THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: C.H. Douglas observed some 70 years ago that the time would come in the lifetimes of many of the people he was addressing when the forces of Evil would appear to be in the ascendant... Surely that time has come! Will the Opposition and Democrat Members of Parliament support this anti-Christian legislation?

What about the Christian Church? Have you heard any prelates thundering from the pulpit against the Evils stemming from our Parliament? We haven't.– On Target, July, 1992.

PRINCE CHARLES HONOURS THE QUEEN: The text of the tribute by Prince Charles to The Queen on her 80th Birthday, April 21st, 2006:

"An 80th birthday is a very special occasion for every family – an occasion for celebration, for giving thanks and for looking back. As a child, I can just remember my great grandmother, Queen Mary, at 80; then I recall so well the 80th birthday of my grandmother in 1980.

"Now I find it hard to believe my own mother, the Queen, is today celebrating her 80th birthday, and it gives me enormous pride to be able to congratulate her publicly in this way, and to thank her on behalf of us all for the many wonderful qualities which she has brought to almost an entire lifetime of service and dedication to her country, to her family, to the realms and to the countries of the Commonwealth.

"It is hard to believe that my grandfather, King George VI, was the same age as I am now when he died and that my mother succeeded him when so young – the same age, in fact, as my sons are now.

"And then I have vivid memories of the Coronation; of my mother coming to say goodnight to my sister and me while wearing the Crown so that she could get used to its weight on her head before the Coronation ceremony; of thousands of people gathered in The Mall outside Buckingham Palace chanting 'We want the Queen' and keeping me awake at night; of my parents being away for long overseas tours during the 1950s and of determined attempts to speak to them on the telephone in far-distant lands when all you could hear was the faintest of voices in a veritable storm of crackling and static interference.

"I remember so well, too, the excitement of being reunited with our parents when my sister and I sailed out in the, then, brand new Royal Yacht Britannia to meet them off Tobruk at the end of their Commonwealth Coronation Tour in 1954 – a tour that had lasted over six months and taken in 13 countries. And, of course, there was the thrill – as a small boy – of witnessing the entire Mediterranean Fleet of the Royal Navy steam past the Royal Yacht at high speed, with my mother and father waving to all the Ships' Companies from the afterdeck.

"There is no doubt that the world in which my mother grew up and, indeed, the world in which she first became Queen, has changed beyond all recognition. But during all those years she has shown the most remarkable steadfastness and fortitude, always remaining a figure of reassuring calm and dependability – an example to so many of service, duty and devotion in a world of sometimes bewildering change and disorientation.

"For very nearly 60 of those 80 years she has been my darling Mama and my sentiments today are those of a proud and loving son who hopes that you will join with me in wishing the Queen the happiest of happy birthdays, together with the fervent prayer that there will be countless memorable returns of the day."

A CHRISTIAN CONCEPT OF SERVICE, DUTY AND DEVOTION by Betty Luks: The Coronation Prince Charles refers to was of course, a Christian Coronation Service, and it is to Christianity we must look to understand the nature of Kingship and Service to which our Queen dedicated herself.

The Christian Faith first reached those ancient shores of Britain early in the first century AD, and it was this Faith which inspired and moulded the character of the people and influenced their ideas of Kingship and Service. The teachings of our Lord had put an end to the idea of State absolutism and led to the development of a concept of human personality and of liberty that was quite unknown to the ancient world:

"Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar and to God the things that are God's."

Caesar is of course functionalism. The individual soul is the substantial reality, whereas the association of human beings, the Group, the Collective, is merely the doing of something by individuals in association. If the doing assumes a life of its own with needs and demands of its own (the result of individuals identifying themselves with the "Group") the Group becomes a tyranny (such as Jesus demonstrated in the acted out parable of the Gadarene Swine).

In the section Christian Anthropology of his paper "Power and Freedom", Michael Lane clearly explains the importance of this concept.

"As in (? into) Adam (Mankind, The Group, The Collective) all men (Individuals) die, so in Christ (Individual Consciousness and Responsibility) all Men (Individuals) are made Alive."

R. McNair Wilson – "Monarchy or Money Power" – thought the history of man is the history of duty, another word for patriotism... Man as patriot – and patrician – outgrew his earlier gods and the Christian Church prepared him for a new revelation of duty. Patriotism assumed a new quality of brotherhood and it was to men thus prepared for His coming that the Lord Jesus gave this concept of Law:

- "You must love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your mind. This is the greatest commandment."
- "The second resembles it: You must love your neighbour as yourself."

In both cases, the English word 'love' is translated from the Greek word agapao, meaning, according to Dr. James Strong's Concordance, "To love in a social or moral sense."

Agape, Dr. Strong writes: "Governs the judgement and deliberate assent of the will as a matter of principle, duty and proprietary. It is an attitude which is governed by specific principles as laid down in law."

The Law of Duty, Two Complementary Aspects: The Christian law presented duty in two complementary aspects, as duty to God and duty to our fellow men. It made duty synonymous with love, and so raised it from the devotion of the pagan to his Fatherland (the Group, the Collective, "Blood and Soil") to the Christian's love of God the Father and mutual love and co-operation with his fellow man.

Christian civilisation went on to recognize both the Church and the State. Both, as the vehicles of the Christian law, were of divine appointment, and the divinity of the one was part of the divinity of the other and inseparable from it.

The Fellowship of a Free Community: The political leaders of a united Kingdom, along with the bishops and priests of the Church, from the nature of the service demanded of them, became privileged bodies, possessing rights and privileges derived from and dependent on their duties.

In other words, their privileges and rights stem from their service due to God and their People! Apart from that duty to God and their People, the rights and privileges enjoyed by those in Office, whether Church or State, are not lawful (in a moral or ethical sense) and cannot be sustained (i.e., without force – as this generation will come to learn through bitter experience).

It is the Grace of God which arms the King with his strength and raises him above all his People as that enduring embodiment of a United Kingdom. Democracy, if it means anything, means that the rights and privileges with which the King and his Ministers serve both God and the People, stem from that service.

We as a people will come to realise, we either build our House on a solid foundation, or, like any other structure built on sand, the House will crumble and be washed away by the tides of history.

It is so as Prince Charles said of his mother our Queen: "(The Queen) has brought almost an entire lifetime of service and dedication to her country, to her family, to the realms and to the countries of the Commonwealth."

EDITOR'S NOTE OF EXPLANATION: I have received queries about the New Testament passage used in last week's On Target. From whence did I get my authority to paraphrase the passage from 1 Timothy, 6?

*The preference for money (i.e., the benefits and worldly power it brings) in terms of personal advancement, above all other considerations, is the root of all kinds of evil."

Guided by Clifford Douglas' advice that we must get a 'just relationship between the mind and things' I made a study of the words in relation to historical events. According to Dr. James Strong's Concordance: The word phileo (contains the meaning of: preference for in terms of personal advancement) and urgia (Greek for silver). Mammon is the word used for this world power exercised through control of the financial system – as it has been doing for centuries!

THE THREE "WISE" MONKEYS by James Reed: It was entirely predictable. The deputy Prime Minister Mark Vaile said in evidence before the Cole Inquiry into the AWB kickbacks scandal that he was "surprised" he was not told of warnings six years ago about the contractual irregularities. Vaile had not seen the batch of 21 confidential diplomatic cables sent since 2000. You see he was too busy dealing with World Trade Organization talks. Surely this ministerial disgrace, with the failing ability to do his job, should be helped in his time of decline, by being relieved of the stresses and strains of office through being "fired".

Alexander Downer tried a more gutsy strategy. He declared that his department "did a good job, despite allowing the AWB to grease Saddam Hussein's oily palm with $300 million in bribes. Further,

Downer like Vaile, couldn't remember reading the 21 diplomatic cables. The South Australian "blue-blood" "aristocrat" with the "toffy accent" (as journalist Gerard McManus described him : The Advertiser, 12/4/06, p.6) appeared to say at one point: "I would rarely read summaries of cables." Downer's lawyers corrected the transcript to read: "I would really read summaries of cables." As a sub-headline in The Australian, 12/4/06, p.1 put it, quoting Downer : "It is a very major challenge to deal with intelligence." Indeed it is.

John Howard's evidence and performance was true to his form. As the head of the team of the three wise monkeys he didn't know about the kickbacks as well. Issuing bland, dry denials he didn't furnish any remarks that lent themselves to satire. Typical of the dry, bland man.

SHAKESPEARE WAS A DIRTY WHITE MALE RACIST CAPITALIST : DISCUSS: One of Australia's most elite high schools, SCEGGS Darlinghurst, an independent Anglican girls' school in inner Sydney, set an assessment task in March for the year 11 advanced English students requiring them to interpret Othello from Marxist, feminist and racial perspectives. (The Weekend Australian, 15-16/4/06, p.1, "Elite Girls' School Kills the Bard"). This has led US academic Harold Bloom to pronounce that the study of literature is dead in Australian schools.

"I find the question sublimely stupid. It is another indication that literary study has died in Australia." This is not news to us.

In the debate which followed, various bureaucrats in the education hierarchy defended the setting of the question. Use of Marxism, feminism and anti-racism is all part and parcel of modern indoctrination – oops, sorry, education. The role of Blacks, women and workers can all be understood using these (left-wing) theories it was argued. Poet Les Murray is quoted as saying that this incident shows that the dominant ideology at Australian schools is Marxism and a "perverse egalitarianism" that levels quality.

Again, this is not news to us. Day-by-day the decay of Australian education continues. The long march by the leftists/feminists/commos through the institutions is complete. The only hope for Australian children lies with the home schooling movement. Young impressionable minds must not enter the vat of poison that our schools have become.

And I haven't even mentioned bullying, sexual harassment of Anglo girls by ethnics, feminist teachers destroying young boys, the drug problems, etc., etc.

THE RACIAL GENOCIDE OF ENGLAND by Brian Simpson: Migration is radically changing the face of England. The British Office for National Statistics has revealed that one in seven people in England is non-white. Ethnic minority populations grew by over 500,000 over the last two years because of immigration. Chinese and African asylum seekers had a big increase, along with those of a "mixed" racial background. In London over four out of ten people are non-white and non-whites form half or more of the population of eight boroughs. The study says that 14.2 per cent of England's population was non-white in 2003 (7,071,000 out of 49,865,000). The ethnic minorities contributed 143,000 births over the last two years while the white English group fell by 100,000.

The Blair government, like the Howard government, are big migration governments. Migration has tripled under Blair even though 80 per cent of the population (including many ethnics) want tighter immigration controls. Here in Australia the population has been seduced by Howard's lying rhetoric, that he is against multiculturalism and dealing with the immigration problem.

Sure he is: the problem is Anglo Australians. The global conspiracy to eliminate Anglo people from the Face of the Earth is proceeding according to the new world order plan. Conspiratorial nut stuff eh? Oh dear, we had better keep quiet, trembling in fear, until seven in seven people everywhere are non-white! Then it won't be a "conspiracy", will it?
