The price of Freedom is eternal vigilance —

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: "To realise the nature of the powers conferred upon the holders of the monopoly of credit is to realise at once that, human nature being what it is, any suggestion designed to release the man in the street from the power of this monopoly is certain to be actively, if not openly, resisted.

"The monopoly is in itself so indefensible, however, on the grounds of reason or equity that a realisation of its nature is quite sufficient to induce the banker (who in many cases is a thoroughly well-meaning member of society) to admit in private that it cannot continue."

- C.H. Douglas, in Reconstruction (1932)

AUSTRALIAN BIG BUSINESS AND HEWSON OPPOSITION ALREADY IN CONFLICT:

"With the Federal Budget only a day away Australian business has split fundamentally with the Keating Government over the key question of economic growth, predicting a sluggish rate of 1.5 to 2 percent over the coming year and further increases in unemployment."

The Business Australian, August 17th

Australian Big Business has been having a more than reasonable time under the Fabian "Labor" Party. Taxation concessions have been generous (much more so than has been the case with suffering Small Business and employees). Indeed, Dr. Hewson has alleged that some areas of Australian Big Business have been mollycoddled.

But Dr. Hewson is determined to abolish tariffs within the next handful of years, which is madness. Dr. Hewson intends to push deregulation further: he is obviously pushing the International Monetary Fund line.

So Big Business is generally unhappy now with the economic policies of both "Labor" and the "conservative" Coalition (in reality, there is very little difference between them). We recall that C.H. Douglas once observed that there had only been one Party, from the time of the first half of the 1800s, and that was the financial party. ALL parties uphold the authority and overall control of Finance, and International Finance, in particular (World Bank, International Monetary Fund, United Nations Finance Agencies, etc., etc.).

Mr. Brian Loton, of the Business Council of Australia, does not see any real grounds for optimism with respect to the much-vaunted "recovery", which is assumed by many "financial" people to be just around the corner. Mr. Loton doesn't rule out the prospect of a "double-dip" recession.

Our opinion is that the double-dip recession is well on the way now! The decline in business activity in Japan is a fact of life; and it is declining further by the month. It should be obvious to any sensible person that all nations in which Japan is financially strongly represented, will suffer, along with Japan. Japan also suffers from what we could term "institutionalised corruption", which exacerbates the already present finance-economic woes.

One Australian economic commentator has condemned the politicians, the business adviser "industry", the real estate industry, for "taking up" the Australian economy.

This commentator rightly points to the business investment figures: they are way down. He insists that these people do not know what they are talking about: or, they should know better.

Mr. Loton, of the Business Council of Australia, observes that 78 of the Council's 80 member organisations are planning to reduce their workforces and increase productivity (no doubt with the aid of current technology). He expects unemployment to rise.

So do we.

We are also suspicious (we cannot get proof) that liquidity is slowly being drained out of the West's economies (this includes the Asian Tigers). It is being done slowly, we think, so as not to "stampede the herd". We know that the Money Power had a nasty fright in the early thirties: the brutal depression of the time looked as though it could bring on a threat to itself (i.e. the Money Power). One of its high priests is on record as saying that for a time there was concern in the higher ranks of the Money Power, but that things were soon brought well under control. It won't make the same mistake again.

What's it all about? The New World Order, probably. We'll hear a lot more (again) about that after the U.S. Presidential elections. Clinton is its man this time.

MULTICULTURALISM AND CRIME IN CANADA from On Target (Canada), July 20th - Comment from Ron Gostick, National Director, Canadian League of Rights:

"Because of our oppressive 'hate' laws and 'Human Rights' censorship decrees, one has to be very discreet in even reporting or commenting upon these 'visible minority' incidents. However, it's about time that someone told the truth about the rapidly deteriorating social conditions in our major cities while there's yet time to avoid 'Los Angeles-type' conflagrations across our country. A few observations:

"Montreal suffers the same rising crime wave as Toronto, due largely to mounting numbers of black immigrants. Vancouver is experiencing the same assault but at the hands of Asian crime gangs. In every case, the cause points directly at our immigration policy - bringing in hundreds of thousands of 'visible minority' immigrants and 'refugees' of entirely different background and culture, who cannot be readily assimilated. Yet, to even point this out is to risk media smear and legal action!

"Members of the escalating torrent of Third World arrivals, in the main, are part of a civilisation centuries behind ours in material progress and living standards. Suddenly exposed to a completely new culture and environment, with Western-style society and affluence all around them, it's understandable that such immigrants soon scramble for instant 'equality' in the sea of affluence they see about them. Little do they understand that it's taken Canadians and other Western peoples countless centuries of toil and hardship to raise their living standards to our present level. And little do they appreciate our values, customs and mores, and the responsibilities inherent in the institutions and constitutions of Western, democratic society.

"For these obvious reasons, such immigrants find integration and assimilation in our society extremely difficult, and their progeny more exposed and prone to violence in quick-fix attempts to redress what they perceive to be a condition of disadvantage and injustice.

"The cold reality is that these critical problems have their roots in our 'open-door' immigration policy. And refusal to address this issue merely increases the difficulty of constructive change of what has proven itself a disastrous policy now threatening the destruction of the Canada our forefathers built."

CHRISTIAN JUSTICE, OR JUDAIC VENGEANCE? "James Keegstra, the former Eckville, Alberta, high school teacher, was found guilty at the conclusion of his retrial in Red Deer, and fined $3,000.

"The Calgary Sun, July 20th, reported: 'The Toronto-based League for Human Rights of B'Nai B' Rith (Children of the Covenant) of Canada has written to Alberta Attorney-General Ken Rostad calling for a jail term'.

"Inasmuch as Mr. Keegstra's 8-year ordeal of trials, appeals and retrial has financially almost pauperised him, to say nothing of the loss of his teaching certificate, any further harassment by his tormentors by way of further 'appeals' or jail sentences, far from serving the ends of Justice would constitute nothing more than Judaic vengeance at the taxpayers' expense. BRIEF COMMENTS: Writing in The Bulletin of August 4th, Rowena Stretton raises the question of whether the Keating Labor Government may lose Jewish financial support for the next Federal Elections, this the result of Foreign Minister Gareth Evans modifying Labor's attitude towards the Palestinian Liberation Organisation. There has been an attempt by both Evans and Keating to placate Zionist leaders.

Opposition leader John Hewson was given a standing ovation when he addressed a Zionist Federation Conference in May and made it clear that he was 100 percent pro-Zionist. Stretton writes that "Liberal number-crunchers, politicians and office-bearers are swelling gentile numbers at Jewish functions".

Stretton comments, "It is not so much the Jewish vote that matters - there are fewer than 200,000 Jews in Australia - but rather the vast financial resources of the community's wealthier members." It is no secret that Bob Hawke was given almost unqualified support by the Zionist leaders. If they are now switching from Keating to Hewson, this can only mean that they are positioning themselves to control a Hewson Government.

It is legitimate to ask whether the Bulletin article could, under the anti-vilification legislation, result in the writer and the magazine being prosecuted for suggesting that a relatively small number of Zionist Jews play a major role in influencing Australia's politics.

The quick Jewish reaction to the criticism of proposed racial vilification legislation, highlights once again that the main driving force behind this type of totalitarian legislation is the Jewish leaders, who make the false claim that the anti-vilification legislation is necessary to curb a rising tide of 'anti-semitism'. Such legislation is in fact certain to increase the distrust among many people that Jewish influence is far too great in Australia. The rank and file of the Jews will be serving their own best interests by joining the growing volume of criticism of the proposed anti-vilification legislation.

Victorian State Opposition Leader, Jeff Kennett, is railing against the independent candidates in the forthcoming Victorian State elections. He is insisting that a vote for an independent is a "wasted vote". He is saying this because he expects (Vic.) Labor to stand "dummy" candidates to attract the votes of disillusioned Labor voters, yet still ensure that these votes go to Labor. Don't tell us that the Liberals will not do the same! The League of Rights supports independent candidates of quality: vote for them. Some will be successful, in spite of the intrigues of political parties.
