THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: It was "seeing the multitudes" that He preached to them. He really saw them, not merely in synagogue and Temple, but as farmers, gardeners, builders, traders, kings, bankers, employers, fathers and mothers, and children.

All human life had a material and a spiritual aspect, not separately, but whole. So we ought not to "spiritualise" away His parables into nothingness, but interpret them in terms of human life; the life of His own time certainly, but also the life of all time.

If His thought, speech, and action had not supreme accuracy and rightness, the record of them [would not have] survived the centuries. – Social Crediter, Michael Lane, "Triumph of the Past", www.alor.org.

THE EMPTINESS IN THE HEARTS OF MEN by James Reed: Paul Gray ("Left Values' Bias is Ruining ABC", The Australian, 16/1/06, p.6), a columnist with Melbourne's Herald Sun, recently addressed the issue of the degeneracy of the ABC. In the course of doing so, he actually put his finger on the vein of a deeper blood clot that has rendered intellectual life in Australia brain dead. Gray says:

"The great Australian political scientist Paddy O'Brien argued in his book "The Saviours: An Intellectual History of the Left in Australia" that the Australian middle-class Left embraced Marxism and various forms of socialism during the 20th century because it filled the void left in their spirits by the death of belief in Christianity."

"In the 21st century, Marxism is dead, but there is still that spiritual void to be filled. I contend that traditional Christianity and its legacy are as much reviled by the Australian Left as ever, with the new value systems of environmentalism and minority rights, rather than Marxism, being seized upon to fill their place."

The Right however embrace rampant global capitalism and economic rationalism, but now accept much of the political baggage as the Left – multiculturalism, multiracialism, anti-White racism, Asianisation, etc. The Left and the Right both wish to see the end of the Nordic peoples and their replacement by Orientals; the Left and the Right are two sides of the same globalist coin.

HOWARD AND ETHNIC DILUTION OF ANGLO-AUSTRALIA by Brian Simpson: An interesting article appeared by columnist George Megalogenis (The Weekend Australian 17-18/12/05, p.20) in the wake of the Sydney race riots. Megalogenis' articles typically defend Mediterranean ethnic group interests and his latest article is up to his standard form. You have heard it all before: the past: poor migrants come to Australia and are spat on by the Anglo-Australian: ("Skips") but in the blink of an eye these ethnic super geniuses are top of the pops in what Georgie-boy calls "wog mobility".

The Lebanese, Greeks and Italians do better than the "Skips" in almost everything – this is what he calls an "iron law of Australia". But of course, no analysis of where the money came from to put the second generation and third through university, and the magic words "cash in hand economy" is never mentioned. No, these ethnics are truly supers! One would also expect Lebanon and Greece to be super powers instead of being second-rate nations which they are. Italy of course performs much better, but Italy is an artificial creation where the predominately Nordic Northern Italians (represented by the "Northern League") seek to break away from the predominately racial Mediterranean South, who they regard as a burden.

Ethnic success, like the success of women, has little to do with sheer IQ and much to do with the ongoing war which multiculturalism is conducting against Anglo-Australians. The people of a demoralised culture, under attack on all fronts, cannot perform well. Genocide is incompatible with continuous cultural success.

In France, the race riots were the result of poverty and lack of integration of Middle Easterns into France – as well as good old fashioned French racism – as the standard politically correct story goes. But if these chaps are doing so fine as Megalogenis says, then why the riots, why the initial bashings and rapes? I suppose we have to blame it on the "Skip" racists.

Opening paragraphs expose Howard: Interesting as well is Megalogenis' opening paragraphs which expose John Howard: "John Howard has made Australia more of an immigrant nation than it has been at any time in its history. The overseas-born population passed 24 per cent for the first time last year, and no one complained (! I did George!). The figure has been much higher before, but that was in the pre-Federation 1890s."

"Howard is also the leader who changed the colour and the culture of the immigration program. Europeans now comprise only 49 per cent of our total overseas-born ranks."

It will be interesting to see how Megalogenis' beloved Mediterranean ethnics do in an Asianised Australia dominated by China – which is Howard's vision for us. Howard is clearly worse than Keating, Hawke and Whitlam and yet one can still find people, who broadly share our views, defending him. Better that he goes and we have a more traditional enemy (the Fabian International Socialists for example) for the sake of those who are 'intellectually challenged'.

Why does the immigration issue alarm me so? As Arthur Kemp has recently put it in his book, March of the Titans (2003): "All civilizations rise and fall according to their racial homogeneity and nothing else – a nation can survive wars, defeats, natural catastrophes, but not racial dissolution."

RACE : THE POWER OF REALITY by Brian Simpson: The ABC recently screened a programme "Race: The Power of an Illusion", in three parts. The scientific part of the series The Difference Between Us pushed the line that "we're all the same under the skin." In other words, to use the sort of phrase made famous by Jewish Marxist biologist Richard Lewontin, there is more genetic difference among people in a single population, than there is between populations. The Weekend Australian, 26-27/1/06 in a review by Leigh Dayton made much of this maxim.

Unfortunately the maxim is genetically trivial and does not establish that races don't exist. It has been pointed out by critics of Lewontin in the racial realist school that Lewontin's maxim would also demolish the concept of race (subspecies) in most animal species.

The likes of fellow Jewish Marxist biologist Stephen Jay Gould (whose The Mismeasure of Man, a book full of technical errors, is cited approvingly by Dayton) did not seem to care about the radical consequences of his racial nihilism. Geneticists have recently refuted Lewontin's claim. (More about this in another note).

The Weekend Australian, 17-18/1/06 made much of genetic research by a team that had reeled "in the gene that makes Caucasians white". The article appears in the journal Science, 16/12/05. The newspaper headline creates the impression that there is a gene which makes Caucasians white. The research paper has it that the gene SLC24A5 is responsible for between 25 and 38 per cent of the skin-colour differences between Europeans and Africans, but also that "multiple genes must be involved to explain the skin pigmentation differences between Europeans and Africans". The paper concludes "much of the remaining differences in skin pigmentation remains to be explained". The SLC24A5 gene does not explain the light skin colour of some East Asian populations.

Politically correct biologists have already stated that this research does not support a concept of race: "one of the most obvious characteristics that distinguishes among different humans is nothing more than a simple change in activity of a protein expressed in pigment cells." (See M. Balter www.sciencemag.org)

Strictly speaking that is not correct because as the authors say "much of the remaining difference in skin pigmentation remains to be explained." In any case, from a genetic perspective all human characteristics are a product of change in the "activity of [proteins]". Who said it did?

Modern science points to races: What modern science has been steadily showing, despite the veneer of political correctness and anti-racism which must be painted over all research, is that the traditional concept that human races exist and have biological and social significance, is true.

The real myth-makers are those who believe that race is a social construction. On the contrary, anti-racism is a social construction, a device to politically level peoples and slot them as raceless, placeless slaves within the new world order.

Actionists: Send this article to the Programme Manager at the ABC and Leigh Dayton at The Weekend Australian.

CHARLES VERSUS THE DRAGON by James Reed: "Charles Snubbed China on Purpose" said The Australian, 23/1/06, p.11. Prince Charles had committed the unforgiveable sin, in the Murdoch press universe, of snubbing the Chinese President Jiang Zemin during a visit to London in 1999. The Prince personally opposes China's occupation of Tibet and refused to attend any events with the Chinese President.

The Australian story then moves to the issue of the republic and churns out the usual republican material (Charles will doom the monarchy, Barbados will soon be a republic, republics are cool and trendy, etc.) with of course no monarchist counter. The republicans are preparing for their next assault against Australian traditions and all good actionists need to begin the next battle to defend our sacred traditions.

A good source of information on republican follies and the virtues of our monarchical system can be found in the following books:

"Freedom Wears a Crown" by John Farthing.

"Sovereignty in Australia" by Arthur Tuck.

"Republic? More Power for Politicians" by David Mitchell.

"The Westminster Tradition and Australia" by Leslie R. Marchant.

Gerard Charles' "The Media of the Republic" is an examination of the tactics and political agenda of the republican cause. $33.00 posted. Send for a list of appropriate books from your State Services. The League's South Australian Book Service still has a limited number left of Bruce Ruxton's "The Republic of The Rich" – a brilliant little paperback which features on the front cover a likeness of Pro Hart's painting of the Fabian Socialists and their political agenda in Australia. THE MYTHICAL NOTION OF TERRA NULLIUS by Betty Luks: Historian Henry Reynolds' claim that British settlement of Australia was built on the concept of terra nullius is coming under further scrutiny. Dr. Michael Connor, an honorary research associate at the University of Tasmania, has claimed in his book, The Invention of Terra Nullius (Macleay Press) the phrase was never used in Australia in the 18th and 19th centuries. Not only that, the phrase has come to mean whatever its users want it to mean.

David Ritter, a West Australian historian, had already published a paper demolishing the myth but the news is taking a while to filter through to the general public – probably because of its explosive "land rights" implications! (The Australian: Higher Education, 18/1/06)

THE EINSTEIN CULT CONTINUES... FOR A WHILE by Robert Hart: Murdoch press paper The Advertiser (24/12/05) contained a column by Associate Professor Derek Leinweber of Physics, University of Adelaide. The article was an otherwise interesting piece on the weird world of quantum mechanics. The article has a photograph of Einstein and gives the impression that quantum mechanics was Einstein's creation. It was not - but was the creation of a number of non-Jewish physics geniuses such as Bohr and Heisenberg (the Copenhagen interpretation). Einstein disagreed with quantum physics and proposed an experiment to refute the quantum theory. Einstein was proven wrong. So much for the depth of his genius.

Even Einstein's accepted work is tainted with plagiarism of greater thinkers (see Christopher Jon Bjerke's Albert Einstein: The Incurable Plagiarist) although, as with the plagiarisms of Martin Luther King, this player is too useful to the "new establishment" to let him sink. In Einstein's case he was an ideological ploy to show the superiority of Jewish intellect. That would only be so if Einstein wasn't a cheat and if he got his physics right.

According to another brilliant Adelaide physicist, Professor Reg Cahill ("How Einstein's Dead Wrong, Relatively Speaking," The Australian, 7/11/05, p.3) Einstein got the physics wrong as well. So much for "genius".

THE CHINESE FEAR OF GIRLS by James Reed: In China most couples are limited by law to only one child. Most couples also wish to have a son, not only to provide for the parents in old age but also to carry on the family name. Consequently it is common practice for women to have scans to determine the sex of the foetus and if it is a girl – abort it. This practice is illegal in China, but it goes on still.

Consequently the ratio of boys to girls in China is 118 to 100, much higher than the world average of 106 to 100. Thus 500,000 babies are abandoned each year in China – 95 per cent of them girls. China has 13 million more boys than girls, aged under nine and 2020 is likely to have 40 million bachelors eager for a woman.

Trafficking in women, especially baby girls is now common. The wealthy often buy a baby girl so that their son will have a wife when he grows up. (The Australian, 28/12/05, p.8).

With China's performance in Tibet it is not unreasonable to suppose that as China's military muscle grows and the West's defences continue to crumble, that the net for female flesh might be extended to the West.

The spectacle of White whinging, selfish, drink and drug-taking young feminists being made into 'respectable' Chinese wives is a thought difficult to get one's mind around.
