THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: ABC News: Immigration facing 'chaos' after High Court decision: A High Court decision on asylum seekers is threatening to undermine the Federal Government's offshore processing system. In a judgement handed down today, the court upheld a challenge mounted by two Sri Lankan Tamil asylum seekers who had their refugee claims rejected. The men wanted to challenge that decision in the courts but were prevented from doing so because they were being held in an offshore detention centre on Christmas Island.

However, in a unanimous decision, the High Court has ruled that was an error of law and that the two men were denied procedural fairness when Government contractors reviewed their case. The decision calls the entire Commonwealth system of offshore processing for asylum seekers into question, with Opposition immigration spokesman Scott Morrison saying the process has been "thrown into chaos". The court found the Federal Government cannot deny access to the nation's court system to those asylum seekers who arrive by boat onto an area excised from Australia's migration zone. Not only is this a win for the two Sri Lankans, but it could apply to any asylum seekers denied access to the courts all the way back to when the Migration Act was changed by the Howard Government almost a decade ago.

But Andrew Bolt reports: But the full bench of the High Court did not uphold the asylum-seekers' broader challenge to the validity of section 46A of the Migration Act, which could have resulted in thousands of asylum-seeker determinations being thrown into jeopardy.

WAR WITH CHINA OR BOW DOWN TO NEW CHINESE EMPIRE by James Reed: Consider this for an opening quote from Diane Lin fund manager of the Sydney-based Pengana Asian Equities Fund: "In the end China will have to invade Western Australia and Russia" (The Weekend Australian Financial Review, 9-10/10/2010, p.29). Lin goes on to say: "China's energy consumption is particularly scary and I don't think the world realises the dimensions of it."

For example, China has about 1 per cent of the world's known oil reserves but consumes 10 per cent of all oil exports and it has around 14 per cent of the world's known coal reserves but consumes around half of the world's coal exports. China's consumption is set to rise as an inevitable consequence of economic growth, even though the Chinese Communist Party is talking about reducing dependency on foreign resources.

Hillary Clinton, U.S. Secretary of State, has said that China is "testing" the world. China has claimed the entire South China sea as its "core interest". In retaliation to a shipping dispute with Japan it placed restrictions on the export of rare earth minerals needed for the manufacture of advanced electronics. China has 98 per cent of the world's supply of these rare earth minerals and has shown what it will do. Strategic studies expert Paul Dibb, "If China Bullies on the High Seas, It May Need to be Taught a Naval Lesson", The Australian, 8/11/2020, p.14, is right in seeing China becoming "an increasingly assertive military power". It is early days yet. China is watching America decay and waiting its time before it conquers the world.

WARM AND TENDER CARE FOR REFUGEES! by James Reed: Remember Julia "Red Lizard" Gillard's tough talk on asylum seekers during the 2010 Federal election? Now thousands of asylum seekers will go into community care and future asylum seekers arriving with families would only be detained "for basic checks before being moved into the community". ("Refugee Families Will Go into Care", The Australian, 25/10/2010 p.1).

Oh, forget about simmering tensions in the Adelaide Hills and claims that "Refugees to 'Harm' Kids Education", The Australian, 20/10/2010 p.2. It is the same story with each wave of refugees. Oh please new world order, move all six billion smiling faces to the suburbs so that we can have even more diversity! In fact, move the entire Third World to Woodside, the residents have riches and bounties to share with all! Their schools can cope with the billions!

While we are in the mood of universal love, let the churches sell up all their property and meet on the street, having given their wealth to refugees! Let the universities be made into housing for the poor of Africa! Let the ASX become a soup kitchen for the hungry! And let us all walk on water in celebration of the great god of migration!

P.S. The Australian, 1/11/2010 p.5 has a big colour picture of three Afghans outside their family restaurant in Islamabad: two of them plan to seek asylum in Australia. The article, as I read it, gave no evidence of persecution. They just want a better life, so here they come. The article cites the example of a Pakistani father with a sick daughter who wants to get a visa on medical grounds so when he gets to Australia he can seek asylum and his daughter can get a $140,000 operation for free! I suggest that the superannuation of every academic in Australia be taken by a new law, and put in a fund so that the disadvantaged of the world can have these operations!

HOUSE PRICES RISING: THE FACE OF IMMIGRATION by James Reed: Housing industry analysts do not predict a "crash" in the property market, but on the contrary boom, boom, boom (The Australian, October 13, 2010, p.13). Home prices will increase by around 20% on average in Sydney, Perth and Adelaide. That is one of the reasons the housing industry has championed mass immigration, to use simply 'supply and demand economics to make a financial "killing", laughing all the way to the bank. Immigration in the post World War II period has essentially destroyed Anglo Saxon Australia and its people and meant that the dream of a 1/4 acre block will be just that for the few remaining Anglos – a dream.

WOLFENSON AND 'MATES' PREPARE FOR ASIAN RULE by Peter Ewer: As reported ("Prepare for Asian Era, Wolfenson Tells Mates", The Australian, 29/11/2010 p.5). Jewish former World Bank president James Wolfenson was in Sydney to tell his "mates" that a "radical global transformation was occurring" where China, India and Asia would control 60 per cent of the world economy.

Wolfenson's parents came to Australia in the 1930s. He himself went to study at Harvard University and onwards to a banking career. So no doubt he supports this global transformation. The article revealed he had "just regained his Australian citizenship which he had given up when he was being considered for the World Bank presidency."

ALL THAT GLITTERS IS NOT GOLD by Betty Luks: We are being warned not to buy gold at this time because a massive fraud in the gold market has been discovered. Criminals are replacing the cores of the gold bars with tungsten! Why tungsten and not another metal? Tungsten is an equivalent weight to gold and the fraud is not so easily detected. All I can say is, the ancient gold traders have thousands of years up on the modern-day criminals.

When you can issue receipts for gold that doesn't exist, and the unsuspecting public use the receipts (bits of paper, mind you) as 'money' in place of the imaginary gold – then surely you would think that you had struck 'pay dirt'!

But it gets even better. The time comes when the gullible public accept bank-issued 'paper' as 'money' – by this time the people have forgotten that it once represented a receipt for imaginary gold – in a range of forms – in the bank vaults. As time goes on and the people are conditioned to believe that computer blips registered on a screen as figures to be calculated is 'money' – why man, wouldn't you believe that you really had it made.

But let's back-track to an historical event of immense importance: In a paper "Money: An Historical Survey" at the Bonar Law College, Ashridge, England, on 26th July, 1936, C.H. Douglas explained:- "... Originally, just as a railway issues its own tickets, the wealth producers of the world, thousands of years ago, produced their own tickets. In those days, the ownership of beasts of various kinds was the chief form of wealth, and of course the cattle had to be fed. Very often the rich man, the man who owned a lot of cattle, had not sufficient corn or fodder to feed the rest.

One leather disc = one head of cattle: The merchant of grain and fodder was generally an itinerant, and it was not always convenient for him to take away the cattle; so he took from the cattle owner a leather disc which represented one head of cattle. Sometimes it had on it a rude engraving of the cow's head, or something of that sort, and sometimes it hadn't. Indeed most of you know as well as I do that the Latin word for cattle is pecus, and our modern word pecuniary derived from it is historical proof, if any were necessary, of the derivation of the first money.

The owner of the real wealth made 'money': "Now, in that simple arrangement there is one point of immense importance to be noticed, and that is that the owner of the wealth, that is to say the owner of the cattle, actually, literally, in truth, made – not metaphorically but actually – money, representing his wealth in the same sense that the railway makes tickets – not in the sense that the modern businessman 'makes' money when he says he makes money. It is so long ago since he made any money that he has forgotten probably that he ever did say it, but when he did say it he was mistaken; he never made a cent in his life. If he had he would have been in gaol for counterfeiting. All he did was to get money that somebody else had, but the original man about whom I am talking for the moment, the owner of cattle, actually made money.

Tokens of the real wealth: He made his leather discs as the owner of the wealth; they were tokens of wealth *which existed, those discs, and the issuer of the token and the owner of the wealth were the same person..."

Now, I don't know what you understand to be real 'wealth', but I understand it to be that which sustains and maintains life. The word itself once meant 'well being', just as when we speak of the 'Commonwealth of Australia' we are referring to the Common Well Being of the People – that is you, me, the individual People of this great land – considered collectively.

And I believe that it is you, me, We the People, who need to unite together and insist that the power to create and issue these 'money tokens' (whatever form or nature they take) does not belong to the private banking monopoly and must be returned to 'The People' through their Commonwealth Constitution.

POLICY is the fundamental issue: The fundamental issue here is not 'greedy' bankers, it is not even ownership or administration – although they are important – IT IS POLICY. The real issue is the POLICY upon which the banks operate – are they there to govern and control the real wealth of the people or are they there to serve the people?

Once upon a time, in the early 20th century, the Commonwealth Bank of Australia was set up by a Labor government to serve the interests of the People. It provided a service in competition with the private banks, but eventually another Labor government, when in power, 'privatised' the people's bank. Thank you for nothing Mr. Keating!

But all is not lost. The Commonwealth Constitution, drawn up over 100 years ago, reveals that neither the People nor the Drafters of the Constitution clearly understood what was 'financial credit' – whereas we now do. It is way past time the Australian people took back their Constitution from the Money Lenders!

"Part V. Powers of the Parliament Section 51" of the Commonwealth Constitution relates to the powers of The Parliament "to make laws for the peace, order, and good government of the Commonwealth", and

Section 51 (xii.) reads: "Currency, coinage, and legal tender"

Section 51 (xiii.) reads: "Banking, other than State banking; also State banking extending beyond the limits of the State concerned".

With a Constitutional change to Section 51 (xii) to read: "currency, coinage, legal tender, and financial credit", OUR Government would have powers, clearly set down, to regulate the financial credit powers to serve the Australian people as was originally intended by that earlier Labor government. If the Australian people "could agree to unite" and insist on that sovereign right of a free people to a government and banking system serving them, they could lead the world out of the financial darkness into the glorious light of a freer world.

ROYAL SOCIETY BOWS TO CLIMATE 'SCEPTICS': The Times' Ben Webster (30 September 2010) reported: "Britain's leading scientific institution has been forced to rewrite its guide to climate change and admit that there is greater uncertainty about future temperature increases than it had previously suggested. Professor Anthony Kelly, one of the 43 Fellows who called for the change, says he is reasonably satisfied with the new guidance. "It's gone a long way to meeting our concerns," he said. "The previous guidance was discouraging debate rather than encouraging it among knowledgeable people. The new guidance is clearer and a very much better document."

OUT WITH THE "OUT OF AFRICA" THEORY by Brian Simpson: The African Eve theory holds that all of humanity descended from one woman in Africa. By this theory, Africa is the mother of us all. It is only a step from this to wanting mass African migration. The idea behind the African Eve theory has been challenged on scientific grounds. A paper published by Erik Trinkaus in "Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, U.S.A.", was summarised in "Is the Out of Africa Theory Out", Scientific American thus: "All the Ancestors of contemporary Europeans apparently did not migrate out of Africa as previously believed. According to a new analysis of more than 5000 teeth from long-perished members of the genus Homo and the closely related Australopithecus, many early settlers hailed from Asia". My guess is that the Establishment will soon move to put up Asia as the mother of us all. But at least the African Eve theory is coming to get some of the criticism it deserves. African Eve has truly lost her fig leaf.
