THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: Today we but repeat the mistakes of the past; however today it is not merely disaster to a small city or state and its way of life, but with the existing refinement of that which can only be described as the money swindle as it was conducted in ancient times by the trapezitae at their bench in the market place... Those lines of Solon say enough:

But of themselves in their folly the men of the city are willing
Our great city to wreck, being won over by wealth.
False are the hearts of the people's leaders.

A further couplet indicates the meaning of "our great city to wreck".

Great men ruin a city: for lack of understanding
Under a despot's yoke lieth the people enslaved.

These lines written after the seizure by Peisistratus of the Tyranny at Athens would indicate that the same Peisistratus had the assistance in his rise to power of those former great landowning families of Attica who had been drawn into the schemes of the foreign money masters to their undoing... These landowners had forgotten their duty towards their own people.

Fascinated by strange luxuries and the stranger talk of the money men, the trapezitae... They forgot that in the absolute analysis they themselves were but stewards of a higher power. Lacking understanding, above all, of the true nature of this money as being above all their own law towards the facilitation of the exchanges amongst themselves and their people, they had been lead astray from their duty.

By conniving with the bankers and their protégées the new manufacturers, to drive their own people off the land into the cities, and into the industries rapidly speeding up from the new money economy, they forgot that in their capacity as rulers, the whole land was theirs in trust to their people, and that the people therefore were expectant of them to be their guides and shepherds..."

WHAT OF AUSTRALIA'S FUTURE IN ALL THIS? by Betty Luks: Circumstances have certainly changed, Australians are now experiencing the bitter fruits of 'global free trade' which was supposed to take us into some glorious 'socialist utopia'. But the personal and national experiences don't match up with the political 'spin'.

Watching America, the most productive, energetic nation in history, going through its own financial and economic death throes is not a pretty sight. But what of those who, behind the scenes, pull the strings of the puppet politicians and business 'leaders'?

I mean of course those who have the Power of Money (the trapezitae, or mammon as also known historically) – what are they up to?

If the real history of this group is anything to go by – and where we are to look for answers – this parasitical group is already settling comfortably upon another group of host nations, to feed off of them. When the time comes and history is once more repeated they will leave the 'dying host' and find others to suck dry.

Robert Fisk gives us some clues in "The demise of the dollar – report", 6th October 2009: "In a graphic illustration of the new world order, Arab states have launched secret moves with China, Russia and France to stop using the U.S. currency for oil trading. Iran announced late last month that its foreign currency reserves would henceforth be held in euros rather than dollars.

Where Will The Australian Dollar Go Next? www.BusinessSpectator.com.au: "In the most profound financial change in recent Middle East history, Gulf Arabs are planning – along with China, Russia, Japan and France – to end dollar dealings for oil, moving instead to a basket of currencies including the Japanese yen and Chinese yuan, the euro, gold and a new, unified currency planned for nations in the Gulf Co-operation Council, including Saudi Arabia, Abu Dhabi, Kuwait and Qatar.

Secret meetings have already been held by finance ministers and central bank governors in Russia, China, Japan and Brazil to work on the scheme, which will mean that oil will no longer be priced in dollars.

The plans, confirmed to The Independent by both Gulf Arab and Chinese banking sources in Hong Kong, may help to explain the sudden rise in gold prices, but it also augurs an extraordinary transition from dollar markets within nine years.

The Independent said U.S. authorities were aware that the meetings had taken place but had not discovered the details and were "sure to fight this international cabal"."

A UNION IS COMING OUT FIGHTING? by Betty Luks: Those who have read the papers know that the British Labour party studied the concepts of Social Credit in the 1920s – but decided against supporting them. Why? Because in truth there were many who had ambitions for political power themselves and recognized that Social Credit was a policy aimed at decentralizing power back to the people – and the ruling powers were opposed to Social Credit. Therefore British Labour had to reject it; Australian Labor was and is no different.

Under the headlines: "Hansonite protest out of left field" 22/9/ 2009 Malcolm Colless in The Australian reports:

"Signs of community concern over Chinese influence on Australian living standards are shaping up as a key domestic issue for the Rudd government as it struggles to mend its already strained relations with China. Home buyers in Melbourne, for example, are complaining that they are being frozen out of a tight housing market by Chinese purchasers who have no intention of living in their new properties. The influx of Chinese money on to the Australian housing market follows a relaxation by the federal government last March of its rules on foreign companies and temporary residents.

Liberal Party officials say uncertainty about this and the effect of Chinese investment in Australian industries are surfacing during the process for preselecting candidates for the next federal election, particularly in Victoria.

Union launch against Australia signing free trade agreement with China: This coincides with the launch last week of a campaign by the left-wing Victorian branch of the Electrical Trades Union against Australia signing a free trade agreement with China. The cornerstone argument by the union is that a free trade deal will destroy thousands of Australian manufacturing industry jobs.

The campaign launch by the secretary of the union, Dean Mighell, had the support of three lower house independents, Bob Katter, Tony Windsor and Rob Oakeshott, who argued that the government should give the parliament a bigger role in evaluating the merits of free trade deals... (Because4 of illness Senator Barnaby Joyce was not at the launch). Mighell says a union-commissioned report on the FTA, titled The China Advantage, is aimed at sparking public debate on its effect on the livelihood of Australians. It has sent the report to other unions across the country seeking support and has established a "save Aussie jobs" website to drive the campaign.

"Astonishingly, there is currently very little public debate," Mighell says. "It is a social-justice matter that all Australians should be concerned about." He says the dangers posed by the FTA would not only be a threat to jobs "but also (affect) the employability of our children"."

Comment: Yes, it is astonishing Mr. Mighell! But you seem to have been around a fair while, yet it has taken you and the Union movement quite some time to wake up to the fact that in the plans of the Trapezitae, Mammon, or whatever is the current term for this mysterious group, Australia is destined to be a colony of China.

JEREMY LEE'S 2001 WARNING: Let me remind the reader of Jeremy Lee's warning to the Australian people eight years ago. On Target, 28/9/2001: Contrived Apocalypse: "Prime Minister John Howard travelled to America to finalise a free-trade deal. The idea had been initiated by 60 U.S. and Australian corporations who had formed "The America-Australia Free Trade Agreement Coalition". Eighteen of these U.S. corporations are among the top 200 global corporations, with annual sales of $1.3 TRILLION – more than four times the annual output of the whole Australian economy (about $US300 billion). The two biggest (General Motors and Exxon Mobil) are each bigger than the Australian economy...

Putting the kindest interpretation on it, these 18 companies, with combined sales in 1999 of $2,000 for every living man, woman and child on earth, are not really concerned about the freedom and prosperity of the Australian people! They simply want to clear the decks for their own continued expansion.

International Trade about power politics: Colin Teese, a former official with the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade, has warned: "....International trade is about power politics, where the strong do as they please and the weak extract what benefits they can. For example, when Australia announced it was planning to take Japan to the World Trade Organisation disputes panel over a 390% tariff on imported rice, the Japanese simply announced they were postponing future talks over wheat imports. The message was clear: back off on rice or the Japanese would retaliate by looking elsewhere for wheat imports. Australia had no choice but to back down indefinitely... A free trade agreement with the U.S. is likely to see Australia concede more than the U.S., thereby worsening a bad trade imbalance ..."

With all eyes on America, little coverage was given to the just-concluded ASEAN meeting in Hanoi, where 12 nations – Australia, New Zealand, Singapore, Thailand, Malaysia, the Philippines, Brunei, Indonesia, Cambodia, Myanmar (formerly Burma) Laos and Vietnam – agreed to form a Closer Economic Partnership initiative " (The Press, Christchurch, NZ, 19/9/01)..."

Don't forget Jeremy and Nancy Lee's latest DVD. Get your copies direct from them – and we urge you to plan to present copies to your friends and families – why not as Christmas presents? It is their future that is at stake.

• "Retell the Story": a 1999 presentation on world events, up to that time, by Jeremy to a group of young people in Brisbane, Queensland, and

• "A + B: Mending a Mortgaged World": As Jeremy insists... how can the world possibly get out of financial debt by issuing more financial debt?

AUSTRALIA'S MIGRATION MADNESS by Brian Simpson: "No Visas Boys? Welcome to Australia" is The Australian's headline of September 3, 2009, p.1. The colour photograph shows Afghan refugees waiting at Christmas Island airport for a chartered Qantas jet to take them to Melbourne. The Rudd government has overturned the Howard government's policy of processing all asylum-seekers offshore, moving the Afghani's to Melbourne without visas.

Immigration and refugee lobby groups across the country were ecstatic by this news, for the more refugees pouring into Australia, the more "moral" we allegedly are. Nevertheless, refugee numbers are only a drop in the ocean compared to legal migration numbers which are literally choking Australia to death.

Australia has one of the highest population growth rates in the world – at 1.9% only Mexico and Turkey are growing faster. The new "immigration revolution" has pushed our population to 22.8 million. Ten years ago it was projected that our population would not reach 23 million until 2021. 60% of this increase is due to immigration and immigration is primarily coloured immigration. Asians and Middle Easterners. Permanent immigration is now 219,098 per annum. Temporary immigration is about 657,124 people per year – most of them will never return.

Probably one million per year: So, with illegals and overseas students, Australia probably clocks up 1 million non-whites per year. At this rate Australia will be a non-white majority country within about ten years. The establishment sneers at this saying that one day most of these people will go home; home for them is Australia. We can no longer call Australia home.

Andrew Markus, co-author of "Australia's Immigration Revolution", and I recall a critic of Professor Blainey, has said that the growth of long-term residents without citizenship raises identity problems when people have loyalties to multiple countries (The Age, August 31, 2009). "That's a fundamental shift...the way we define belongingness and the way we define cohesion, we have to look at that." And: "The magnitude of change is breathtaking in the character of our cities".

Don't expect any critique of immigration numbers though. In Melbourne, immigration has meant that it is increasingly hard to get rental accommodation and housing demand is high, keeping the housing industry happy. Indeed, Australia post-World War II has been essentially a gift to the housing and building industry, making its ruling elites super-rich at the expense of the destruction of our nation. Environmental crises, water shortages, infrastructure decay, housing affordability, transport congestion, are all made worse by our insane immigration numbers. Population growth and urban sprawl are simply out of control in Melbourne.

Immigration needs to be seen for what it really is: a political weapon used by the elites in demographic warfare against Anglo-Australia.
