Thought for the Week: "There are those who sincerely believe that World Government, even in the last resort by Communism, would be preferable to the threats and disorders of today. Such a view is defensible only on the hypothesis that our troubles are fortuitous: a hypothesis which in the face of the present evidence is no longer tenable. And, in any case, 'no cause, no cure'. Our last chance lies in facing the fact that there is a ruthless bid for World Hegemony, and in dealing with the conspirators.

"A conscious policy for World Hegemony for Finance is not in the least likely to be a benevolent plan for the peace and prosperity of the peoples of the world, if it is prepared to promote world wars and African slaughters to satisfy the lust for power"

Dr. B.W. Monahan, in The Last Chance : A Conspectus (1960).

WAGE BLOW-OUT PRESSURE BUILDING: "The ominous prospect of a wages break-out is threatening the Hawke Government's economic strategy in what is widely expected to be a Federal election year".

Bruce Jones, in The Sun Herald (Sydney), January 22nd.

Mr. Jones is dead right in his article: wages explosions did make a strong contribution towards the demise of both the Whitlam Government in 1975, and the Fraser Government in 1983. The culprits in 1989 are not so much the unions, but the executives: a sort of Executive Stress (many supporters will know the T.V. : series of that name.)

This may well be a passing phenomenon; for if there is a contraction of the free-world's economy this year or next year (many responsible observers predict this) - not too many executives will be putting in claims for salary increases: too many will lose their jobs.

It is small wonder that Messrs. Hawke and Keating were so upset when Telecom executives increased their salaries substantially only recently (a very senior officer was sacked) - from the Government's point of view, the militant unions will then be tempted to join the queue, and thus set off wages claims from unions like a packed of tom-thumbs.

The Government's sure reaction to this economic scenario could only be the screws on monetary policy, meaning higher interest rates, unemployment, etc.

Quite by chance, as we were perusing the above article in The Sun-Herald we came across a letter from Dr. B.W. Monahan which was published in The Canberra Times on July 28th, 1976 and given the heading: The missing Millions. It is quite prophetic, and we shall republish it in full in the accompanying On Target Bulletin.

HUMAN RIGHTS "INQUIRY" TO PROCEED: As mentioned briefly in the last issue of On Target Bulletin, the Federal Race Discrimination Commissioner Ms. Irene Moss will conduct the Inquiry into "racial violence". The Inquiry will accept "confidential" submissions, and hear evidence in camera from victims of racial violence who feared retaliation. The closing date for written submissions will be May, 31st.

It would appear that there is an orchestrated political campaign now under way in Australia, at government level, to stifle criticism of certain policies, eg. immigration, under the pretext that such criticism fosters "racial hatred". The NSW Government intends to introduce hefty legislation this year to fine and imprison those "guilty" of such action.

Regrettably, there are a handful of ratbags around who do like to deface buildings with offensive graffiti, etc. Our enemies will do their level best to ensure that the League of Rights is associated with these psychopaths. But then, we, ourselves, have a few surprises for our enemies. The battle can't be stopped now: let's get ready for it.

PUTTING THE LEAGUE RIGHT: (By Neil McDonald)

"Where are the signs?" asked a young press reporter when despatched recently to snap David Thompson, NSW State Director of the Australian League of Rights.

"Politically inexperienced and gullible, the young man had been told to associate the League of Rights with Nazi slogans, or hoods and robes similar to the Ku Klux Klan.

"Surprised by David's explanation 'We are a nationwide group of concerned Australians', the camera-clicker took a few shots. All that the Sydney newspaper published was a head only - the size of a postage stamp.

"Why is the League under attack?"

"They happen to be nearer to the bone than any other political organisation. The League has attracted rare, 'fair-dinkum' Aussies - disillusioned with all major political parties.

Since the first League of Rights was formed in South Australia during 1946, every mainland State has sprung a branch. Now there are links with New Zealand, Britain and Canada - also with some patriotic groups in the USA.

"Known as the Crown Commonwealth League of Rights, closer ties are strengthened through regular international conferences."

"The planned surrender of the British Empire has seen the emergence of tyranny. One third of the world population suffers under Communist domination. The stepping-stone to a proposed world state in the United Nations. A major creation is the New International Economic Order. The European Economic Community will remove sovereignty from Britain to be replaced by one twelfth part of influence in a European Parliament.

"In Australia the League of Rights operates on five fronts - Economic Democracy, Individual Freedom, Heritage, Lilac League, and Conservative Speakers' Clubs. Regular journals are available by private subscription. Speakers and audio tapes (and now video tapes) spread the League message across Australia.

"The impact of the League of Rights was shown during the 1988 Referendums. A massively promoted 'Yes' campaign costing $46 million was defeated, not by the political opposition, but by thousands of alerted, wary Australians. Now the League of Rights is under attack.

"Events happen either by plan or accident. There is too much coincidence to make believe that chance moulds results. Behind the smoke of confusion are potters pulling strings and forcing amalgamations and take-overs. The League observes that all parties play the same tune ... The conductors are hidden behind a screen of permanent advisers, recruited via the orthodoxy of established, accepted political and economic disciplines. Only the League of Rights offers a challenge to dictatorships and a return to real democracy - achievable only in small, responsible communities.

Loyalty to God and Queen are fundamental planks to guard individual rights - protected by a written Constitution."

BRIEF COMMENTS: The latest Australian Chamber of Commerce and Westpac economic discussion paper predicts that Australia would "blunder into another round of economic mismanagement" if it did not learn from previous policy mistakes. The paper argues that the Australian people must share responsibility for Australia's economic future, and that they had, during the 1980s, been on a "learning curve". The paper claims that the present economic belt-tightening could have been avoided if previous governments had moved to reduce Australia's dependence on the rural-based "barnyard" economy. But a study of the Chamber of Commerce and Westpac paper suggests that those who prepared this report require a "crash course" in real economics.

We would be happy to provide the course, dealing with such fundamental questions as: What is the true purpose of production? How does a nation become wealthier by exporting more than it imports? Is not an "effective market" a number of people with money in their pockets? And who creates this money and why is money creation associated with increasing debt and higher charges?

Is the Government trading water with its projected "treaty" with Australian aborigines? There is, understandably, much opposition to this "treaty"; especially from the Opposition, but even from within the ranks of the A.L.P. : concerned sources therein don't want the divisiveness of this issue. Many ALP Back-benchers are sure that the Hawkeating Socialist Government is pressing dangerously hard with such legislation as the War Crimes Bill : and now this one!

Skating on thin ice, think many "labor" faithful.

Mr. Hawke seems even prepared to bring on Malcolm Fraser to do some of the digging for him. Hawke knows how much Mr. Fraser wants that Commonwealth Secretary-General's job.

Mr. Gerry Hand, the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, doesn't know with whom the Government is to negotiate with respect to the "treaty", and Mr. Hawke, from recent statements, wants the issue on the back-burner. The sacking of Charles Perkins hasn't built more confidence that the Government is tightly in control. A shemuzzle? We do still have some copies of Red Over Black, (Behind the Aboriginal Land Rights), $8.00 posted, and The Evidence (revealing extracts on Aboriginal Land Rights from Official Communist Documents). $6.00 posted. Both books by former Communist Party activist, Geoff McDonald. Order from your nearest League bookshop.

Did you know that the United States exports ten thousand tonnes of oranges to Australia a year? It does not accept ANY oranges from Australia, citing plant diseases and pests as reason. The "Riverland" fruit-growers are up in arms, of course.

How crazy this all is, "shipping coals to Newcastle".

Crippling financial problems, with drought, are forcing many farmers off their land : some farms have been in families for three generations.

No, the politicians will not save the farms, and farmers. Why not? Because the World's Financial Gentleman and One-World Gentlemen decided long ago that there is no place for Australia's rural industries under the New International Economic Order.
