THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: "We have forgotten what the English Crown really is! The Crown could have equally been called the People's Wealth, the People's Power or the COMMON-Wealth. The Crown is the holder of the People's Wealth and the Governor-General is the Trustee on the People's Behalf.

"The Governor-General of the nation has the job of ensuring the People's Wealth is held not just for present generations but for all future generations. (It is for this reason that the power of the Sovereign must be unlimited.)

"Thus a parliament of political parties cannot transfer the People's Wealth on a permanent basis; it is why the Governor-General is given real power not to pass all Acts of the Parliament – so the Governor-General can protect the common-wealth of the people."

– From "The Murphy Myth" by Kerry Spencer-Salt, March, 2000

BAR-SIDE POLITICS by Jeremy Lee:

A most interesting development is the decision by hoteliers in Australia to involve themselves in the growing anti-GST campaign. Approve or not, the traditional beer is to Australians what vino is to Italians, and vodka to the Russians. It is a brave backbencher who consciously ignores the pubs in his electorate.

Under the heading PUBS TO LAUNCH ANTI-GST CAMPAIGN, The Australian (7/3/00) reported:

"The cost of a glass of beer will rise by 9 percent under the GST – not the 1.9 percent flagged by the Howard Government as an election commitment.

"The Australian Hotels Association said it felt betrayed by the GST negotiation process and would launch a national bar-side campaign to have the additional increase overturned.

"The revised price, based on industry estimates, exceeds a 7 percent rise flagged last month by Treasury officials.

"President of the Association's Western Australian branch Michael Monaghan said it had received a sympathetic hearing from some Liberal party backbenchers and Opposition and Democrat MPs and would now boost its lobbying efforts.

"State and territory organisations are also developing material to be distributed via hotels to explain the reasons for the substantial rise in the price of draught beer"

The new prices will raise an extra $500 million annually, according to Mr. Monaghan. But never mind! Some backbenchers, while voting for it, are "sympathetic". They, in turn, will deserve "sympathy" when they lose votes in coming elections.

It's only a matter of time before those collecting hundreds of thousands of names on petitions to Governors, the Governor-General and to Parliament, take the obvious step of inviting Australia's hoteliers to collect extra signatures at every bar in the land!

With apologies to a well-known Australian song, we couldn't resist the following:

*"The drinkers were sober, and flat on their backs,
A cent for the grog and a dollar for tax!
The pub was deserted, no sign of good cheer,
And all of it due to the tax on the beer!"*

ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS:

Answering charges from Labor MP Jann McFarlane that the Immigration Department was discriminating against Pakistani tourists in favour of those from the UK, Minister Philip Ruddock gave some pertinent facts:

" In the case of Pakistan, the past actions of their countrymen and women have resulted in the inclusion in the risk factor," he said Mr. Ruddock said 14 percent of successful Pakistani visa applicants overstayed their time, while only 1.9 percent of UK tourists did so.

A spokesman for Mr. Ruddock said: "The statistics speak for themselves. We refuse entry to 52 percent of people from Pakistan and 14 percent of them still overstay"

Perhaps the Pakistanis would do better by joining Iraqis and Afghanistanis in a quest for a sea-voyage to Australia. At least that will guarantee a minimum three-year stay, all expenses paid.

GISSINGER AGAIN:

We thought Indonesia had enough troubles. President Wahid seems temporarily to have the army under control. He has just been visited by the US Assistant Secretary of State for East Asia, Mr. Stanley Roth, who urged him to accelerate banking and financial reforms. Malaysia's Dr. Mahathir would probably have sent Roth packing.

Which makes the latest news, released in the Strait Times (Malaysia) on March 2nd, that Henry Kissinger will take up a position as "political adviser", surprising indeed.

BLACK MAGIC IMMIGRATION by Alfred King:

A wise doctor of geography has correctly pointed out that if a small number of Eskimos were to come to live in our country, Australian people would be delighted. We would be most interested in observing and learning how these people live in different ways to ourselves. We would enjoy learning about their culture, and eating at Eskimo restaurants. This number of immigrants would also profit from the experience, eventually taking on our culture and being absorbed into the population. However, the reality of human nature which has been PROVED IN EVERY COUNTRY WHERE MULTICULTURALISM HAS BEEN TRIED is that if we took in 100,000 Eskimos tomorrow, they would want to live in the same area as each other, continue to practise their own language and culture, and they would want their children to marry other Eskimos and maintain Eskimo culture. They would always consider themselves to be Eskimo first and foremost, not Australian. We now have a divided nation. A polyglot society with no single set of core values. As the definition of civilisation is those beliefs and values which bind us together, this is the end of our civilisation. We enter a new Dark Age.

I emphasise that we cannot blame Eskimos for living this way – they are acting according to their human nature. In any place where there are a large number of people of the same culture living together, they will want to maintain their own culture. This is an unchangeable fact of life which the idealists will not come to grips with. The blame for our modern disastrous immigration policies rest with these idealists and subversives who ignore the lessons of multiculturalism in other countries, and insist that the Australian people will have this imposed on them whether they want it or not. The only 'debate' that is allowed to be carried on is at the very fringe, i.e. how quickly the end result of the darkening of our country is to take place. Once we have lost a distinctive national character and set of unchanging core beliefs and values, we can readily be absorbed into the grey, characterless, undistinguished and hopeless One World that the Establishment has planned for us.

Let us be clear on one important point. There is no such thing as an Italian Australian or a Chinese Australian. A person is either one nationality or the other. He cannot belong to two countries. An immigrant either wants to come to our country to take on our culture, because our culture has created the kind of place that he would like to live in, or he wants to maintain his own culture. In this case, the best place for him to achieve this is his own country. Sadly, this most commonsense has to be restated here because the body of knowledge on this subject has become so corrupt that we have lost sight of even commonsense. We don't need a super-educated elite to tell us what we know in our bones to be right.

The press are well aware of the revulsion of ordinary Australians for our present immigration policies. Every poll result shows that not only do we not want reduced Asian immigration, we do not want any immigration at all. It is hard enough just trying to make a living ourselves at the real family level, without having to take on the burdens of tens of thousands more legal migrants and countless other illegals. A large proportion of these people cannot even speak English, let alone bring desirable skills to Australia. So, please, let us drop the pretence that we need these people for our economic development.

And even if they did bring money into the country, we have to get away from this black magic idea of measuring everything in terms of cash. For example, our family's grandmother is a fifth generation Australian. She was born here and has spent all her life here, working 11 hours a day on the family farm until she retired on a modest pension. It is precisely this sort of person who has made, and continues to make, the contribution that has produced such a wonderful country. What Douglas describes as the social credit of the nation, i.e. our national wealth, is measured in terms far more sophisticated and important than money. Any printing press in any part of the world can produce money. But Australia is the best country in the world to live in. The recent confusion displayed by the media about our national identity is completely absurd. It is this traditional type of person to whom Australia belongs. The ordinary man in the street accepts this as commonsense, but this reality just doesn't fit with the ideal of the elite.

The money system is a man-made system. Currently, anyone with enough money can come to live in Australia. Man has to fit the system. Social credit rejects this idea. "Systems were made for man, and not man for systems, and interests of man, which is self-development, is above all systems."

IN BRIEF:

The latest investment poll, commissioned by US investment house Salomon Smith Barney, has revealed that, despite a most intensive media brainwashing campaign, only one in four Britons now favour replacing the pound with the euro, down from 29 percent in January. Even the business sector, which once led the charge in favour of the European single currency, has gone silent on the issue. A report by KPMG Consulting recently estimated that Europe's largest companies could face costs of $90mn each in adopting the euro. It is estimated that 75 percent of British companies, large and small, would vote "no" on a referendum on the euro if it were held tomorrow.

BANKERS LOOKING AFTER THEIR MATES:

Malcolm Turnbull must be encouraged by this week's overseas news. Former US Treasury Secretary, Mr. Robert Rubin, who stepped down last July to pursue a career in banking, received a compensation package worth more than $34.9mn in the four months he served as Chairman of Citigroup. And he will earn nearly $75mn over the next two years.

However, beware Malcolm – Satan is a hard taskmaster. In fact, he is never satisfied.
