THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: "It is inherent in this (Natural) Law that all which conflicts with it will be destroyed. It has also been termed 'the Mills of God which grind slowly but grind exceedingly small'.

"That is why I am a confirmed optimist about the forbidding world chaos which we see developing around us - in the growing economic instability reflected in increasing inflation, mounting taxation, spiralling debt and widespread strikes; in the social unrest evident everywhere leading to growing violence, the upsurge of drug abuse, the abandonment of ethical standards and so forth. These evils have within them the seeds of their own destruction. In the long run only those features of the social order and those policies which are 'right' - that is conform to the Canon - will survive and those in conflict with it - what we term 'evil' - will be destroyed, but at a terrible cost in the terms of human suffering."

TAXING MADNESS IN CANADA - Mr. Eric Butler files the following report from Vancouver, B.C., Canada:

Having seen at first hand the destructive impact of a General Services Tax in New Zealand, it is thought-provoking to arrive in Canada in the middle of a battle in which "Conservative" Prime Minister Mulroney is so determined to impose the G.S.T. in Canada that he has attempted to stack the Senate in a desperate attempt to remove all political opposition to the introduction of the G.S.T.

Some advocates of the G.S.T. have revealed that this taxation policy is strongly recommended by the International Monetary Fund. Wherever I.M.F. financial policies are implemented, they are consistently disastrous.

The last Canadian Federal Elections were dominated by the Free Trade issue. Relatively few noticed that even then Prime Minister Mulroney was preparing for the introduction of the G.S.T. But once he was re-elected Mr. Mulroney boldly announced that he had a mandate to introduce the G.S.T. All grassroots opposition to the G.S.T. has been ignored. The Mulroney Government creates the impression that it is determined to tear Canada apart.

Two of the Provincial Governments, in Alberta and British Columbia, are mounting challenges in the Courts against the introduction of the G.S.T. But the Mulroney Government presses on with a policy of what can only be described as taxation madness. It is this type of madness which will see the Labour Socialists in New Zealand swept from office. It is the same type of madness which will see the Mulroney Government also eventually destroyed. But it is becoming clearer everywhere that irrespective of the label of governments, they all seek to serve an international power which is primarily concerned with conditioning people as a prelude to fitting them into an internal economic straightjacket.

The only answer to destructive taxation and other policies is for the electors to regain control of their politicians, elevating them to the role of acting as paid, elected representatives. The most encouraging aspect of the Canadian scene is that the concept of the Electors' Veto is growing right across the nation. The battle to save what is left of Civilisation is going to depend upon the ability of people to regain control of their own affairs. If this cannot be achieved, then the world is faced with a new Dark Age in which people are under the dictatorship people - a new type of dictator, the technical barbarians, those smart people who claim to know what is best for their fellows.

But the evidence suggests that as the general process of disintegration takes place, there is a growing grassroots swell of opposition.

AUSTRALIA FUNDS TERRORISM by David Thompson:

On the African veldt a disemboweled jackal, so instinctively primed for blood, will actually eat its own entrails. I was reminded of this gruesome piece of biological knowledge last week, by Australia fawning over Nelson Mandela, convicted terrorist and defacto leader of the murderous African National Congress. His rapturous welcome was an excellent example of a sustained media campaign of psychological warfare. If it is true that the Devil is God upside down, then last week's national hysteria over Mandela was utterly Satanic in its intensity.

Such was the mass inversion of truth, that one woman, interviewed by a press jackal after Mandela had passed by in Sydney, said "I actually touched him; it was like touching iron..."

It is a judgement on the West that Mandela has become something of a cult figure. An entire generation of Australians who have never even heard of Deakin, Parkes, or even Menzies, is well on the way to deifying Mandela. Even our culture has been brutalised with popular rock music immortalising him, with the captivating, mantra-like refrain of "Free Nelson Mandela..."

Much of Mandela's martyrdom is based on the misapprehension that he was a political prisoner. This was never the case. The bleeding-heart liberals forget - if they ever knew - Mandela's real record. He joined the A.N.C. in 1944, and spent the next 18 years becoming a leader of both the A.N.C. and the South African Communist Party

(S.A.C.P.). He was jailed for terrorism in 1963, after he and his A.N.C./S.A.C.P. colleagues were caught red-handed in a calculated act of terrorism - sabotage; they had 48,000 Soviet-made anti-personnel mines and 210,000 hand grenades at their disposal, and were caught with documentary proof of their involvement with foreign powers in planning a Communist seizure of power in South Africa.

It is generally forgotten that Mandela admitted his guilt, was sentenced to life imprisonment after a fair, open trial, and was very fortunate not to have been hanged for treason. Amnesty International, in a letter responding to an enquiry, rejected Mandela's glorification as a political prisoner because he "has participated in planning acts of sabotage and inciting violence..." (September 1985).

AUSTRALIA SUBSIDISES TERRORISM: Australians are not generally aware, either, that the A.N.C. is a potent revolutionary force inside South Africa not because it represents a majority of blacks - it certainly doesn't - but because of foreign support. It has an annual budget in excess of $200 million, contributed not only by the Soviets, but by the United States and other European countries. Australia has contributed $15 million, and an extra $40,000 was sent to pay the medical bills of A.N.C. President Oliver Tambo.

In his first address after being released, Mandela temporarily disturbed the starry-eyed liberals by announcing the vital role of the S.A.C.P. in the A.N.C. This, however, was never any secret. S.A.C.P. Chairman, Joe Slovo, is an A.N.C. executive; in fact, over half the A.N.C. executive are active members of the S.A.C.P. Mandela is credited with having written the revolutionary handbook "How to be a Good Communist", in which he states the A.N.C. objective: "The aim is to change the present world into a Communist World ... the Cause of Communism is the greatest cause in the history of mankind..."

SYMBOL OF THE REVOLUTION: When a convicted terrorist is treated like a hero, and given the Keys to the Cities of Sydney, Melbourne and Canberra, it is a moral judgement on the nation, and the blood of a thousand innocent victims - black and white - begins to burn a scar into the national consciousness. Nelson Mandela is not a hero.

Nelson Mandela is not a hero. He is a symbol. It is a confirmation of Malcolm Muggeridge's "Great Liberal Death Wish" that a free people can be so spiritually pauperised as to quench the voice of conscience, and voluntarily - greedily - drink from the fountain of death and corruption, thinly disguised as a triumph of morality.

Is Australia as a nation so spiritually disemboweled by evil that our frenzied adulation of the indefensible is reaching such a pitch that we, like the crazed jackal, are attempting to devour our own moral entrails?

MRS. THATCHER SUCCUMBS (This item from Jeremy Lee): All pretense about the real nature of Europe 1992 has been discarded. A full-page review in The Financial Review on September 17th this year summarised the intention:

"... The end point of the "Eurocratic" vision is a bloodless transfer of national sovereignty to a democratic socialist European super-State"

To those who know anything at all about the politics of finance, the key to such a centralised monolith is control of money and banking.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, understanding this, has strongly resisted European Monetary Union (E.M.U.), the brainchild of French socialist Jacques Delors. The Financial Review on September 20th said:

"Thatcher is opposed to the substantial loss of national sovereignty over economic policy involved in the Delors plan. Her alternative plan would further develop the European Currency Unit (E.C.U.) as a 13th community currency."

Her stubborn resistance has already cost her one Chancellor (Nigel Lawson), one Foreign Secretary (Sir Geoffrey Howe) and one Special Economic Adviser (Sir Alan Walters). When a member of her Cabinet, Nicholas Ridley, publicly claimed that a united Germany would dominate the new Europe, in the same way that Adolf Hitler's vision would have done, British opinion polls showed a big majority agreeing with his warning. It was widely held that Mrs. Thatcher privately agreed with him, even though she was forced to ask for his resignation.

The pressure on Mrs. Thatcher has been increased steadily and dramatically. Her own party is divided, with former Prime Minister Edward Heath and Nigel Lawson heading the pro-Europe faction. The media has developed a strident anti-Thatcher line. Inflation is now almost 11%.

In the face of this pressure, Mrs. Thatcher appears to have capitulated. The Australian (October 8th) announced Britain's sudden decision to accept the European Monetary System. P.P. McGuinness, in a feature article headed "DEATH-BLOW TO BRITISH SOVEREIGNTY" said:

"... The decision was taken for very obvious domestic political reasons in Britain ... Now, at a stroke, Mrs. Thatcher can commit Britain to Europe and undermine the Labour Party, while ensuring a rapturous reception from the Conservative Party conference this week ... there is no doubt that she will deliver a passionate speech asserting the retention of Britain's sovereignty (and the status of the British monarchy) while throwing it out of the window although she will deny it, Mrs. Thatcher has just dealt the death-blow to British sovereignty ..."
