THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: "Education has become miseducation, despite all self-promotional talk about the 'development of personality', 'socialisation', 'preparation for life', etc. Too many schools are failing in teaching their students the most important aspect of personality: self-discipline, the conquest of oneself, which Socrates declared to be the hardest battle humans ever enter ..... "Secular schools fail because great characters grow only out of strong and inspiring religious convictions; all other ideas are superficial to this enterprise..."

- Dr. R.M. Jurjevich, in The Contemporary Faces of Satan.

STANDARDISATION OF BRAINWASHING FOR AUSTRALIAN KIDS? The recent call by Mr. Dawkins, Federal Minister for Education, for more standardisation of syllabuses in Australian schools, government and non-government, is only to be expected. Indeed, we are mildly surprised we have not heard it before this.

The "excuses" are pretty lame; viz. a few students may have suffered by having been forced, by circumstances, to transfer from one school to another, perhaps interstate, to find the school syllabus at the "new" school "different". Big deal.

Compulsory, "free" (that's a sick joke) education has obtained in Australia for something like one hundred years, and students have always been transferring from one school to another, even interstate. It's happening all the time. We personally know many, many, students who have attended many, many schools; yes, not only interstate, but overseas, and they do alright. We charge that this reasoning is phoney. The real reason?

Standardisation of Brainwashing for our kids! In line with the Fabian Socialist ideology behind it, viz. all children to be "programmed" according to the tenets of Fabian Socialism and Secular Humanism, as far as is possible.

We do believe that the levels of real education in Australia are declining; grammar, spelling, numeracy, ignorance of Australia's political processes (a frightening percentage of Australians don't know that there is an Australian Constitution). In spite of this the recent Constitutional Referendums were soundly defeated - so we must suppose that this is a testimony to the commonsense of Australians, that Mr. Hawke comments on from time to time. But the joke is on him: Australians wouldn't wear his Bill of Rights, nor his Australia Card.

Our definite view is that differences in educational approach by individual schools should be encouraged. Some school syllabuses will be BETTER than others. Some teaching methods will be BETTER than others. Some State school syllabuses and teaching methods will be better, overall, than those of other States. These develop slowly and organically over decades. Now Fabian Brother Hawkins wants to sweep all this away and impose the dead hand of Socialist centralisation, aided and abetted, of course, by the Communists and Socialists in the various education departments around Australia. They are providing dogs for Communist fleas: huge, centralised, bureaucratic hosts for Communist/Socialist parasites. Evil.

We know that State education departments are encouraging early retirement for older teachers who are "infected" with values and opinions of an earlier generation, like loyalty, patriotism, family solidarity, and many, many, other virtues which built up this nation. They must go. How?

Retire off all these "old codgers (anachronisms) and bring in the young men and women, suitably imbued with Secular Humanism/Socialism in the universities and teachers' colleges. It's going on now.

New Liberty: According to Mr. John Dawkins all Australians are now standing on the threshold of a "new liberty". He could have fooled us! Our view is that our civil liberties have never been more under threat. We have been very fortunate, so far, to have escaped the Bill of Rights, and the Australia Card, but we know that the Socialist centralisers will come again, when they can. They are 'coming' at us again, via Education (above). If one front closes, open up another.

It is quite interesting that John Dawkins should compare, draw a parallel, between Bicentennial Australia with the French Revolution ..... "between what we can achieve and the objectives of liberty, equality, and fraternity espoused in 1789".

Some readers may choose to study the real history of the French Revolution, and so disentangle themselves from many of the myths which have been spun around that history-shaker. The French Revolution by Nesta Webster, that great historian of the subversive and the occult, will do just this. Mrs. Webster thoroughly documents all her works, so much so that the World Brainwashing Mills have "painted her out of the picture". This book (above) from all League bookshops - $20.00 posted.

Perhaps these political ideologues do actually believe the nonsense they utter. It can only be a type of madness (fallacious ideology) which bedevils man into belief that black is white, that evil is good. But Truth is the great disciplinarian: the crazed political ideologues will be swept away by their own errors, and unfortunately, many well-meaning people will be swept away with them.

SIR NINIAN STEPHEN DISAPPOINTS: "The abolition of State governments and the creation of a single central government combined with more powerful local government was suggested by the outgoing Governor-General, Sir Ninian Stephen, yesterday."

Sir Ninian, by these statements, only further reveals his centralist views which were evident in his judgement, when sitting as a judge on Australia's High Court, on the "Koo Warta" case against the States, which validated the Racial Discrimination Act. This led on to other centralist "social legislation" such as Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action, Bill of Rights: high-sounding stuff which is inherently evil, offering spurious "rights" and "liberties" - but in reality eroding the rights and liberties which Australians have traditionally enjoyed.

Sir Ninian, addressing the National Press Club, described his role as "ornamental". This does disappoint us, we see it as central to the Australian Constitution as the role of the House of Representatives and the Senate: a division of political power three ways, conforming to the Trinitarian nature of Reality accepted by the Christian Church; rather traditional Christianity. It would be a brave man to boldly state just what some Christian Churches believe in these days.

Great play is now being made of the role of the Governor-General as Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces. C.H. Douglas has observed that the Monarch, as representing the soul of the nation, the enshrinement of what is best in the nation, is naturally, the nation's protector, and as such is Commander-in-Chief of its Armed Forces. This has ever been accepted, up till now. Who have been the "traditional" critics of the Monarchy, and its attackers. The Socialists/Communists. They well know that the Monarchy is a strongly cohesive force, binding the nation together.

Sir Ninian forcibly espouses the multi-cultural society: we take the opposing view, viz. the multi-cultural society is divisive, leading to what Professor Geoffrey Blainey calls the "tribalisation of Australia". It must.

Language also binds a nation together. Where there are two or more languages in one nation, there is division. Examples: Belgium (French and Flemish), and Canada (English and French).

Sir Ninian, also, has regrettably "paved the way" by way of attacks upon Australia's traditional values which have brought the nation into being - for the next Governor-General, Fabian Socialist, Secular Humanist, Mr. Bill Hayden. Will he now "carry on" the example being set by Sir Ninian Stephen, who retires in a matter of days? It won't be long before we find out.

BILINGUALISM (From Canadian On Target, Jan.16, 1989): Ron Gostick, National Director of the Canadian League of Rights, writes:

"85% Support Bilingual Signs - Gallup .. The Toronto Star, Jan.12, published the results of a Gallup Poll taken Jan.4-7 re the public sign language controversy in Quebec. Said the Star: 'Eighty-five per cent of all Canadians - and 61% of Quebecers - believe bilingual commercial signs should be permitted in Quebec, according to (the Gallup Poll).

"To the question, 'Do you believe commercial signs should be permitted in Quebec?', 96% of Canadians whose mother tongue is English said Yes, and 3% No. To the same question, 61% of Canadians whose mother tongue is French replied Yes and 38% No.

"The meaning I take from this is that 38% of Quebecers who want no English in public are more vocal, militant, and revolutionary than the 61% majority. And, to avoid 'trouble', Premier Bourassa's regime is submitting to the demands of the minority. However, it should be noted that the same poll indicated that an overwhelming majority of Canadians whose mother tongue is French, feel that the preservation of their culture is more important than the preservation of freedom of speech for English-speaking Quebecers. In other words, there is a much stronger 'family' or 'group' feeling (nationalism) among Canadians whose mother tongue is French, than among English-speaking Canadians who, the poll might imply, place more importance on freedom of speech. However, the apathy and unconcern for the freedom of speech issue displayed by the English-speaking public during the Keegstra and Zundel 'free-speech' trials of this decade create some doubt as to just how many English-speaking Canadians care a whit about the preservation of either their cultural heritage or freedom of speech. Perhaps we'd better sort this question out before being too harsh in any criticism of our French-speaking fellow Canadians.."

BASIC FUND: The last progress report on the Basic Fund was before Christmas last. Since then the Fund has swollen by $7,806, making the new progressive total $53,739, not far from the minimal target.

The first 1989 League offensive against the Enemy commences shortly, and we must have that Fund filled to provide for follow-up. If you haven't yet made a contribution to the Fund, however small, please make it now. All contributions to Box 1052J, G.P.O., Melbourne Vic., 3001.
