THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: Unlike Stalinist theory of a Communist Uprising seizing the power, then imposing a cultural revolution through terror, Gramsci saw a different, lengthier path to the triumph of Communism, making it impervious to the military coups. It was through a cultural hegemony and invisible terror and censorship of the opposing ideas, where the screams of the victims would drown in the deafening cacophony of propaganda from the media...

The Gramscian trick was that Marxists would change the Culture first, then political power would fall into their lap like a ripened peach. His was a "bloodless" Communist Revolution, and its class struggle was the "position war" for the minds and souls of the masses, alienated from their traditional cultural values... It would be a tyranny, all right, but a tyranny of good intentions, a tyranny the properly mind-programmed masses would eagerly embrace and support. It would be for their own good and happiness. It would be a revolution whose achievements are not going to be easily dismantled through a military force. – Eric D. Ross, Ph.D., "... Triumph of American Neo-Marxism", 2005

TO THE PRIME MINISTER AND THE PRESS FROM PETER DAVIS:

To: The Prime Minister, Hon. Kevin Rudd MHR, Parliament House, Canberra, 2600

Reference: Reserve Bank of Australia/Probable near term interest rate increase.

Dear Mr. Rudd,

During the recent election campaign both you and Mr. Howard and your respective treasurers clearly indicated that the R.B.A. is not directed nor under the control of the Government of Australia; that it is independent of Government.

This means that for all intents and purposes yours is not the sovereign Government of Australia. It was Mayer Amschel Rothschild who stated back in 1838, "Permit me to issue and control the money of a nation and I care not who makes its laws." Surely the issuance and control of money is the most important role of the national government, not some private, autonomous body. Australia did once have a Government Bank.

Labor M.P. Andrew Fisher delivered the "People's Bank" in 1912, which for a few short years delivered the people of Australia huge benefits under Sir Denison Miller's leadership.

It was conservative Prime Minister Stanley Bruce back in the late 1920s who began the emasculation of the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, completed by Paul Keating with the final full privatisation of the C.B.A.

Which brings us to today: The two factors within the C.P.I. that have been identified as giving rise to inflationary pressures are banking charges and rising fuel prices.

Clearly the average wage earner is not responsible for these pressures, yet he is blamed for causing 'rising demand'. It can be predicted with absolute certainty that if the privately controlled R.B.A. does increase interest rates this week many thousands of your electors will suffer unfairly and unnecessarily.

Yours sincerely, P.W. Davis, The Mayor's Parlour, Tasman Terrace, Port Lincoln, S.A., 5606.

Editor's comment: It has been reported the latest interest hike financially impacts on 300,000 ordinary Australian families.

THE TRUTH CAN SET US FREE by Betty Luks: It much occupies my mind that many people find it hard to 'see' the Social Credit that exists and has existed in all societies as long as people have lived and worked together in mutual love and co-operation. It was a man named Charles Ferguson, who, in the early 1900s, first coined the term social credit. He could see the abundance and potential abundance of the western nations which he said had resulted from the 'social credit' of the people. But it took Clifford Hugh Douglas' practical mind to take the matter further and offer practical mechanisms, based on the social teachings of the Christian Faith, for the just distribution of such abundance.

Social Credit is defined as: "The power (the energy, the efficiency) of human beings in association to produce the result intended, measured in terms of their satisfaction."

Look around you reader. Can you not see the incredible growth, increments and benefits, that have resulted from the mutual associations of fellow Australians, past and present, that has contributed to the physical and intellectual and spiritual benefits for modern Australians?

While the aim of most serious social crediters is to study and understand, to the best of their individual ability, a limited number of matters, one being the development and growth of a modern economy, (i.e., those things involving a nation's housekeeping matters) the question of 'money' must come into their consideration because all now live in a 'money' economy.

Social Credit asks: What was, and still is, the true purpose of a 'money' system? What does the study of the history of 'money' down through the centuries reveal to us? What is the true purpose of a nation's money system? What is the true nature of a nation's money system?

Why cannot people 'see' this thing called social credit? The main reason of course is that they are so indoctrinated with the perceptions and concepts of the world of Mammon they cannot 'take in' any other perceptions and concepts that differ from what they believe to be 'the real world'. They have accepted an abstraction as part of reality, as real, and simply cannot see the real woods and trees. Let me give some examples.

Headlines on the present 'financial crisis': "Housing Flameout: California falls into the sea". I ask: Really? Truly? In reality?

If I take that as a literal statement, literal meaning: being or reflecting the essential or genuine character of something, then I am to believe the land mass known as 'California', again a portion of the land mass known as the United States of America – has fallen into the sea and the houses on it have fallen into the sea in a fearful blaze of great intensity.

Or another headline: "California Housing Falls Off a Cliff." Well that is clear – is it not?

Houses built too close to the edge of cliffs abutting the sea on a section of the land mass known as California, have fallen into the sea.

Reader, what do you make of this statement? "We are now beginning to see the first signs that the listless housing bubble has sprung a leak and is careening towards earth..."

I imagine a house in the shape of a bubble, dispiritedly floating in space, is now coming into view. Alarming, the bubble-house has sprung a leak (air escaping?) and is careening, that is, lurking, reeling, towards earth. I better watch out!

This abstraction called 'money' under present rules (and upheld by legislation) bears no relation to the real world in which we live. But it must be made to appear that it does. Hence the references to real things like the sea, cliffs, land masses, houses, even bubbles. It is time you were dehypnotised.

KEVIN RUDD PM AND HIS 'COLLECTIVE GUILT' WEAPON by Betty Luks: I must admit to wondering if Piers Ackerman has a personal dislike of PM Kevin Rudd. Be that as it may, Mr. Ackerman has rightly brought up the question of what strings will be attached to the Rudd Labor government's "gallop to claim moral superiority over the previous Australian government with a pledge to say sorry to a group of Australians, self-described as the Stolen Generations, in a yet-to-be revealed form of words on behalf of the current government." (Daily Telegraph, 3/2/08)

Not only is Mr. Rudd posturing on the high moral ground in the affair, but he is pressuring the Opposition leader Brendan Nelson to act in a bi-partisan manner and agree to the 'apology'.

Rightly, Mr. Ackerman refers to the ABC as the "Labor Party's electronic media arm" which "has barely concealed its contempt for opposition politicians such as the spokesman on Indigenous Affairs, Tony Abbott, for making the not-unreasonable decision to wait to see what the Government proposes before issuing an endorsement."

Part of a Marxist agenda: But I want to ensure Mr. Rudd clearly understands that not all Australians have been conned into believing the 'apology' policy can claim the high moral ground. It is, in fact, firmly historically based on Marxist manipulation of the Aboriginal 'land rights' movement as outlined in Geoff MacDonald's 1982 book "Red Over Black".

As for Mr. Rudd and his Fabian Socialist (read Marxist) government's psycho-political crusade to bring down a mantle of collective guilt upon the shoulders of all decent Australians let's make the matter quite clear to him. If you agree, write to your Federal Member and P.M. Rudd along the following lines:

"I, and my fellow Australians, are not responsible for 'sins' claimed to have been committed by previous generations of Australians against Aboriginal Australians. We are not responsible for past generations' faults. We are responsible for our own. You do not have my consent to vote (as my representative) in favour of the Labor Party's 'apology'." That is enough.

Piers Ackerman refers to "Rudd and his Indigenous Affairs Minister Jenny Macklin have attempted to assuage concerns in the community that any official apology on behalf of the Government will not usher in a new round of handouts to those who believe they are owed some compensation for the past policies of long-gone governments."

Marxist hardliners most certainly do have an agenda: But make no mistake about it. Not only do the hardliners hope to clog up the systems with compensation claims but eventually to fragment the Commonwealth of Australia by setting up a separate nation or nations.

In a preface to Geoff's book, former Victorian RSL president Mr. Bruce Ruxton wrote: "Mr. McDonald develop(ed) his central theme that Australia's future as a free Western nation was seriously threatened by two movements: one to use the Aboriginal 'land rights' issue to eventually establish a separate Aboriginal nation under communist domination; and the second to fragment a homogenous and stable Australia by a breaking down of the traditional immigration policy, and by the deliberate fostering of a multiculturalism which could only end with the Balkanisation of Australia." Monday, includes $2.55 billion in defence assistance for Israel. That will increase in increments until 2013, when it will settle at $3.1 billion a year until 2018.

Israel this year received its final $2.4 billion payment in a $24 billion defence assistance package launched in 1998. The Bush administration increased the amount partly as compensation to Israel for a planned $20 billion in U.S. arms sales to Saudi Arabia and its Arab neighbours.

The administration defends the overall package as necessary to contain Iranian hegemony and to spur Israel and moderate Arab nations to support Israeli-Palestinian peace. Who said America is not the tail of the Israeli dog?

Tell me reader, have you looked at the racial mix in our capital cities lately? Do you think 'Australians' now have a sense of homogenous cohesiveness?

Have you looked at what the landmass now known as 'Australia' would look like if only half the land rights claims were granted and those lands 'hived off' for a separate Marxist Aboriginal nation?

One wonders how long Communist leaders in such land-hungry nations as China would let the 'Aboriginal' nations remain free on this great land mass? A rich but weak nation would be a 'sitting duck' for such power-hungry regimes.

I wonder how many Aboriginal Australians understand what they are really being used for? They might have an inkling of what to expect by taking a good hard look at what has happened to the continent of Africa. Would they like to live under Marxist Robert Mugabe's regime in Zimbabwe? What about Kenya – now a troubled Black nation under a brutal regime. What about Mbeki's South Africa?

BILLIONS FOR ISRAEL WHILE AMERICAN CITIZENS GO HUNGRY: Bush budget launches new Israel aid. Institute of Historical Review website 4/2/2008: The Bush administration launched its new $30 billion defence aid to Israel in its proposed 2009 budget.
