THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK:

Isn't it great to be in an election year? Pollies' faces bright and full of cheer!
"Hullo – haven't seen you for an age. Oh, am I – the centre of the stage?
Really, super is the last thing on my mind. How are the figures, am I in front or behind?
Agreeing with all – and promising plenty; On non delivery – sorry, the pot was empty.
"But so long as we win that's all I ask. You must understand this is a thankless task!"

– "The Election Year" by Julian Stanwix, 2004

MORE OF THE GOOD NEWS: According to what we have heard and read of Queensland's Senator Len Harris, during his time in the Senate he has demonstrated loyalty to his people of Queensland. Therefore, the content of his recent address to the nation (ABC TV, September 15th, 2004) once more committing himself to serving his people, should they choose to elect him, deserves to be known far and wide.

The subheadings inserted throughout the following address are policies of the Australian League of Rights. We have sought to show why we appreciate the loyalty and service of Senator Len Harris to his people, and also to encourage Queenslanders to get behind him with their support.

We were told, "By their fruits you will know them." His fruits have been good. He has earned another term in the federal Parliament in which he can again serve his people.

League – To oppose all forms of monopoly, either described as public or private: "Six years ago, I took an oath in Federal Parliament to serve as your Queensland Senator. To be your voice, your vote in federal Parliament. I present myself to you today as a genuine, experienced and capable candidate who will continue to represent your wishes in the Senate over the next six years.

League – To defend the free Society and its institutions: This election is not just about the economy, interest rates and tax cuts. It's about our way of life. Our quality of life as Queenslanders. It is about why families are breaking down because of financial pressures. When both parents have no choice but to work full time to pay the mortgage.

It's about our farming and fishing communities driven to the wall by deregulation and the blind stupidity of free trade.

This election is about the small business owner who works sixteen-hour days seven days a week with half of his income taken by the tax man. Trying in vain to compete with the big corporations.

And the grazier who struggles to understand property rights when the government decides what he can and can't do on his own land.

- Protecting the family unit
- securing a fair go for small business
- safeguarding farming and fishing communities
- and defending property rights are the issues important to Queenslanders and so are the issues important to One Nation.

Being a political representative is as much about listening as it is about fixing things. One Nation has heard your call for help and we are taking action.

The family is the schoolroom for life and lasting lessons come from a mother and a father. One Nation believes in mum and dad. Their commitment to each other and their children is the foundation of our society.

As your representative in the Senate, I consider all legislation in terms of effects on the family unit. And I support legislation that strengthens marriage and the family.

The nuclear family must be the centre of government policy, not a casualty of it.

Sadly, some families break down. Divorce or separation is very painful, especially when children are involved.

One Nation's Joint Parenting Bill introduced in the Senate, will ensure that:

- Children can enjoy equal relationships and time with both parents where there is no evidence of harm to the child.
- That Family Court rulings are consistent and just.
- And that Grandparents and extended family have right of contact with the child.

League - To oppose all policies eroding national sovereignty: Sixty per cent of family farms have shut in the last two decades. A country that does not have a viable agricultural base will not last. One Nation says our farming and fishing communities are national assets.

One Nation votes against harmful deregulation. We want protection and tariffs on imports. We will not allow weakening quarantine laws. We are pushing for fair and secure contracts for farm produce and to regulate unfair competition and predatory pricing.

Farmers need a hand up, not a hand out. Rural Australia must be growth belt, not a dust belt.

League - To defend private property... genuine competitive enterprise: Small business is the biggest business in Australia. I have introduced an Amendment to the Trade Practices Act to ensure fair competition for small business. To guarantee that the big retailers play fair.

One Nation's small business priorities are:

- Reduction of red tape
- Transparent retail tenancies
- Minimisation of government fees and charges
- And no privatisation of Telstra

One Nation believes in small business so we protect it.

Nothing is more devastating for landholders than being served with a breach notice by the Department of Natural Resources. Again, One Nation is taking action for you.

This month, I launched a High Court challenge to clarify that vegetation is part of your property rights when purchasing a freehold property.

The judgment also seeks to make clear that property rights include water on your land and underground water.

The pristine areas of conservation value that exist today are a testament to property owners, who are the primary carers of our environment.

One Nation is securing your property rights.

Ladies and gentlemen, on October 9th, we have an important choice. It is up to us to decide if there is a price that we will not pay. A point where quality of life cannot be pushed to the brink any more. When it is time to push back. A time when our nation needs One Nation.

Ladies and Gentlemen, it is my pledge to you that if re-elected for another term in the Senate, I will keep working over the shoulder of the elected government. Supporting good legislation and stopping bad.

To promote service to the Christian revelation of God: It is with humility, diligence and the grace of God, that I present myself as a Senate candidate for re-election. I pledge to continue to serve each individual Australian and to stand truly by each Australian and fight to defend our rights and liberties.

Our Nation needs One Nation, SenatorLenHarris.com.au Further Details: Senator Harris, 0429 871 008 or 0409 268 150."

DANGER – ONE NATION AHEAD: You can be sure the alarm bells began to ring throughout the halls of power when the news spread that Pauline Hanson was going to, once again, stand for a seat in federal Parliament.

I believe this to be so as I recall a headline I once saw in a Melbourne newspaper: "Danger: One Nation Ahead". The whole tone of the article warned the danger was not 'One Nation' as such; the danger was of a grass roots' awakening and revolt, which could lead to the sheeple voting en masse for independents and parties other than those of the main political hirelings.

One Nation Senator Len Harris has welcomed the announcement Pauline Hanson will run for a Senate seat in Queensland.

"I have had discussions with Pauline, she is preferencing One Nation and One Nation will preference her. This raises the possibility of both of us being elected," he said. "We would certainly make a dynamic duo in the Senate and the Queensland people would be very well represented."

LET'S TRY TO DETERMINE OUR OWN WAY by Betty Luks: No matter where one looks, the strategy and tactics of divide, conquer and rule are being used by the wolves in sheep's clothing to keep the sheeple herded in the direction they want them to go.

In the present federal election 'campaign' the old hoary 'class war' tactic has been resurrected as a means of 'dividing' the electorate, the target of course being the vote of the 'swinging' voter. The 'number crunchers' have been busy, they have calculated the votes of the blinded, diehard Liberal or Labor voters and are concentrating on the 'swinging voters' they need to attract to get first past the line.

The campaign has nothing to do with the real issues facing this increasingly destabilised, impoverished nation and the real needs and concerns of the people.

Labor's 'class war' tactics: An example of the 'class war' tactics is Mark Latham's announced intention, if elected, to take from the 'rich' schools and give to the 'poor' schools. This time, not the tactic of setting the state school system against the private school system, but of setting the 'rich' schools against the 'poor' religious schools on the outer fringes of the large metropolitan centres.

I have a suggested policy: We are constantly being told we are one of the richest nations on earth in real wealth. We are rich in resources, social institutions, human capital, etc., etc. oddly, all we seem to lack is 'money'.

Well let's put some of that real abundance to good use.

Bring the poorer schools up to the standard of the richer ones, after all, we have the teachers (begging for work) and the physical means to do so. All that is lacking is the right policy and the will of the Australian people to insist on it!

AUSTRALIA'S PROBLEMS GO DEEP: But would to God the problems we face were perceived to be just human and physical resources and financial, but they are not. The problem is the dominant centralist philosophy undergirding the appallingly low standard of schools and education which is of much more fundamental importance. There is never a word about that. In the early 20th Century, the assault on the Russian and other eastern European peoples was by revolutionary warfare, slave labour and ruthless oppression but in the Western World the attack was turned into a battle for the hearts and minds of the people – cultural socialism. In the early 21st Century, parties from all shades of the political spectrum, have more in common with the dominant, centralist Money Power than they have with their own electorates. You think I'm wrong? You think I'm too harsh on your favourite party? Name me one political party you know is calling for this nation to create and control its own sovereign money system. It is an easy task to list the political hirelings who support, and who have supported, by legislation, the Money Power's control and rule over this nation. Every banking system or money system now legally operating, gained that legal power, that private privilege to do so, with the support and enacted legislation of politicians – somewhere, sometime in our history.

AND NOW FOR 'RATIONALISATION': The following example of the policy of 'rationalisation' beggars belief, or it would if we didn't know there is an agenda behind it. In this case, 'rationalisation' has nothing to do with the efficiency or practicality, or even common sense, of a rail service, but everything to do with the Procrustean* attempts to make the service work according to the rules of the Money Power.

Getting There – Or Not (Slowly) – (British On Target, August 7th & 14th, 2004.) "We are now being told we have to work longer to offset the so-called pensions "time bomb", yet in April, 2004, The Daily Telegraph reported that 50 per cent of rail timetable enquiries were to be outsourced to India with the loss of up to 500 jobs. This spectacular managerial exercise in passenger and staff relations was followed by this letter, "One track mind", from Graham Rushworth in The Daily Telegraph of July 1st, 2004: "I called rail enquiries yesterday to obtain rail times from Cheltenham Spa to Beaconsfield. A lady operator answered with a strong Indian accent. She asked me, very politely, to spell Beaconsfield – to which I also responded very politely. I was then asked when I wished to travel. Again, very politely, I advised early tomorrow. After a minute's delay, I was given a routing via Paddington with a journey time of more than five hours. At this point, I ventured to ask the lady where she was located, which caused some confusion. Having lived in India, I repeated the question in Hindi, which produced the response that my question would be more easily understood in Telugu which, sadly, I do not speak. Eventually I established that the very polite lady was located in Bangalore, about 6,000 miles away from Cheltenham. It seemed pointless to request journey information via Birmingham, Swindon or Oxford so I gave up my quest and decided to take the National Express bus instead."

* Procrustean: From Greek mythology. A giant half-god, a thief and a murderer, who would tie his victims to an iron bed, stretching them or hacking off their legs to make them fit the bed. (Sounds like the Money Power to me!...ed.)
