THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: There are two basic philosophies in the world and, because these philosophies are diametrically opposed to each other, they give rise to conflicting policies.

- The first philosophy is one which conceives of all power and authority arising from a point EXTERNAL to the individual.
- The second philosophy conceives of all power and authority arising from WITHIN the individual.

The first philosophy automatically gives rise to policies which demands a certain type of organisation in order to impose certain conditions upon the individual. This philosophy results in the Individual being subordinated to the State, the System, or some other abstraction. It can be termed a false philosophy, because it gives rise to policies which conflict with the natural desires of the Individual. This false belief system is helped by many people who may even be opposed to one another. For example there is the alleged conflict between Communism and Fascism. We must learn to look beyond labels to the reality behind the labels.

The second philosophy which conceives of reality as an environment in which the Individual can make the greatest progress towards self-development, gives rise to a social structure in which there is the greatest possible decentralisation of all policies including financial policies. Jesus of Nazareth stated the Christian – the realistic philosophy – when he said:- "The Kingdom of God is within you."

– Only Two Basic Philosophies...

"In my council-school days, in London, I was mistaught that Australia was first colonised by British 'convicts', and consequently regarded the first Australians I met, in France, with awe and respect. So subtle is the poison which still runs in our veins from those times. For what was the crime for which many of these men who were shipped overseas were convicted? That they sought to defend their ancestral right to live, work and eat!"

CARBON TAX PASSES SENATE – AN ATTACK ON EVERY HOUSEHOLD: Senator Barnaby

Joyce insists: "This is a broad based consumption tax, an attack on every household via every power point in their house. It does nothing to change the temperature of the globe but opens every household up to its complete avenue via the powerlines to the Australian Taxation Office. At the Australian Taxation Office they will get that money, they will churn it, they will burn it, they will blow it up but they will not change the temperature of the globe".

IN THIS ISSUE • Thought For The Week • Carbon Tax Passes Senate – An Attack On Every Household • Carbon (Currency) Tax And Technocracy Have Long Pedigrees • The August Review's Report And The Green Movement • In Age Of Automation: He Who Does Not Work – Will Not Eat! • Our Carbon Currency Future

What the good Senator did not say is that the idea of a Carbon (Currency) Tax has a long pedigree. Smart Meters need to be studied alongside Carbon (Currency) Tax.

CARBON (CURRENCY) TAX AND TECHNOCRACY HAVE LONG PEDIGREES: Douglas-Ferguson Meeting – Michael Lane, "The River" Triumph of the Past: With no fanfare whatsoever, our Official Archivist, Wally Klinck, one day sent me evidence of a meeting between C. H. Douglas and Charles Ferguson. It is contained in "Publicity and Credit," a lecture given by Douglas at the Women's Advertising Club and published in New Britain, volume 1, number 2, 1933. Douglas says, "A brilliant writer, who I had the pleasure of meeting - some years ago in the United States, Charles Ferguson, was in the habit of saying that credit and publicity were concentric; that whichever you controlled you could ultimately control the other."

Another Douglas article nails down the date of the meeting. The article is titled "This Technocracy" and was published in the New Age in 1933 (FDR had just taken office). "Technocracy" was a descendant of the organization founded by Ferguson and H. L. Gantt in 1916.

Douglas is critical of Technocracy: "While accepting gratefully the data both in regard to production and in regard to finance, which have been provided by this organization, with whose progenitors I was already in touch in 1919 in New York, I think great caution is required in accepting the deductions which appear to be being put forward in their name as to the form of organization which is indicated by this data" (my italics... Michael Lane).

THE AUGUST REVIEW's REPORT AND THE GREEN MOVEMENT: The August Forecast and Review (<http://www.augustforecast.com/2011/06/15/technocracys-endgame-global-smart-grid/>) has done a good job in bringing the history up-to-date: "In 1932, Technocracy, Inc. called for the destruction of price-based economic systems and the creation of an energy-based accounting system that would measure inputs and out-puts of human activity in terms of energy production, distribution and consumption. The requirements for a successful system was co-authored by M. King Hubbert, a young geo-physicist who later developed "Hubbert's Peak Oil Theory" that provided intellectual backing for the modern environmental or "green" movement.

Specifically, Hubbert detailed the requirements for a successful implementation of Technocracy: "Register on a continuous 24 hour-per-day basis the total net conversion of energy. By means of the registration of energy converted and consumed, make possible a balanced load. Provide a continuous inventory of all production and consumption. Provide a specific registration of the type, kind, etc., of all goods and services, where produced and where used. Provide specific registration of the consumption of each individual, plus a record and description of the individual." [Scott, Howard et al, Technocracy Study Source, p. 232]

Of course, the technology to fulfill these requirements did not exist in 1932.

However, it is worth noting that Technocracy Inc.'s leadership was intimately familiar with the early work of International Business Machine's (IBM) computing technology. They clearly envisioned a time in the future where the advancement of the technology would meet the minimum level necessary to implement these requirements.

That day of advanced technology has come and the project is now called Smart Grid. The endgame is to implement a modernized version of historic Technocracy on a national, continental and global basis". It is strongly recommended that the reader carefully review A Smart-Grid: The Implementation of Technocracy and Carbon Currency: A New Beginning for Technocracy? to gain a solid perspective on the historical aspect of Technocracy.

Geoffrey Dobbs wrote of those days in "The Local World" Part 1 & II: While many of the scientists who had worked on 'The Bomb' in ignorance were horrified when they discovered for what purpose they had been used, some of those who were well aware of what they were doing justified it by adopting an 'ideal' of a World at Peace cowering under a World Government armed with a monopoly of nuclear punishment. As the late Colin Hurry put it, in his Song for A.D.A. (Atomic Development Association):

"It's nearly in the bag boys; it's nearly in the bag. The loftier the sentiments, the lovelier the swag. A high ideal has such appeal- One Bomb, One World. One Flag- AND it's nearly in the bag, boys; it's nearly in the bag".

IN AGE OF AUTOMATION: HE WHO DOES NOT WORK - WILL NOT EAT! by Betty Luks:

I wonder if westerners will ever understand the difference between a free enterprise productive system and a communist-monopoly-capitalist productive system? According to the Aljazeera website Chinese communists are warning the West, "Europe ruined by the welfare state". The West is not ruined by 'the welfare state' as such but it is most certainly ruined by the monopoly-debt-money system within which the welfare state was promoted until such time as now, when the wolves in sheep's clothing are ready to pounce on what they see as their weakened foe - and what are the stupid westerners now proposing? That Communist China 'bail them out'!

MPs such as Barnaby Joyce are continually speaking out on behalf of ordinary Australians, but, until the deceitful credit/banking/financial issue is dealt with, at its very core, they are really just 'howling at the moon'.

In an Online Opinion, The Institute of Public Affairs' Tim Wilson recently complained about the lack of policy leadership in Australia. "Leadership is still about "that vision thing." But it's also about being able to prosecute it within your sphere of influence for challenges you can respond to... For those of us enthusiastic about public policy, the Australian debate is rather depressing. Sound bites rule. Substance doesn't seem to matter. Scant regard is paid to outcomes. What's most concerning is that the lack of policy leadership is intertwined with the enormity of the challenges we face... But our political leaders have lost the plot on influential leadership resulting from the international alignment of Australia as a country worth emulating because of survival through the crisis..."

(<http://www.ipa.org.au/news/2516/lack-of-policy-leadership-in-australia>)

You couldn't be more wrong Tim. What you are witnessing is the Fabian leadership's determination to take us further into the New World Order by which – as an example – the Carbon Tax is but one of the means. They are displaying 'leadership' – totalitarian leadership! Let me quote from little Bobby Hawke's speech to The Fabian Society Centenary Dinner, Melbourne, 18th May 1984:

"We all have to face the fact that if our Government is to make really great and worthwhile reforms – reforms that will endure, reforms that will permanently change this nation – then it is not enough simply to obtain a temporary majority at an election, or even successive elections. For our reforms to endure, the whole mood and mind and attitudes of the nation must be permanently changed.

Certainly, we are proceeding to implement the policy on which we were elected and the platform of the Party with a thoroughness, I believe, not excelled by any previous Labor Government in our history. But that specific task must go hand in hand with the more general and deeper, longer range task – the task of establishing, in the mood and mind of this nation, permanent acceptance of the naturalness and inevitability of change and reform, as the authentic Australian way of life. And that, for the first time in our history, is what this Labor Government is attempting."

As for what he had to say about so-called 'conservatives', wouldn't you agree that he was 'so right'! "One of the great paradoxes of Australian politics is that the parties and forces of conservatism and reaction – for all their self-proclaimed loyalty to tradition – have no real continuity and no true sense of continuity. And without a sense of continuity – in the case of Individuals or parties or movements or nations – there can be no true sense of identity. I believe it is precisely because our adversaries lack that sense of their own continuity, and in a deep sense, their own identity, they are obliged to seek it outside themselves – in other institutions and even other nations. And that I believe explains, at least in part, much of their current conduct – their lurches, not only in search of a policy, but in search of an identity".

OUR CARBON CURRENCY FUTURE: As for the Carbon Tax legislation the Labor Party, with the help of the Greens, pushed through, Senator Joyce sums up our future: "Sad day for Australia" It is a very sad day for most Australians that we are about to "move forward" with legislation to redesign our economy on a colourless, odourless gas that quite obviously will put up the price of power and put pressure on real jobs in the real economy.

It is a very sad day when we approve a new broad based consumption tax delivered to every house whether they can afford it or not via the power points above their skirting boards, via the heater that keeps them warm, via the air conditioners that keep them cool, via the power that cooks their food, via the washing machine that cleans their clothes. It is a very sad day when a government seems oblivious to the economic turmoil of the world and belligerently sets the ship of state blindly into precarious waters where the carbon tax we pay will be far in excess of any other scheme in the world, and our own government fails to acknowledge that the vast majority of the world has no such scheme at all. It is a very sad day when the Australian people are taken for granted, deceived with a platitude addendum that "don't worry about it; they are just simple souls, who'll forget about our deceit and get over it." It is the height of conceit to think that other nations such as India or China, which the IMF states that by 2016 will be the largest economy in the world, will somehow be influenced by the legislation of our nation at the expense of their people. (And how did these nations become so powerful and yet the western nations declined? It was planned this way....ed)

32 Billion Dollars away from our (own) debt ceiling: We are more guided by Al Gore than by common sense and the chambers of this building have become fascinated with a highly naïve view that disregards the reality that we are merely 32 billion dollars away from our debt ceiling, the point at which on presentation of the nation's credit card the checkout operator will say "transaction declined – see bank for details".

One would think that we would be doing everything we can at this juncture to make our nation's economy strong; to dispense with wondrous thoughts and replace them with utter pragmatism. We should look to the core requirements of core Australians which is to keep control of their cost of living and, more to the point, do nothing to exacerbate the loss of real jobs that require cheap power as their only competitive advantage over other nations who have cheap labour in abundance.

Yet today will end in a back slapping, hugging, kiss-a-thon that will be the bitterest of pill for those away from Parliament House who make the ultimate payment on this absurd tax".
