THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: "Genuine history, that is to say, the flow of events, is just as unwritable as a spring morning. You can pick out certain facts about it, which you think are important, but there are infinitely more contemporaneous happenings than you can possibly mention. In other words, written history is five per cent fact, and ninety-five per cent historian, even at its best... One cannot fail to notice the curious contradiction involved in the passionate study of racehorse pedigree which was so popular in the distant days of uneasy peace, and the carefully fostered contempt for "family" in the human race, which is contemporaneous with Socialism...I merely wish to refer to it in connection with this most important fact of family-traditional-history, which may take the form of "feeling for the land"... which has been carried on in the same place by the same families over a considerable period.

For the purpose of a "feeling for policy", which is really a subconscious memory of trial and error, the same consideration is equally true if we are to accept the theory of a continuous policy. I do not believe there is any substitute for it although it requires checks and balances..."

– Clifford Hugh Douglas in "The Big Idea", 1942

YES! YES! SECTION 59 OF CONSTITUTION REMAINS "IN ALL ITS GLORY"! We have reported before the constitutional authority, Dr. Mitchell insists the Governor General does have important constitutional powers which the G-G's 'advisers' keep telling him he doesn't have! South Australians Doug and Jean Holmes wrote the following letter to the Governor General after correspondence had been flowing between both parties on the partial sale of Telstra: The G-G had responded insisting he did not now have the constitutional power to refuse to sign the legislation:

"...If you as the Governor General always take the advice of the elected Government of the day, what does section 59 mean? We think it says that you have the power to go against the Government of the day in certain conditions.

What if the Government does something which is against the Constitution, or against the wishes of the majority of the Australian people? What then?

Are you also saying that Sir John Kerr, when he was in your position, was wrong? Who did he take his advice from on that occasion?"

Doug and Jean then sent a copy of their correspondence to Dr. David Mitchell for comment. Below is his response:

In this issue: • Thought For The Week • Yes! Yes! Section 59 Of Constitution Remains "In All Its Glory"! • DVD – The Spirit Of Australia's Constitution An History • And Not A Drop To Drink – Except At A Price • The Show Trial Has Ended • Tell Us What We All Know

Dear Mr. & Mrs. Holmes, It is true that the Constitutional Commission 1988 recommended that sec.59 be repealed. That recommendation was not acted on. Thus sec.59 remains in "all its glory".

If I was the Governor General I probably would have replied to your letter along the lines:

You correctly note that I have a discretion in relation to whether or not I consent to legislation. In the ordinary course I act on the advice of the elected government of the day. To persuade me to do otherwise would require possession of monumental significance. At this stage I have not seen the proposed legislation relating to a further sale of Telstra and have had no advice in relation to it. If legislation for a further sale of Telstra is presented for my assent, I shall consider any representations that are made to the contrary but I do not foresee that I will decline to act on any advice given to me by the elected government of the day in this matter."

"Of course," continued Dr. Mitchell, " your letter presents a good case for the continuing application of sec. 59, a case with which I completely agree! However I doubt that it will be sufficiently persuasive to have any effect in relation to the sale of Telstra.

With best regards, David. (Mitchell)"

DVD – THE SPIRIT OF AUSTRALIA'S CONSTITUTION AND HISTORY: Australians need to have the 5-set DVD series "The Spirit of Australia's Constitution and History" by Dr. David Mitchell, BA., LL.B., Ph.D., LL.M. that was very successfully launched at the Albury National Weekend. It is essential we understand the basic structure and concept of law underpinning our legal system and its historical roots. We are in very grave danger of losing sight of its philosophical and historical roots. Dr. Mitchell insists the Governor-General does have important constitutional powers which the G-G's 'advisers' keep telling him he doesn't have! Send for your set of DVDs to Heritage Books, P.O. Box 27, Happy Valley, South Australia, 5159. Price including postage – $55.00 for the set of 5.

AND NOT A DROP TO DRINK – EXCEPT AT A PRICE by Ron Fischer: Tuesday morning, October 17th, on the Today show (Channel 9) Malcolm Turnbull was being interviewed about the drought, and its effects on farmers. The interviewer asked him whether the banks might be asked to go easy with their interest rates on the farmers.

Turnbull started his reply by stating, "We can't control the banks, and we don't intend to." and then carried on with useless, usual political verbiage.

Here we have a relatively new member of "parliament", formerly Australian representative of the Jewish International Bank, Goldman Sachs, stating quite clearly that the government "can't control Banks". That is, they have given the banks and the banking system, total independence from the government. They can charge what they like, by way of usury, and call it "interest".

The long-range plan: Consider the following long-range, secret plan, being carried out by the Howard "government".

A couple of years ago, Malcolm Turnbull, multi-millionaire, and representative in Australia for the international bank Goldman Sachs, through manipulation in his electorate, and in spite of concerned opposition by Liberal Party members in the electorate, "wins" the Liberal Party nomination for the seat, and was subsequently "elected". Remember, Turnbull made his fortune in years and years of the business of money-lending, and usury. Nothing else.

- During this period, you will remember that John Winston Howard came back from overseas stating that the Snowy River hydro-electric project was going to be sold, and even brazenly stated publicly, "it's a done deal". (Who "done" the deal?)

- The people objected strongly, throughout Australia. The Snowy belongs to the people, and it must remain so. John Winston Howard backed off, cunningly changed the subject, and went quiet on the subject. It has not been mentioned since.
- Meanwhile, Malcolm Turnbull, then a Member of "Parliament" was being given the newly-being-prepared portfolio, including "water and climate change."
- Still more recently, Malcolm Turnbull – still with his close connections to Goldman Sachs (which incidentally is one of the shareholders of the privately owned in the U.S.A. "Federal Reserve" which is not Federal and has no reserves) – is currently being briefed, groomed and set up as the soon-to-be-announced "Minister for Water and Climate Change". (Hello?)
- When this new "Ministry" is officially established, and Malcolm Turnbull is officially "sworn in" (hello?), he will proceed with a number of sweeping changes to the existing system, among them the "absolute necessity of "privatising" (read "selling off") the Snowy River Project, claiming that "billions of dollars will have to be spent on it to combat "climate change", and that it (the cost) will be much too high for the present owners to handle.
- Meanwhile, the climate change, and the drought – also deliberately manipulated (?), through such projects as HAARP and others – will continue, in order to starve and thirst our fellow Australians and farmers into submission. Thus, the Snowy will, they hope, be sold off ("privatised") and be owned and controlled by foreign, international banks.

Thus, yet another Australian icon will disappear down the memory hole, all in line with the scheming of those pushing the New World Order. This includes John Winston Howard, who, when asked about his views on "globalisation" a few years ago when he got off the plane from the U.S.A., stated on television, as he strutted by, "There's nothing else."

This, along with legislation that will require us to pay for every drop of water that we drink or use. Given to us free from heaven!

THE SHOW TRIAL HAS ENDED: So the show trial of Saddam Hussein has finished and he has been sentenced to death by hanging. But what about his co-conspirators? How come they are being 'let off the hook'?

The website <http://www.commondreams.org/views06/1106-30.htm> has a very lengthy article giving its readers some background history to Iraq and Saddam Hussein and his links to the Americans including Donald Rumsfeld, and George Bush Senior and Junior. Well worth a read – it will help you to grasp just what a sordid, dirty business world politics and business really is.

The article deals with:

- Saddam's Unindicted Co-Conspirator: Donald Rumsfeld
- George Bush Sr & Jr involved with The Carlyle Group who supplied chemical and biological weapons to Saddam Hussein.
- Behind the Scenes of the Iraq War & How the CIA in 1963 put Dictator Saddam in Power after overthrowing President Kassem who had helped in founding OPEC

For those readers of On Target who do not have access to the internet, we will post out a photocopy of the 35 page article for $7.00 posted. We have titled it: "Saddam's Unindicted Co-Conspirators".

TELL US WHAT WE ALL KNOW by James Reed: Martin Ferguson, ALP frontbencher and former ACTU leader is wont to tell us what we all know: that both sides of parliament have let the Australian people down for the last ten years. Only 10 years? A consultation of the work of great League men such as Eric Butler and Jeremy Lee – and of historical works from social credit writers in Australia before them – clearly indicates that the rot had settled in no sooner than the new-born nation of Australia took its first steps after Federation. Before that the British colonies were gripped in the intrigue and drama of the world-wide conspiracy that had a death grip on the destiny of Europe for centuries.

Nations such as Australia and America in the "new world" were born out of this tempest of the Old World Order

[For those interested in an introduction to the history of the assault on Western civilisation, the reader could begin with Eric D. Butler's booklet "The Enemy Within the Empire"; "The Fabian Contribution to the Communist Advance" by Eric D. Butler; Gary Allen's "None Dare Call It Conspiracy" is still one of the best introductory books – and then graduate to Carroll Quigley's weighty tome "Tragedy and Hope". But I digress. John Howard told Question Time on 2 March 2006: "Let me say again lest there be any doubt in the minds of anybody in Parliament: no knowledge in relation to the alleged bribery by AWB Limited was in possession of members of my Government – in my possession or any of my colleagues – at the time those offences occurred, if in fact they did occur."

Oh yes, the offences did occur. The Cole Inquiry has established that Australia's monopoly wheat exporter had paid money to a company that was a front for Saddam Hussein in breach of U.N. sanctions and Australian law. The interesting political and legal question now is: who in the Howard government knew? Answer: everybody who should have known did know.

Alexander Howard admitted that he would have read cables from senior diplomats and officials. Thus The Australian of 3 March 2006 (under the page one headline "Kickback Cable Sent to PM") quotes a cable of 13 January 2000 from a DFAT officer to Downer which warns of information received about "possible irregularities in the way the Australian Wheat Board may have received payment for wheat supplies to Iraq under the oil-for-food program... It appears to be a system designed to generate illegal revenue in U.S. dollars."

If a minister should have acted on any cable, that is one which should have been acted on. Another cable of 22 March 2000 was sent to both Downer and Howard. As Labor's foreign affairs spokesman Kevin Rudd rightly noted, "It beggars belief that the Prime Minister was not aware by this stage of the U.N's. warnings."

The AWB affair has given a glimpse of the machinery of government which we humble peasants have been able to see. It is truly an ugly picture of lies, deception and corruption on a grand scale. But that is business as usual. Imagine seeing the full uncensored vision of political reality: it would be much like the visions of medieval artists who attempted to sketch hell but recoiled in utter horror of the process. It was simply too much brutal reality to face.

The AWB issue will no doubt be ultimately contained and the business of wrecking Australia will continue at a quickening pace.
