselves victims of a fallacious ideology, viz. Fabian Socialism.

What we can expect from the Fabian Socialists is an attack on the "decentralisation" of political power in Australia, and that's what we are getting. Four-year parliamentary terms for Canberra can be "talked up" to sound quite acceptable, but nations which have four and five year terms of parliamentary office are no better governed than is Oz. Britain has five-year terms for the House of Commons, and they are in a worse mess than we are. The United States has four-year terms, and they are no better governed than Oz. Powerful lobbies struggle for control of the American Congress and Senate. The right of the Senate to refuse Supply (shades of the 1975 political crisis ("The Dismissal") - which was NOT a "constitutional" crisis as howled by the media and the pollies. The Australian Constitution laid down provisions for such a state of political affairs as developed in 1975. Sir John Kerr imposed correct action: viz. he dismissed the Whitlam Government; installed a Fraser "caretaker" Government, and advised the earliest possible general election, thus referring the 1975 issues to the correct source of political power, THE AUSTRALIAN PEOPLE. The Australian people told Gough Whitlam and his Government what they thought of them.

The proposal to block the Senate's power to refuse a Bill after a six months period, and then impose a mandatory Joint Sitting of both Houses, to ram a Bill through, is another attack on the power of the Senate, the States' House. It is also an attack on States' Rights, and an attack upon the decentralisation of political power. The proposals are what we expected, and they are obnoxious! Nothing doing.

FROM CANADIAN "ON TARGET" (September 21st): Canada Is Being Invaded:

door 'multi-racial' policy, along with the lax policy concerning 'refugees' - which we will deal with shortly. Unless we immediately return to our traditional immigration policy, Canada as part of the European stream of history, with its Christian heritage, will be a thing of the past.

Invaded By 'Refugees': Last year we saw the weakness and ineptitude of the politicians when a boatload of Tamil 'refugees' invaded Newfoundland. As a result of an outcry from Canadians it was promised that corrective measures would be instituted. But the Mulroney (Prime Minister ... O.T.) outfit had just not got to it - too busy lecturing South Africa and ladling out our tax-dollars to Third World Marxist dictators...

"Then on July 11th of this year another boatload of East Indians floated to a Nova Scotia beach. There were 174 Sikhs in all, claiming 'refugee' status, then there were rumours that more were on the way. The transport ship which dropped them off, silently slipped away into the fog. This time the R.C.M.P. (Royal Canadian Mounted Police ... O.T.) and other security forces made arrests on land, traced the ship, directed it into port and placed crew members under arrest.

"Now we learn just how lax the application of our laws relating to immigration are. The Toronto Star, July 19th, reported: 'HALIFAX - Key players jailed in the plot to smuggle East Indian refugees into Canada have escaped paying more than $10,000 in fines because of a sentencing error, The Star has learned. The captain of the refugee ship, Rolf Nygren, and Jasvir Singh will each have served a 90-day default sentence for not paying their $5,000 fines when they walk out of a Halifax County Correctional Centre, sources here say. A third man, Castor Lasalle, will escape paying half his $2,500 fine for the same reason ...

"This means that the weak penalties imposed under the Canada Immigration Act have been weakened further, lawyers close to the case say ..."

"A hundred years from now, I don't expect people will care all that much whether we legalized marijuanha or not. But the decisions about who you let into Canada will decide the kind of country we have 100 years from now." - Richard Tait, Chairman of the Canadian Immigration and Population Study, 1974.

Our comment? THE SAME GOES FOR AUSTRALIA!

THE CONSERVATION "REVOLUTION": "Conservation" bodies in Australia are afflicted by a megalomania dedicated to prohibiting and sterilising all natural resources and productivity and to nationalising the nation. They want 'the lot' frozen under the watchful eyes of the National Parks & Wild Life Service guards engaged in the self-interest task of building a bureaucratic empire ..."

- Doug Jensen, in A Conspiracy Called Conservation (1984)

The League of Rights is most interested in genuine conservation. Whilst we cannot claim to be well-instructed in the various disciplines of botany, zoology, ornithology, etc., we are experts in the area of social freedoms and liberty. Yes, the "greenies" do have genuine cause for concern with respect to what they see as the destruction of our natural environment for the sake of Big Business, the Multi-Nationals, etc. We have to be particularly discriminating in order to sort out the genuine fears over conservation from the propaganda of the political subversives who see the whole "conservation" issue as one on which to carry forward their policies. As an example, we received the following letter from the "Wildlife Protection Agency", Collins Street, Melbourne:

"Australian and New Zealand environmental agencies are pursuing their last attempt to save Australia's rarest bird, the Norfolk Island Boobook. They are hoping to successfully breed the last female of the species with the New Zealand Boobook. If this fails the Norfolk Island Boobook will become extinct.

"The main factor that pushed this bird to near annihilation was the wholesale destruction of Norfolk Island forests by the timber industry. The Boobook, like many other mainland species, relies on old growth trees to provide nesting hollows. Many years after the loss of Norfolk Island forests the timber industry continues to demand more trees and persists with its mindless assertions that 'over-mature trees' are better off removed to make way for younger plants. The fact is that old trees yield little profit. Beneath the slick advertising campaigns the timber industry plunders our precious forests regardless of the toll on our wildlife."

Now, we cannot be sure whether the above is right or wrong; partly right and/or partly wrong. We would have to be advised by ornithological experts. We suspect, that there is some extremist propaganda contained therein. It is very difficult to be sure without the advice of those expert in the relevant discipline of natural science. We do know that the Subversive Trumpets blast loud and long. We have had expert advice from a north Queensland actionist that the logging going on in the Daintree area can have no deleterious effect on forest renewal. Well, what is to be done?

The political subversives, using the genuine greenies, have taken the running on the conservation issue and the Fabian Socialist Government of Brother Hawke is backing the greenies. We now have an "instant greenie" in Senator Graham Richardson, who is pushing the Heritage issue to have the huge tract of land up Daintree way frozen. Perhaps there must arise an "Environmental Truth" society which neutralises false greenie propaganda. Something like that.
