THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: "For nothing is secret that shall not be made manifest. Neither anything hid, that shall not be known and come abroad" – Luke 8:17.

THE DEEPER SIGNIFICANCE OF THE KOOYONG BY-ELECTION: A conservative estimate would indicate that the Liberal Party spent at least $100,000 on a by-election which normally should have been regarded as a "push-over" for the Liberal Party. But there was deep unease in Liberal Party ranks, not only the result of the growing concern about the failure of Alexander Downer to provide positive leadership for a Liberal Party with deep internal divisions, but a fear that even traditional Liberal voters might take the opportunity of protesting against the multicultural policies which the Liberal Party has joined with the Labor Government in imposing upon the Australian people. In recent by-elections the small Party known as Australians Against Further Immigration, obviously poorly funded, have joined the multiculturalists with substantial votes. Clearly a growing number of concerned Australians were taking the opportunity to record a protest vote on immigration and multicultural issues. This has been particularly true in those electorates with substantial numbers of working class voters.

But would this voting trend continue in a blue ribbon electorate like Kooyong, where the relatively small number of Labor supporters consists mainly of the trendy academic types. Not surprisingly, many of these found no difficulty in helping to swell the sizeable vote of The Greens, led by the high profile candidate Dr. Singer. The Liberals, the Greens and the strange assortment of Independents, including a table top dancer, were all in agreement on one thing: the A.A.F.I. candidate should be marked last on their how-to-vote cards. The A.A.F.I. did not attempt to direct preferences, leaving electors to make their own choice. The media generally were unsympathetic to the A.A.F.I., with the usual sneers about "racism". The entry of West Australian Labor Member, Graeme Campbell, into the campaign, resulted in Alexander Downer calling upon Prime Minister Paul Keating to "discipline" Campbell.

When asked by the media to indicate what type of a vote they anticipated, the A.A.F.I. said they would be satisfied with at least a 4 percent primary vote. Objective observers felt that a 4 percent vote would be a creditable performance.

But the vote was over double that – in excess of 8 percent. The record shows that in their comparatively short history, the A.A.F.I. has progressively increased its vote, which means that an increasing number of electors are voting against the present immigration and multicultural programme. And, as proved in the Kooyong by-election, equally important is how second preferences are being allocated. Liberal Party scrutineers were astonished to note that at least 6 percent of Liberal Party voters ignored the Liberal how-to-vote card and gave their second preference vote to the A.A.F.I. candidate. Even a percentage of Greens gave their second preference vote to the A.A.F.I. Because of the A.A.F.I.'s position on the voting card, it is obvious that the Liberals and Greens, who had allocated their second preferences to the A.A.F.I., had made a conscious judgement.

We have no doubt that Liberal Party strategists are now assessing the deeper significance of the Kooyong by-election and realise that all public opinion polls, which reveal that an overwhelming majority of Australians are opposed to present immigration and multicultural policies. And they are extremely foolish if they do not do a little arithmetic and realise that the A.A.F.I. is moving to a position where it can elect at least one or two Senators, these conceivably holding the balance of power in the Senate.

We have no special brief for A.A.F.I., believing that Australia needs a new and wider political grouping than is at present offered. But we believe that credit should be given where it is due, and those who have brought the A.A.F.I. so far have made a vital contribution towards the salvation of traditional Australia, and deserve the thanks of that growing number who see no hope with either of the present two major political parties.

DEBT FINANCE IN VICTORIA: We are indebted to Mr. Alan Thornely, a former Councillor for the Kerang (Victoria) Borough, for the news that the Victorian Public Transport Authority has borrowed $6,000 million from Germany at 15 percent interest. At a meeting in Kerang with Public Transport Minister Alan Brown on August 24th, Mr. Thornely asked a number of questions concerning the financial aspects of the Victorian public transport system, during which the Minister revealed that the system was deeply in debt to overseas financial organisations. He also made the interesting comment that the daily press was not interested in reporting such matters. In a letter to his local paper, The Northern Times, of September 6th, Mr. Thornely, commented, "If we try a bit of simple arithmetic we find that 15 percent of the 600 million is 900 million annually, 2.5 million per day...". Mr. Thornely went on to point out that the interest would pay the wage bill for 38,461 men at $450 a week for one year. Kerang has a new railway station waiting room which the Transport Authority, under the cost-cutting policies of the Kennett Government, cannot afford to man! Although it is true that it was the Victorian Labor Governments which "hocked" the Victorian public transport system, the Kennett Government has made the position worse by adopting a policy of selling off public assets ("privatisation") while at the same time continuing to borrow overseas. We urge Victorians to question their State Members on how much the total State debt has increased since the Kennett Government took office.

ZIONIST-LIBERAL CLEAVAGE? A reading of the Zionist-Jewish media suggests that Zionist leaders are becoming both frustrated and irritated with Liberal leader Alexander Downer. The Australian Jewish News of November 18th, quotes Mr. Mark Leibler as having accused Downer of seeking "a total cop" on the racial vilification legislation and has called on the National and Liberal Parties to allow their members a free vote on the Government's Legislation. With typical arrogance, Mr. Leibler says, "If, as it appears, the Liberals and Nationals are so hopelessly divided and fractious on this issue, the least Mr. Downer can do is to allow a free vote on the Government's bill. Mr. Downer's attitude is a total cop out with all the hallmarks of a ploy to ensure the legislation is consigned to the rubbish bin." The Jewish News reports that when Mr. Mark Leibler arrived in Canberra with an appointment to discuss the Opposition's attitude to the racial vilification legislation with the Shadow Attorney-General, Senator Amanda Vanstone, he discovered that the Opposition had already made its decision and that the Senator could not see him.

The Canberra Times of November 12th had carried a front page story claiming that "Influential Jewish business and community leaders are to cease their substantial contributions to the Coalition and urge others to do the same as the fall out from the decision to oppose a racial hatred Bill threatens to tear the Coalition apart". The report said that between 30 and 40 powerful Jewish leaders had decided to work for the withdrawal of financial support for the Liberal Party because of the failure to support the Government's legislation. It is highly probable that this story was "leaked" to the Canberra Times in an attempt to apply psychological pressure on the Coalition Parties. Mr. Mark Leibler quickly denied the Times report, but the Times of November 14th reported that "However, Jewish business sources contacted by The Canberra Times said last night that the issue of donations to the Coalition was 'very much on the agenda'". We have no doubt that this is correct, confirming the recent charge of Western Australian Labor Member Graeme Campbell that the Zionist Jewish lobby was financing both the major political parties.

Graeme Campbell returned to the subject of the influence of the Zionist Jewish lobby in an attack in Parliament on the Racial Hatred Bill. Campbell said he was "not talking about the great majority of Jews, many of whom, I know, are totally opposed to this bill. I am talking about a relatively small group of the Jewish community, disproportionately composed of authoritarian zealots who have crushed or silenced internal opposition. Due to a combination of money, position, relentless lobbying and the manipulation of their victim status, they have a very powerful influence, both in Australia and abroad".

Graeme Campbell said that the Prime Minister Paul Keating's announcement at the 36th Biennial Conference of the Zionist Federation of Australia that the racial hatred bill would be introduced before the end of 1994 "underlined from where the major lobbying pressure of such a bill had come".

It is a long time since such robust language has been heard in the Federal Parliament. Increasing numbers of people are coming to understand the rate of the Zionist Jewish lobby in Australian politics. Perhaps Alexander Downer is starting to realise that he made a bad tactical mistake when he attempted to court favour with the Zionist Jewish lobby by joining in with the smearing of the Australian League of Rights.

BRIEF COMMENTS: We have no doubt that the professionals in the Federal Labor Party organisation have carefully noted that the Green campaign in Kooyong concentrated much of its campaign on the Kennett Government, whose electoral support continues to slide as the revolutionary Municipal Government amalgamation programme unfolds and as various types of community services are cut. The Kennett Government will be one of the major targets of the Federal Labor strategists at the next Federal Elections. Ironically, the Kennett Government has taken over the same programme initiated by the Labor Governments. Not surprisingly, growing numbers of frustrated Victorian electors are asking who can they vote for. They are waiting for the emergence of a new political movement which will seek to restore control of Australia to the Australian people.

The Kenya Government has expelled a homosexual Australian working in a hotel. The Kenyan Immigration Office said that the Australian had been ordered to leave in order to protect him from the people of the local community, who abhorred homosexual activities. "Homosexuality is prohibited under our country's laws and is morally unacceptable in our society. We shall not allow these people to come and teach our people bad manners."

Unlike the Australian Federal Labor Government, aided by the wishy-washy attitude of the Liberal "Opposition", the Kenya Government does not appear to be concerned about offending the United Nations.

British-born Doug Collins, who the Germans had great difficulty in keeping in prison during the Second World War, is one of the most robust journalists writing in Canada. Those who argue that freedom of speech will not be seriously affected by the Australian Government's race hatred bill may be interested to know that as a result of Zionist-Jewish pressure Collins has been called before a Human Rights Council. As Collins comments, "I have the honour of being the first columnist in Canadian history to be hauled before a Human Rights Council on a charge of political correctness." Collins' crime? "He gave a most unfavourable review of the film Schindler's List." We will report on this case as it unfolds.
