THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: It's all been said before: Or else, how can one enter into a strong man's house and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man and then he will spoil his house.
— Matthew 12.27 The New Testament

The money-power and the revolutionary-power have been set up and given sham but symbolic shapes ('Capitalism' and 'Communism') and sharply defined citadels ('America' and 'Russia'). Suitably to alarm the mass mind, the picture offered is that of bleak and hopeless enmity and confrontation. . . But what if similar men, with a common aim, secretly rule in both camps and propose to achieve their ambition through the clash between these masses? I believe that any diligent student of our times will discover that this is the case.
— Douglas Reed in "Far and Wide".

Who keeps track of the American bankers and the missing billions?

It explains that the current spending cuts and tax hikes in the U.K. are completely unnecessary. We could avoid them by simply making one good cut – to cut benefits for bankers. I was amazed to discover that banks are actually subsidised by up to £100bn a year, at our expense.

TO MAKE SENSE OF WHAT HAS TAKEN PLACE IN EGYPT by Betty Luks: It is twenty years since Ivor Benson (author, journalist and one time broadcaster and information adviser to the Rhodesian Government) posed a question to his readers in "Behind the News" (January 1991): "... Is it possible to make any sense of the world situation as a whole? He then answered his own question. "Three leading American historians provide part of the answer: 'Two world wars and their intervening revolutions and crises are generally recognised to be episodes in a single age of conflict... (which) has not yet run its course... Whatever may be its ultimate meaning and consequence, we can already think of it and write of it as a historical whole.'

"What that means," continued Benson, "quite simply is that we can expect to find in all the separate instances of war, revolution and crises a single continuing set of forces, ambitions and influences. So, what is the total situation at a glance? We do not need to have powers of clairvoyance to see that the world is moving towards a showdown of unprecedented proportions. There is a word for times like these: apocalyptic.

A storm has been gathering for a long time and is bound to break sooner or later, possibly quite soon. First let us try to compress into a few words the total history of our century: "A world-revolution has been in progress since before the turn of the century having as its central aim the setting up of a totalitarian 'New World Order'. This revolution, of which two world wars, the Russian Revolution and the dismemberment of the colonial empires were major features, now encounters increased resistance, the most immediate and most challenging being an Islamic resurgence in the "Middle East.

"There are of course countless other ways in which the history of our century can be compressed into a few words. Oswald Spengler, in his monumental "The Decline of the West", says that the modern world is the product of an alliance of Money and rootless Intellect working in opposition to Instinct. Events have also confirmed the correctness of Spengler's statement that 'there is no proletarian revolution, not even a communist one, that does not operate in the interest of Money'. For the purposes of study, a single age of conflict, can be divided into three main parts, three vast geographical areas in which great change is either occurring or pending: the Middle East, the Soviet Union and Europe, including the former communist states.

So, let us begin with the Middle East, ... There need be no doubt about the real purpose of the Western initiative in this area: It is to set up an 'expanded' Israel as a military and political firm base. There, as throughout the so-called Third World, we see the former separate European national imperialisms being replaced by a new global cosmopolitan imperialism with Zionism as the national spearhead of it and backed by a highly concentrated financial power which has drawn all the nations of the West into its service. There is, in fact, no way in which Israel could survive except as one of the agencies of the new global cosmopolitan imperialism.

It is intended, at least in the short term, to use the artificially created Muslim states – Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Syria, etc. – as a buffer against the real opponent, which is a resurgent Islam centred in Iran..."

Ivor Benson continued: "It would not be easy to improve on an analysis of the prospects provided by Imran R. Hosein, a prominent Islamic intellectual, in a recent issue of Crescent International. "What the world will now witness, he says, is a global struggle between Islam on the one hand and, on the other, not the Christian West but a 'post-Christian, European materialist, capitalist and imperialist civilisation'".

As for Western Christianity, it is being seen as simply 'lukewarm' among the 'rapidly decaying political, economic, moral and social institutions' it created. That was twenty years ago.

"DEMOCRACY WITHOUT ECONOMIC INDEPENDENCE IS WORTHLESS" by Sarakenos, www.uruknet.info?p=74960

The Egyptian military, with a U.S. green light, got rid of Mubarak for precisely the same reason they sent the police and thugs that killed over 300 and injured thousands last week – to allow for the economy to run smoothly again. In other words, the disposing of Mubarak is just another solution, as undesirable as it may be, to re-open banks and have business run as usual. Factories, banks, real state, and other businesses are still owned by the same corrupt leaders, with the fate of the Mubarak family stock still unknown.

The High Council of Armed Forces, in all their four communiqués, stressed the "economic interests" of the country, which, in a heavily-privatized economy like Egypt's, means the interests of the private owners, some of whom are military generals. The forced removal of Mubarak, in the end, served owners' interests foremost. This economic concern was ranked as the most important objective in the High Council of Armed Forces' latest communiqué:

First: The High Council of the Armed Forces is committed to all contents in previous communiqués.

Second: The High Council of the Armed Forces has great confidence in the ability of Egypt, its institutions, and its people in surpassing the current critical conditions. And based on this, all sectors, public and private, must commit to their glorious and patriotic mission to push the wheel of economy forward, and that the people are held responsible in this matter.

The third point in the communiqué was only natural to forcefully uphold "the glorious and patriotic mission," which is to keep the current government under Suleiman in power until new elections are held. The Council did not set up a time frame for these elections, but it definitively did so for resuscitating the economy (i.e. retrieve flow of income and profits on their investments) as a priority that cannot wait for democracy; which is now!

This communiqué went short of repeating Suleiman's patronizing words yesterday when he said: "Go back to your homes and your jobs."

There are a lot of people who simply cannot accept that the economy, at this stage, is of much concern to the Egyptian military regime (which is still in power) and the Obama administration and other U.S. officials, let alone the general public and the revolution. But that is because these people are not trained sufficiently to have an economic eye on world affairs. The focus then shifts to the political aspects of the revolution: democracy, fair elections, and freedom of speech and religion. Make no mistake, these are absolutely important elements of any successful revolution, and achieving them deserves euphoric celebrations. But to ignore the economic demands, the very reason why this revolution even took place, is really an act of infanticide against this new-born Egyptian revolution.

The true catalyst of the Revolution: Bou Azizi (the true catalyst of the Tunisian and Egyptian revolutions) did not set himself on fire because he couldn't vote in free elections. He set himself on fire because his only source of income was humiliatingly taken away from him.

ROBERT FISK ASKS: IS THE ARMY TIGHTENING ITS GRIP ON EGYPT? Robert Fisk:
<http://www.informationclearinghouse.info/article27470.htm> 14/2/2011

"The Independent" – Two days after millions of Egyptians won their revolution against the regime of Hosni Mubarak, the country's army – led by Mubarak's lifelong friend, General Mohamed el-Tantawi – further consolidated its power over Egypt yesterday, dissolving parliament and suspending the constitution. As they did so, the prime minister appointed by Mubarak, ex-General Ahmed Shafiq, told Egyptians that his first priorities were "peace and security" to prevent "chaos and disorder" – the very slogan uttered so often by the despised ex-president. Plus ça change?...

Another irony has dawned on Egyptians. Those Arab dictators which claim to represent their people – Algeria comes to mind, and Libya, and Morocco – have signally failed to represent their people by not congratulating Egypt on its successful democratic revolution. To do so, needless to say, would be to saw off the legs of their own thrones.

THEN WE HAVE THE PRO-ISRAELI SUPPORTERS: A good example of how Zionist Americans play on uninformed naïve Christians' compassion is blatantly obvious in the "Jerusalem Prayer Team's" newsletter. The headlines read: "Egypt Following Iran on the Path to Destruction" and leads on to an appeal for funds in support of modern Israel, now perceived to be 'under threat by the uprising of the masses in Egypt'.

It reads: "The leader of Egypt for thirty years has been haunted by the ghost of regimes past, and especially that of his Iranian counterpart, Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, the Shah of Iran... Promises will be made but not kept. Ultimately, the big winner will be radical "Islamists like the Muslim Brotherhood that are apparently "gaming" the system.

The overthrow of Mubarak will empower the masses throughout the Middle East, but the "supreme winner will be the radical Islamists throughout the Middle East who have waited in the shadows for others to do the work for them. Jordan might well be next. It is no coincidence that Mubarak has been mostly friendly toward Israel – and that he is hated for it..."

But there's more: 'America will be cursed by God' – if it doesn't support modern Israel. It has to be asked: No matter what the Israelis do to their neighbours, to their fellow human beings? When was the moral law cancelled? And which concept of God do these people envisage? The God of love as revealed by Jesus the Christ – or?

The newsletter continues: "In finality, the mosques, mullahs, and mad rasas will prevail. The bazaars traffic in more than pita bread; they sell terror for a price... This is not the end of the revolution in Egypt; it is just the beginning. The people of the Land of the Pharaohs have much to fear. And there is more. The United States is also supporting a worldwide effort to have the United Nations unilaterally declare a Palestinian state with East Jerusalem as its capital. They are planning to present Israel with a fait accompli without any input from the Jewish people on their future and with no say over their own borders or security. No other nation on earth would be treated this way." (Are you sure of this Dr. Evans? Just one example quickly comes to mind – the Palestinians... ed.)

Dr. Evans finishes with this psychological threat: "According to the unfailing and unchanging promise of God, if America sides with this plan, we WILL be cursed. God said, 'I will bless them that bless thee and curse him that curses thee.'" (Genesis 12:3) We have an opportunity at this prophetic moment to be a blessing to the children of Abraham by standing together in defense of Jerusalem..."

A MORE REALISTIC VIEW? 'ISRAELI ECONOMY FOR BEGINNERS' from Gilad Atzmon's website: Gilad Atzmon is a former Israeli and Jew who renounced his Israeli citizenship and Judaism and now lives in the United Kingdom. In an earlier article he wrote on Milton Freedman and I thought he would find Benson's chapter on Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice of interest. He replied to my email: "Tx so much. I gave it a chapter in my new book. TMOV is indeed a crucial text and a major insight into J identity – Gilad Atzmon."

He pulls no punches in "Israeli Economy for Beginners": "We learn from the press and political analysts that, against all odds and in spite of the global financial turmoil, Israel's economy is booming. Some even suggest that Israel is one of the strongest economies around. 'How come?' you may ask; besides maybe avocado, oranges, and some Dead Sea beauty products, none of us has actually ever seen an Israeli product on the shelves. They don't make cars; nor do they make electric or electronic appliances, and they hardly manufacture any consumer goods. Israel claims to be advanced in high-tech technologies but somehow, the only Israeli advanced software ever to settle within our computers have been their Sabra Trojan Horses. In the land they grabbed by force from the indigenous Palestinians, they are yet to find any lucrative minerals or oil. So what is it? How is it that Israel is impervious to the global financial disaster? How can Israel be so rich?

Israel may be rich because, according to the Guardian, "out of the seven oligarchs who controlled 50% of Russia's economy during the 1990s, six were Jewish." During the last two decades, many Russian oligarchs have acquired Israeli citizenship. They also secured their dirty money by investing in the kosher financial haven; Wikileaks has revealed lately that "sources in the (Israeli) police estimate that Russian organised crime (Russian Mafia) has laundered as much as US $10 billion through Israeli holdings." [1] Israel's economy is booming because mega swindlers such as Bernie Madoff have been channelling their money via Zionists and Israeli institutions for decades. [2]
