THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK:

"Are there not twelve hours of daylight? Those who walk during the day do not stumble, because they see the light of this world."

"Again Jesus spoke to them, saying, 'I am the light of the world. Whoever follows me will never walk in darkness but will have the light of life.'"

– Gospel of St. John.

CHINA ON THE ROAD TO CONQUEST by James Reed:

In the 1400s Chinese vessels roamed throughout South-East Asia extracting tribute from nations that did not want to feel the might of the Chinese war machine. The Chinese were in many respects like the Nordic Vikings of between 800-1000AD. Then, for reasons that scholars still debate – most probably fear of a direct confrontation with rising European powers – China withdrew from the world stage. Napoleon Bonaparte (1769-1821) is reputed to have said when asked about the possibility of conquering China, "Let the sleeping giant lie."

Today however, the sleeping giant has awoken.

We have been warned about the threat to White Christian civilisation which China and other coloured nations, such as India and Japan poses, by a diverse range of thinkers. Oswald Spengler (1880-1936) author of The Decline of the West considered this problem in one of his last books The Hour of Decision. He lamented the folly of the White man allowing his technology to be used by races that despised him and who would ultimately attempt to exterminate him.

Others though, a considerable political distance to the left from Spengler have seen China as having national ambitions. Over fifty years ago, C.P. Fitzgerald of the Australian National University said (cited from News Weekly, March 23rd, 1996):

"The Chinese sphere of power which they are at present re-establishing was established 2000 years ago and, if that was an appropriate range of power in those days of the horse and cart, one must assume that with modern weapons the present range is multiplied many times over."

It would seem likely that the Pacific region is now considered by the Chinese as a part in which they are acutely interested and where they have a full right of consultation. That means Japan, South-East Asia, Australia and New Zealand. Probably they would not be indifferent to anything in the Indian Ocean as far as the coast of Africa."

The Dragon Awakes: The growth rate of the Chinese economy has been about 9 per cent for the last few years. International capitalism has literally force-fed China financial capital to fuel this growth. China has a seemingly insatiable demand for metals, iron ore and coal, which nations like Australia has been happy to supply.

In return "cheap" consumer goods flood our markets, with "Made in China" appearing on almost everything. Soon it will appear on personal computers, as IBM has sold its personal computer business to 'Lenovo', China's biggest computer manufacturer.

Consequently it is not surprising to find Goldman Sachs Asia vice-chairman Ken Courtis saying at the May 6th, 2004, "Future Summit" that China is the key to Australia's fortune. The Australian, May 7th, 2004.

Earlier, former Prime Ministers such as Malcolm Fraser, Bob Hawke and Paul Keating welcomed the idea China might surpass the United States and become No.1. In general most of the "let's be Asia" paradigm in Australia have white washed (or 'yellow washed') China's massive human rights violations. The 'Chinaisers' have been much like the Left have been on atrocities and genocide committed by communist regimes. In fact, to state the obvious, even given China's expanding capitalist sector, China is still ruled by a Communist Party, although we seldom hear the word "Communist" in media discussions. We hear little if anything from the mainstream media about China's acts of genocide in Tibet or the persecution and State murder of Chinese Christians. There is simply too much money to be made to offend the murderous dragon to be too concerned about human rights abuses.

Nor are the Australian public told much by the establishment media about the enormous social and environmental costs of China's growth.

One needs to go to China and breathe the filthy air to appreciate the extent of China's air pollution. Air pollution is among the highest on earth and clouds of brown and black smoke seem to be everywhere. Six of the world's most polluted cities are in China, including the capital Beijing.

Our Australian greenies who always whinge about how "degraded" our rivers are should closely examine Chinese rivers. But don't get too close because many rivers are clogged with thick dark industrial pollution. Deforestation has led to the country's deserts expanding by several hundred thousand square kilometres per year. Nowhere on earth can match such degradation. The Gobi Desert is now less than 200 miles from the capital Beijing, the advance of the desert being at a pace of about two miles a year.

In the past twenty years over 200 million people have moved from rural to urban areas. In the next two decades another 300 million people will make the same migration. Vast armies of these migrant workers, industrial cannon fodder, are crowded into urban industrial areas, doing whatever work is available, typically under appalling sweatshop conditions. Then of course, China has its prisoners to do the "really dirty" work, with many being literally worked to death.

Yet, Western liberals and human right buffs, who constantly beat their breasts about supposed human rights abuses in Australia of Aborigines are silent on all of these issues. There would seem to be able material for a critique of China, but these human rights heroes are only concerned about attacking White European "abuses" as an extension of their conspiratorial hatred of their own people. If this is mistaken, then let us hear from them in passionate tones of Chinese human rights abuses.

FREE TRADE, FREE MIGRATION: The Asianisers are delighted about the coming free trade agreement with China. Big Business in Australia is already moving to bring in cheap Chinese labour to meet a so-called "skills shortage", because, allegedly local tradesmen are not available. Over 20,000 contract workers were brought in last year to fill the trade shortages from welders to fruit pickers. In the future, warns the ACTU, there will be a trade shortage of 250,000 places – and already the Asianisers hope to fill these places by Chinese and Indian 'guest' workers rather than train our own apprentices and give our young people a future.

This is a policy of perfidy, pure and simple. The WA secretary of the Australian Manufacturing Workers Union, Jack Ferguson, has recognised that 'guest' workers effectively become more migrants because they never go home:

"The Federal Government talk about the boat people coming in, but this four-year visas plan [given to 'guest' workers] is letting hundreds of immigrants in through the back door."

Of course – all the quicker to Asianise us!

AND NOW INDIA: Not long ago, Australia was told that its future lay in information technology. The rootless cosmopolitans who control global capital have also developed India by injecting capital and jobs into her, especially IT and services. India is chasing China's 9 per cent growth rate and has reached 6 per cent over a number of years. The investment bank Goldman Sachs estimates that India will have the third largest economy in the world by 2050, after China at number one and the US at number two.

THE US IN 2050: In the year 2050, the US is projected to have a White racial minority and to be primarily an Asian/Hispanic nation – if it doesn't fall apart. India and China, bitter rivals will thus battle it out for world supremacy. The rise of India as yet another threat to the survival of the White race is aided by the trend in outsourcing to India of our IT jobs. This is eroding the IT infrastructure of Australian society. It means that there is no future in IT for our graduates.

The free trade agreement with China will firmly lock Australia into a dependency relationship with China and will move Australia away from defensive links to the United States. Already to appease the Chinese, John Howard has cold-shouldered the Dalai Lama and Foreign Minister Downer has publicly distanced Australia from the United States' policy on the Taiwan issue.

UK GOVERNMENT 'CAUGHT OUT' LYING – AGAIN: Philip Johnston, Home Affairs Editor for The Telegraph 3/7/05 reports Blair's U.K. "Government claims that high levels of immigration bring economic benefits to the country are challenged in a new study published today.

A report from the Migrationwatch think-tank says Tony Blair and other ministers are routinely citing statistics that are disingenuous at best and often wrong. These include the suggestion that immigration contributes 0.5 per cent to the nation's overall GDP and that immigrants contribute £2.5 billion more to the economy than they cost.

Such figures have often been quoted by Mr Blair and Cabinet colleagues in support of record immigration levels.

But the Migrationwatch report says they are misleading because while immigrants do add to the size of the economy they also add to the population.

Sir Andrew Green, chairman of the think-tank, said: "What the Government conveniently fails to mention is that they therefore generate considerable costs in terms of infrastructure - schools, hospitals, housing, transport, etc."

When these costs are added back, says the report, the true economic "benefit" to the host population is likely to be at best the addition of 0.1 per cent of GDP, or about 14p a week per head each year.

The likely true benefit is probably no better than neutral - as all major studies overseas have also concluded.

Sir Andrew added: 'It is extraordinary that this Government's principal justification for the current immigration levels is built on such shaky foundations. They seem to believe that, if their supporters repeat false claims often enough then, despite the clear evidence to the contrary, people will believe them and be reassured.'

The report says that while the current levels of immigration are attractive to employers because they provide an unlimited source of cheap labour, they are extremely expensive for the taxpayer and harmful for the less skilled indigenous workforce whose wages are held down and who are more likely to end up unemployed.

Furthermore, to the extent that immigration holds down wages, it makes it more difficult to attract into the labour force the one million on incapacity benefit who would like to work.

A claim made by Ministers that migrants contribute to pensions is dismissed as requiring "virtually impossible" rates of immigration.

The report says that while limited skilled migration in both directions is a natural and beneficial feature of open economies, the issue is one of scale. It claims that immigration at current levels - around 150,000 net arrivals a year - brings with it "considerable costs in terms of additional strains on housing, public services and social cohesion." It also accuses Ministers of relying on "dodgy" statistics. A Home Office calculation that migrants in the UK contributed in taxes £2.5 billion more than they consumed in benefits and public services was made in a year in which the government accounts were in surplus so everyone paid in more than they took out.

Correcting for this reduces their "contribution" by £1.3 billion."

Do you still find it hard to believe there is an open agenda to flood the western world with alien peoples as well as intentionally importing cheap labour and destroying any hope for the future of our children?
