Joy to the World the Christ Has Come!

A Blessed and Holy Christ Mass/New Year Season To Our Readers:

“If you read my words” writes St. Paul, “you will have some idea of the depths that I see in the mystery of Christ. This mystery that has now been revealed through the Spirit to his holy apostles and prophets was unknown to any men in past generations; it means that pagans now share the same inheritance, that they are parts of the same body, and that the same promise has been made to them, in Christ Jesus, through the gospel...”
 - St. Paul in Ephesians 3.

CHRIST MASS 2015 AND THE STATE OF THE CHURCH by Betty Luks

It seems most growth of the 21st century Christian Church is in the Third World nations. Western man is not so interested in the present Church’s message. I have pondered on this and note that not only are Church leaders concerned at the drop-off rate of congregations, but have found it hard to keep up with the financial overheads along with the financial demands made upon the remaining older, largely grey haired, congregations.

They also acknowledge the remaining few are hard put in keeping up with the maintenance of church buildings. I wonder, does this mean the physical assets, the buildings and the land, will have to be sold? Reminds me of the time when the landed gentry of England became ‘asset rich’ but ‘cash poor’ because of taxes and death duties, etc. The result was many of the great estates were broken up and sold off.

Church leaders are coming up with all sorts of ‘mission programmes’ to equip the remaining faithful to go out and become ‘fishers of men’. Yes, gentle Christian reader I am aware our Lord gave us such instructions – but I am looking at the present time and I don’t see too many ‘on fire’ youthful Christians who are going to take up the challenge. I do see quite a number of ‘oldies’ who have remained faithful to the Church but the Life Force within them is becoming weaker by the day.

So, how does one begin to write on the things of the spirit in an inspiring and uplifting Christ Mass message? We live in such a materialistic age it is hard to find the right words that speak of the spirit. So, I thought I would begin by giving a dictionary definition of the word.

Spirit: Origin Middle English: from Anglo-Norman French, from Latin spiritus ‘breath, spirit’, from spirare ‘breathe’. Noun: spirit; plural noun: spirits

1. the non-physical part of a person which is the seat of emotions and character; the soul.
"we seek a harmony between body and spirit".
2. the non-physical part of a person regarded as their true self and as capable of surviving physical death or separation.

I once read that this Life Force, this Organic Life, is not the product of matter alone but is “the constant expression of spirit as life and form in the medium of matter”. For me, that concept is depicted in, and is in harmony with Jesus’ parable of the Lilies of the Field, Matthew 6:27-28:

"Consider the wild lilies, how they grow: they neither toil nor spin; but I tell you, not even Solomon in all his glory clothed himself like one of these. But if God so clothes the grass in the field, which is alive today and tomorrow is thrown into the furnace, how much more will He clothe you? You men of little faith!... "

To consider something means to study, to observe carefully. In relation to the parable, God does not 'clothe' the wild lilies as would humans 'clothe' their bodies when they put on their garments, He 'clothes' them by their life and form in the medium of matter, and, in this case, it is the example of the grass in the field which is alive today and tomorrow ends up in the furnace. For me, the parable 'paints a word-picture' of God continually at work in His creation – and can be seen by those who have 'eyes' to see.

As for those who fear 'the destruction of Christianity' ask yourselves the question:

Was C.H. Douglas not right when he wrote in "The Realistic Position of the Church of England": "It must be insisted that Christianity is either something inherent in the very warp and woof of the Universe, or it is just a set of interesting opinions, largely discredited, and thus doubtfully on a par with many other sets of opinions, and having neither more nor less claim to consideration..."

How can that which is in the very warp and woof of the Universe be destroyed? We were told: "Heaven and earth will pass away – but My words will never pass away". "Why not?" you may ask. Isn't it because His words are in the very warp and woof of the Universe? (Found here.... <http://alor.org/Library/Douglas%20CH%20-%20Realistic%20Position%20of%20the%20Church%20of%20England.htm>)

How does Western man find his way back again to that fork in the road where he took a wrong turning? Wallace Klinck has a suggestion:

Your First Christ Mass Card

Concerned at the now regular attacks on Christianity and Christians in general, a correspondent asked Canadian Wallace Klinck was he surprised at what was happening: "... And all of this happened in such a short span of a few decades without a murmur, without a peep from those that were adversely affected by all this political correctness and sheer nonsense coupled with a lot of insanity".

To which Wallace responded: "Not in the least, (am I surprised) because of a clergy who have transcendentalized the Christian message, identifying it as remote rather than imminent, failing thereby to act as a guide for its incarnation in the organic affairs of man—and so its relevance failed to be obvious and Faith was destroyed. Add to that the corrosive influence of overt and covert enemies of that message, and the policies which would automatically accompany it, and we have the mess we are in. After all, nature abhors a vacuum and if the principles enunciated by Jesus are discarded they will be replaced and incarnated by something else. That is exactly what has happened and the blindness and obstinacy of many of those professing, but not living or comprehending the Faith, must share in the responsibility for the negative turn of events which has occurred. To raille against evil is futile if we do not proclaim and practice that which is good".

In "The Philosophy of Plotinus" vol. ii, p. 202 W.R. Inge 1860-1954 wrote:

"Our struggle to reach Him is at the same time a struggle for self-liberation. We lose our Soul in order to find it again in God. There is no barrier between the human and Divine natures. The human Soul has only to strip itself of those outer integuments which are no part of its true nature, in order to expand freely by means of the 'organic filaments' which unite it with all spiritual being. This expansion is at the same time an intensifying of life, an 'awakening' from the dream of sensuous existence. Our environment, which we make while it makes us, changes all the time. Our perception becomes spiritual intuition; the air we breathe becomes the atmosphere of eternity, not of time. The problem of immortality is changed for us in such a way that it ceases to be a vague and chimerical hope and becomes an experience. – sentimus et experimur nos etemos esse, as Spinoza says."

Note: W.R. Inge was an English author, Anglican priest, professor of divinity at Cambridge, and Dean of St Paul's Cathedral, England.

Gospel of John 3:

..."That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. Do not be amazed that I said to you, 'You must be born again.' The wind blows where it wishes and you hear the sound of it, but do not know where it comes from and where it is going; so is everyone who is born of the Spirit."....

TAX FREEDOM DAY - CANADA

Now that we have a Liberal government again in Ottawa, it is important to remember (or to learn for the first time) that the greater portion of what we pay in taxation is entirely unnecessary, and, insofar as it transfers purchasing power from the common man to private banks (since we pay many billions of dollars in interest on public debts - money created out of nothing by the private banking system), it is nothing less than highway robbery.

As usual, the transfer of such large amounts of money to the state is justified under the guise of "helping the poor" when what it actually serves to do is to: a) keep the bulk of the population proletarianized, that is, dependent on continual (and usually pointless/meaningless) "employment" and consumer debt in order to make ends meet, and to b) simultaneously enrich the state's creditors at our expense. - M. Oliver Heydorn ***

A FAST-TRACK EVOLUTIONARY PROCESS ? Adapting to -70°C in Siberia: A tale of Yakutian horses

From an evolutionary perspective it happened almost overnight. In less than 800 years Yakutian horses adapted to the extremely cold temperatures found in the environments of eastern Siberia. The adaptive process involved changes in the expression of a plethora of genes, including some also selected in human Siberian groups and the extinct woolly mammoth.

In a new scientific study, the comparison of the complete genomes of nine living and two ancient Yakutian horses from Far-East Siberia with a large genome panel of 27 domesticated horses reveals that the current population of Yakutian horses was founded following the migration of the Yakut people into the region in the 13-15th century AD. Yakutian horses, thus, developed their striking adaptations to the extreme cold climate present in the region in less than 800 years. This is one of the fastest examples of adaptation within mammals. The findings are reported in the PNAS early edition from November 23rd by an international team of researchers led by Dr. Ludovic Orlando from the Centre for GeoGenetics at the Natural History Museum of Denmark, University of Copenhagen.

A horse-centered lifestyle

Horses have been essential to the survival and development of the Yakut people, who migrated into the Far-East Siberia in the 13-15th century AD, probably from Mongolia. There, Yakut people developed an economy almost entirely based on horses. Horses were indeed the key for communication and keeping population contact within a territory slightly larger than Argentina, and with 40% of its surface area situated north of the Arctic Circle. Horse meat and hide have also been revealed as crucial for surviving extremely cold winters, with temperatures occasionally dropping below -70°C.

Horses have been present in Yakutia for a long time as 30,000 year-old Late Pleistocene fossils from the region show. Yet, Dr. Ludovic Orlando and his team now reveal that ancient horses of this region were not the ancestors of the present-day Yakutian horses.

A divergence as deep as the origin of modern humans

The genome sequence obtained from the remains of a 5,200 year-old horse from Yakutia appears within the diversity of a now-extinct population of wild horses that the team discovered last year in Late Pleistocene fossils from the Taymir peninsula, Central Siberia. This new finding extends by thousands of kilometers eastwards the geographical range of this divergent horse population, which became separated from the lineage leading to modern horses some 150,000 years ago. It also extends its temporal range up to 5,200 years ago, a time when woolly mammoths also became extinct. Dr. Ludovic Orlando says: "This population did not appear on any radar until we sequenced the genomes of some of its members. With 150,000 years of divergence with the lineage leading to modern horses, this makes the roots of this population as deep as the origins of our human species."

Interestingly, the new genome analyses show that the horses that Yakut people now ride and probably rode all along their history (as shown by the genome of a 200 year-old horse), are not related with this now-extinct horse lineage, but rather with the domesticated horses from Mongolia. Dr. Ludovic Orlando says:

"We know now that the extinct population of wild horses survived in Yakutia until 5,200 years ago. Thus it extended from the Taymir peninsula to Yakutia, and probably all across the entire Holarctic region. In Yakutia, it may have become extinct prior to the arrival of Yakut people and their horses. Judging from the genome data, modern Yakutian horses are no closer to the extinct population than is any other domesticated horse."

The new genome analyses show that the founders of the modern Yakutian horse population probably entered into the region with Yakut horse-riders in the 13-15th Century AD. Dr. Ludovic Orlando further adds:

"This is truly amazing as it implies that all traits now seen in Yakutian horses are the product of very fast adaptive processes, taking place in about 800 years.

GARY BURNS APPEALS DECISION

Anti-free speech campaigner and militant homosexual activist, Gary Burns, has appealed the decision handed down by the New South Wales Civil and Administrative Tribunal dismissing his complaints against Bernard Gaynor.

His appeal was lodged with the support of a large legal firm in New South Wales a few days ago. A hearing has now been set for 1 April 2016 and further complaints have also been lodged against Bernard Gaynor.

There can be no doubt that it is now part of a carefully orchestrated political campaign to prevent Bernard Gaynor from standing for parliament with the Australian Liberty Alliance. It is also part of a strategy to allow anti-free speech laws in one state to be used against those living in another.

Gary Burns has also made it clear that he is doing so in support of the Greens. This should come as no surprise: the Greens know that if the Australian Liberty Alliance wins Senate seats at the next election that it will come at their expense.

It also comes as a Greens candidate in Tasmania, Martine Delaney has launched an anti-discrimination complaint against Archbishop of Hobart, Julian Porteus, in an attempt to silence debate on proposed changes to marriage laws.

There is a tremendous battle for freedom of thought and our future underway in Australia.

WHY DID TURKEY SHOOT DOWN A RUSSIAN AIR FORCE JET?

Turkey is so militarily inferior to Russia that it is unlikely Turkey would commit an act of war against Russia without encouragement from Washington. We might think that Turkey would feel shielded by NATO, but it is doubtful that many European members of NATO would risk nuclear annihilation by going to war with Russia in order to save Turkey from the consequences of such a reckless and irresponsible act as shooting down a Russian military aircraft and lying about it. Turkey has issued no apology and no believable explanation. Unless Erdogan has lost his mind, Washington is behind the shootdown, and the reason is Washington's desperation to decode the new Russian technology that gives Russian forces total control over a battlefield, whether on land, sea, or air.

When the Russians deployed their forces to Syria they also deployed some new stealth technology. So far as I know they've only used this technology in Syria twice, once during their first sortie and one other time

FEDERAL COURT SETS TERMINATION ASIDE

The Federal Court has today ruled that the Chief of Defence Force's decision to terminate Bernard Gaynor's appointment in the Australian Defence Force be set aside.

The full judgement is about 115 pages long.

This victory is one that we should celebrate. It will benefit all Australians.

The Australian Defence Force's decision to participate in homosexual political activism at the Mardi Gras is now in jeopardy. Our military should not be involved in domestic political activity.

It also means that the Australian Defence Force will need to 'rethink' its equity, diversity and tolerance programs that promote Islamic beliefs above those of our Western Christian civilisation.

While the decision is certainly welcome, you must realise the battle is far from over.

We are involved in a war that wants to destroy Western Christian Civilisation. Denying freedom to publicly speak your thoughts, especially if it differs from the state enforced point of view, is a tyranny.

The Battle Continues.

when some Israeli Air Force jets entered what they knew was Russian operational airspace. As noted, the first use of this stealth technology was during the first Russian sortie. In accordance with protocols agreed to beforehand with Israel and the US, the Russians informed the US of their intent to launch a sortie. They did so an hour prior to the launch. When they did they also employed a new stealth technology. The technology effectively blinded both the US and Israel. None of the radars worked and most, if not all, satellite coverage was lost or compromised as well.

But there's more.

About a week after Putin's UN General Assembly address the Israelis launched a sortie into Syria which flew into airspace that was under Russian operational control. Russian air controllers warned the Israelis that they had violated Russian controlled airspace. When the Israelis ignored the Russian air controllers, the stealth technology was employed a second time.

(continued from previous page) The Israeli aircraft are equipped with two radars, one for fire acquisition and the other for fire control. Both are advanced and employ frequency-skipping technology to avoid being jammed. Both radars were effectively jammed. These aircraft have multiple telemetry data-links to their base. These were shut down. The only communications channel left was the high-frequency AM band normally used by civilian air traffic controllers.

After the stealth technology was turned on and it was clear to the Russians that the Israelis knew they had been shut down, the Russian air traffic controllers used this AM band to tell the Israelis to scram. The Israelis complied.

PORT OF DARWIN AND THE 'CHINESE DREAM'

Port of Darwin: This is about more than China's economic interest: There must be great security concerns about the Darwin port deal and of our almost unquestioned acceptance of Chinese state-linked investment. (Department of Defence)

The decision to offer a century-long lease over the Port of Darwin to a Chinese company feeds into the PRC's global strategic aims. Australia ignores this consideration at its peril, writes Geoff Wade.

The national and indeed international reactions to the Northern Territory Government's decision to offer a century-long lease over the port of Darwin to Chinese company Landbridge can be divided essentially into two camps.

The dichotomy has on one side those, such as the Trade Minister Andrew Robb and NT Chief Minister Adam Giles, who simply portray the Darwin deal as important for the economic development of northern Australia.

Those of the other side, including both Australian critics and, sotto voce, the Americans, see the deal as a more complex element in growing the People's Republic of China's (PRC) influence in Australia, which is increasingly constituting a threat to the country's independence per se and to Western interests in the South Pacific and globally.

Understanding the significance of this deal requires a much wider lens and broader context than those provided by perceived economic self-interest. China's national revival and its global economic and strategic extension over the decades since Deng Xiaoping, which Xi Jinping has rebranded as the "Chinese Dream", provide a much clearer schema in which to situate the Darwin deal.

The "Chinese Dream" involves the reassertion of the economic and political primacy that China claims it has enjoyed over neighbours for millennia. This agenda is now being pursued globally but most intensely in South-East Asia and Australia/New Zealand.

Whatever this technology is, it's a game changer and I'm certain that breaking this technology has been given an extremely high priority.

So why did Turkey shoot down the Russian jet?

I suspect somebody wants the Russians to start using this stealth technology more often, often enough for its weaknesses to be exposed. Shooting down that Russian jet might just get the Russians motivated to do that. If I'm correct I bet every Raven and ELINT specialist in the business has been deployed to that theater of operations to hack this one! One can only imagine how many resources are being amassed.

G'day China

It's our biggest trading partner and the source of our greatest strategic anxiety. But do we really understand the Middle Kingdom? G'day China brings you different perspectives on China.

Throughout the region, China is attempting to establish economic connectors through the 21st Century Maritime Silk Route and the Silk Road Economic Belt, the $100 billion Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank, the $40 billion Silk Road fund, the internationalisation of the renminbi, the shifting of its industrial production offshore and the various free trade agreements it has entered into. Hundreds of billions of dollars in Chinese funds are being invested abroad as the PRC economy and national power expand. Infrastructural investment and control over that infrastructure are key in extending Chinese power across the region.

A vast range of PRC state-owned (and state-linked) enterprises are busy developing their control over infrastructure throughout South-East Asia - funding ports, power generators, energy transmission networks, highways, dams, railways and airports.

China already completely dominates the infrastructure sphere and thus the economies of Laos and Cambodia, and Malaysia is swiftly following into that camp. This economic control is a precursor and necessary condition for strategic domination of the region.

Ports are extremely important in this pursuit of regional domination. China has been making great efforts to develop and control Sri Lanka's Hambantota Port and Pakistan's Gwadar Port to the chagrin of India and is pushing to develop the port of Djibouti in Africa. Within Bangladesh a Chinese "special economic zone" and port are being developed in Anwara, Chittagong. In Myanmar, China has invested in a deep-sea port on Madaay Island at Kyaukphyu, to facilitate a $2.5 billion pipeline transporting oil and gas to China's Yunnan province. (continued on next page)

(continued from previous page) In other parts of South-East Asia, China is also seeking to dominate ports as well as shipping between ports, with Laem Chabang in Thailand, Sihanoukville in Cambodia, Batam in Indonesia and Kuala Tanjung in Northern Sumatra marked for key development. Most recently a "port alliance" has been announced between 10 Chinese ports and five Malaysian ports. The "sister port" tie ups with Kuantan, Melaka, Kedah and Port Klang in Malaysia are readying further nodes in China's network.

China's 21st Century Maritime Silk Road

Australia is the natural extension of this agenda and Darwin is intended to be a crucial link in China's new 21st Century Maritime Silk Road. The Darwin deal will provide Chinese shipping and naval vessels with facilitated access to Australia, the Indian Ocean and the South Pacific, as well as to Indonesia and PNG over the coming century.

Chinese control of the port of Darwin marks just the beginning - the so-called "dragonhead" - of PRC economic domination of northern Australia. The aggressive PRC pursuit of Australian infrastructure in all spheres from ports to power networks to railways, clearly reflecting the strategic imperatives of the Chinese state, is matched in degree only by the almost parodic offering to the PRC's National Development and Reform Commission of lists of key infrastructure projects in which they might like to invest and subsequently control.

While the achievement of PRC economic primacy and control in Australia will be a gradual process, Northern Australia will be essential in the exercise and ChAFTA will be the merciless facilitator. This economic domination will subsequently and inevitably translate into PRC strategic influence over the country. The ultimate goal will be the severing of the US-Australia alliance, an end long pursued by China, as part of the PRC's intended strategic domination of the Western Pacific.

NOTCH IN SUN-EARTH RELATIONSHIP 'DOG THAT DIDN'T BARK!'

Source: Joanne Nova's website: The notch in the Sun-Earth relationship is the dog that didn't bark — the clue that was there all along, telling us something about the way the Sun influences Earth's climate. There is a flicker of extra energy coming in at the peak of every solar cycle — roughly every 11 years. It's only a small peak, but there is no warming on Earth at all — it's like the energy that vanished.

A good skeptic would be saying but, the increase in energy is so small, how could we find it among the noise? And the answer is that Fourier maths is so good at doing this that it is used every day to find the GPS signals which (as David – Dr. David Evans) are so much smaller than the noise that they are much harder to find than this signal from the Sun. Thousands of engineers know about and use Fourier maths and notch filters, but due to a strange one-sided

Those who believe that Chinese economic investment abroad is unconnected with PRC strategic aspirations need only look at the sorts of major infrastructure investments that Chinese firms have made in Australia - China Merchants' century-long lease of the port of Newcastle (proximate to RAAF Base Williamstown), Landbridge's century-long lease of the port of Darwin (proximate to RAAF Base Darwin, HMAS Coonawarra and to Larrakeyah Barracks), the new links between Qinzhou and the port of Townsville (proximate to RAAF Base Townsville), and a China-connected firm buying the plot of land next to ASIO headquarters in Canberra.

In addition, we have SOE State Grid controlling Australian energy networks and hoping to gain control of NSW electricity network assets which also carry top-secret ADF communications. Next on the PRC acquisition list will likely be the port of Fremantle (proximate to RAAF Base Pearce and HMAS Stirling). China's accessing of CYBINT, SIGINT and HUMINT intelligence through these new access points would present ongoing security concerns for Australia.

Every single investment by PRC state-linked companies has a strategic significance and we ignore this at our peril. For all of these reasons there must be great security concerns about the Darwin deal and of our almost unquestioned acceptance of PRC state-linked investment.

The energy expended in denouncing critics of the Darwin deal as xenophobes might be better utilised in trying to understand the global agenda of the autocratic state that is the PRC and Australia's intended role within this. bureaucratic funding model, none of those thousands of experts have applied that knowledge, which is so well adapted to feedback systems to the Sun Earth energy flows. David has used an input-output "black box" method to find the empirical transfer function and discover the notch. Viva the independent scientist, supported only by independent donations — at a fraction of the cost of the billion dollar models, David Evans has done something in three years which none of the bureaucrat-driven golden icons have managed in thirty years.

Is the notch real? It shows up independently in different eras and different datasets (see fig 2). What does it mean? Something is occurring which is "tuned" to the solar cycles to change the way the Earth reacts to incoming solar radiation just as that radiation peaks. (continued on next page)

The mechanism for this must originate on the Sun, because the timing is too accurate, and that unknown mechanism obviously has an influence on Earth's temperature (maybe through clouds). Obviously to build a full climate model we need to understand that. Notch filters are used in electronics to filter out "hum". Notch filters usually do not involve a delay, but they could, which alerted us to the possibility of a delay. This eventually led to the discovery of an 11-year (or half solar cycle) delay, originating on the Sun, between the solar peaks in sunlight and the factor that neutralizes their effect. David discusses a few possible mechanisms in a later post.

NATO'S "FRIEND": THE ISLAMIC STATE by Peter Ewer

Naffed Ahmed has published an insightful article at Medium.com, In surge Intelligence, "NATO is harbouring the Islamic State". Its starting point is France, now, which in a "state of emergency" can block websites, put people under house arrest without trial, search homes without a warrant and prevent suspects freedom of association. Hollande wants to "pursue amendments to the Constitution that would permanently enshrine the state of emergency into French politics", along, in the short-term with new anti-terror legislation.

Ahmed says that "The ripple effect from the attacks in terms of impact on Western societies is likely to be permanent. In much the same way that 9/11 saw the birth of a new era of perpetual war in the Muslim world, the 13/11 Paris attacks are already giving rise to a brave new phase in that the perpetual war: a new age of Constant Vigilance, in which citizens are vital accessories to the police state, enacted in the name of defending a democracy eroded by the very act of defending it through Constant Vigilance".

Ahmed then says that what polite society is not talking about is that the Syrian passports found near the bodies of two of the Paris attackers were fake and probably forged in Turkey. The Turkish daily Meydan has reported that over 100,000 fake Turkish passports have been given to ISIS.

Further, Sky News Arabia reported that the Turkish government was certifying passports of foreign militants who were crossing the Turkey-Syrian border to join ISIS and having the official exit stamp of Turkey's border control meant that the Turkish authorities knew that the militants were ISIS.

TO THE EDITOR

TO THE AGE Ian Robinson's claim (28/11) that 'there is no compelling reason (logical or evidential)' for anyone to claim knowledge of God can be contested. Firstly there is the 'argument from design': it is preposterous to argue that all the elaborate and exquisite designs of Mother Nature 'just happened.' That leads on to the second argument against Robinson. Human reason can neither fathom a universe without beginning nor the way in which the universe began. There is a mystery which logic cannot penetrate. The third argument against Robinson is the testimony of mystics from within all the great sacred traditions, backed up by metaphysical explanation by men of the calibre of Plato, Aquinas and Guenon. Nigel Jackson, Belgrave, VIC

He finds evidence suggesting that that this indirect effect of the Sun is ~14 times more powerful at driving changes in our climate than the influence of variations in direct solar heating.

Something about the Sun, some force, is changing conditions on Earth in a way that conventional climate models don't understand. They are "plugging the gap" with CO2 in the last 50 years, but can't possibly work until they understand this missing key.

In this post we start the hunt.

Along with this The Guardian has reported that a senior Western official believes on the basis of intelligence gathered from the field that "direct dealings between Turkish officials and ranking ISIS members are now 'undeniable'". Turkey was supporting ISIS and other terrorist groups such as Al-Qaeda.

In January, authenticated official documents of the Turkish military were leaked online, showing that Turkey's intelligence services had been caught in Adana by military officers transporting missiles, mortars and anti-aircraft ammunition via truck "to the Al-Qaeda terrorists organisation in Syria".

Apparently Turkish intelligence has been smuggling NATO weapons to Syrian jihadist organisations since 2011.

Thus ISIS is Western sponsored.

Turkey could collapse ISIS by collapsing these supply lines running through it, but it does not, and nor does the West call on Turkey to do this. They are left, so to speak, to be free range and to do as they please.

This line of argument lends weight to the "conspiracy" view of the ISIS war, namely that the West does not seriously want to destroy ISIS because it allows a continuation of the police state and an erosion of liberties.

WHO'S AFRAID OF THE BIG BAD VACCINE? I AM.

by Mrs Vera West

Although "No Jab, No Pay" is now law, the vaccine safety issue remains. Natural News.com, November 20, 2015 reports on "horrendous adverse effects" of the HPV vaccine. The case involves a woman who is suing the Irish government alleging that her daughter developed severe flu-like symptoms within 24 hours of her first Gardasil shot. Following the second shot the daughter suffered from severe nausea, fatigue leading to weight loss and muscle wasting. She was then hospitalised with bilateral pneumonia. She is presently disabled, needing permanent care. Natural News comments on the law suit claims that there are similar health problems reported with other girls.

The article says that the vaccine may not even work: "Although many governments recommend that girls as young as 9 receive the Gardasil vaccine, there are in fact no tests of the drug's effectiveness on girls under age 15. And according to a 2009 article in the New England Journal of Medicine, the vaccines have not yet been proved effective against HPV in the long-term, and have never been shown to actually reduce cancer rates. It is unknown if they might produce cancer-related changes in immune function".

An article at Green Med Info.com fabric 24, 2015, reports that some leading world experts in autoimmune disease believe that vaccines can "turn our immune system against us". The article says that diseases such as arthritis, diabetes, lupus, Guillain-Barre syndrome, and many more, can follow vaccinations. The toxic metal aluminium, present in many vaccines is thought to be one factor triggering such autoimmune diseases. People who have a history of allergic reactions may be at an increased risk.

Added together these papers indicate that vaccinations are not risk-free and some people can have fatal adverse reactions, or crippling ones. In such risk situations it is a fundamental principle of medical ethics - the principle of autonomy - that people should have an uncoerced choice about whether they vaccinate or not. "No Jab, No Pay" has eliminated that and thus is in violation of fundamental ethical principles, infringing human rights. There is the in-road for a High Court challenge, and even a trip to the, shock, horror, United Nations! ***

CORRECTION - BEATA'S GINGERBREAD RECIPE

Dear Editor,

Sorry to tell a sad tale; we tried Beata's gingerbread recipe and only got to the stage of baking them and the house burnt down when we got the wood stove up to 1800 degrees C. So we have joined uncle Len in the shed. Will try again when we get a good enough stove!!!!!!!!!!

Regards David Smith

AMAZON AND FREEDOM OF THOUGHT

by Ian Wilson LL.B.

Amazon's dropping of a book that it had previously approved, and then decided was politically inappropriate marks a turning point. The book is an edited volume by distinguished philosopher Jim Fetzer, Nobody Died at Sandy Hook, and the book makes the case that this was a staged massacre.

The significance of this is that it, if true, shows that Big Government is willing to either kill and/or stage events to achieve a political goal. The goal in this case was, it is alleged, Obama's desire to disarm Americans, as has been done to Australians.

An article at Natural News.com, November 25, 2015 by J.D.Heyes, sums it all up: "Obama Administration says America's Legal Gun Owners are a Threat, but ISIS is No Threat at All".

The dropping of Nobody Died at Sandy Hook, has led to the book now becoming available for a free download at Natural News.com. Probably more people than before will read the book and ask why its contents were censored. What is there to hide? It seems that with the Internet, the genie is now out of the bottle and try as they may, the Establishment is going to have a hard time constraining the Truth. ***
