THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: “This will be a thoroughly Liberal government. It will be a thoroughly Liberal government committed to freedom, the individual and the market:

- - Malcolm Turnbull, Australian Prime Minister, September 14, 2015.

THE RULES OF THE UNIVERSE TRANSCEND HUMAN THINKING

Do watch Eric Butler’s presentation on “Philosophy and the Search for Truth”

(<http://alor.org/MOV/Philosophy%20and%20Search%20for%20Truth.mov>)

in which he deals with the small ‘l’ liberal’s philosophy and concepts. He brings before us the importance of ‘absolutes’ - a word the mainstream has not heard, nor thought about, for many a year. He also touches on Lenin’s ‘useful idiots’ - as does Malcolm Muggeridge in his essay “The Great Liberal Death Wish” (<http://alor.org/Library/Muggeridge%20M%20-%20Great%20Liberal%20Death%20Wish.htm>).

As Eric notes: The plight of the world today is the result of the liberal mind and which is the forerunner of the communist mind. And further, while a civilisation is hundreds of years in the making it can be destroyed in quite a short time – as the European peoples are witnessing - daily!

NEW PM – SAME POLICIES AND AGENDA

Not unexpectedly the mainstream media are all atwitter because Tony Abbott has fallen to the knives of his party mates - and Malcolm Turnbull is the new prime minister. Please note Turnbull, former merchant banker and declared republican believer, was elected by a very small group within his party, not by the Australian people. In fact, he was elected by the voters of a particular Sydney electorate to represent their interests.

According to the Commonwealth Constitution, Australians are to elect parliamentary representatives to represent their interests – or that is what was once understood! The reality is somewhat different.

Be that as it may, our longest-serving Queen, our Constitutional Monarch, is celebrating with us her long reign. God bless and keep her.

KINGSHIP OR REPUBLIC? THE FIGHT IS ON...

So writes Philip Benwell of the Australian Monarchist League with the announcement that Malcolm Turnbull has been voted in by his political party as the prime minister.

Mr. Benwell writes:

Whilst the (Australian Monarchist) League has many members, young and old, we desperately need more people to join up as financial members and put their shoulder to the wheel. We need to take the fight right up to the battlefield and we need to get our message across to the people. We cannot do this without the help of all those who believe in the freedoms we enjoy under the Crown. Therefore, please either join or contribute.

In March, 1917, Billy Hughes, then prime minister spoke at a Win the War campaign, at Bendigo. His words are as relevant today as they were nearly a hundred years ago: “Since I last stood here urging you and all my fellow citizens to lay aside their differences in order that Australia might more efficiently do her part in this great war, abundant proof has been afforded to all, save the willfully blind, that there is among us a section upon whose ears such appeals fall like seed upon stony ground.

Men are to be judged not only by words but by conduct: and there is but one way by which an Australian who loves his country can prove his patriotism in the great hour, when his country and all that free men value are in deadly peril, and that is by putting aside all differences of party, class, or creed, and, standing side by side with his fellow citizens, doing all within his power to overcome the enemy."

Let us take this Warrior's words to heart. Please stand side-by-side with us.

- - Yours sincerely, Philip Benwell, Australian Monarchist League

THE WAY WE LIVE NOW by Betty Luks

What caught my eye in Malcolm Turnbull's statement is the underlying message I believe he sent to those he knows he must please. He made three points that I question.

The Liberals were now -

Committed to freedom: But not necessarily freedoms such as 'to worship; to think; to speak; to choose, to be ambitious, to be independent; to acquire skill; to seek and earn reward'??

Committed to the individual: But not necessarily within the basic, traditional, family unit?

Committed to the market: "The market"? read Monopoly. A 'market' not necessarily resulting from free and competitive enterprise?*

ON THE MOVE - Europe's Current Refugee Crisis Predicted

It was in The Unz Review that I found this June, 2005 article by Israel Shamir. In the midst of all the troubles round us, it was a delight to read his word-picture of peoples and their village lives – although the tragedies are heartbreaking:

"In the early autumn, when the pomegranates ripen, I embark for the ruins of the destroyed Palestinian village of Saffurie. The native city of Mary's mother, it still guards the Crusader church of St Anne. This old village was an important city some two thousand years ago, when, under name of Sepphoris, it refused to join the Jewish Zealots, and remained loyal to the Empire.

It provided a comfortable home to the man who reinvented Judaism after its collapse, Rabbi Judah the Prince, and for many Christian sages and Roman nobles. It survived all vagaries of time, until in 1948 it was stormed by the Israeli army and destroyed. Its villagers became refugees and went to refugee camps

Small 'l' liberalism:

"Liberalism is the ideology of Western suicide," wrote James Burnham in his 1964 "Suicide of the West." Burnham predicted that the mindless magnanimity of liberals, who subordinate the interests of their own people and nations to utopian and altruistic impulses, would bring about an end to Western civilization.

Was he wrong? Consider what is happening in Europe.

Serbia, Hungary and Slovakia, small nations sensing they will be swamped by asylum seekers from the Muslim world, are trying to seal their borders and secure their homelands. Their instinct for survival, their awareness of lifeboat ethics, is acute. Yet they are being condemned for trying to save themselves. "Islam's Conquest of Europe" by Patrick J. Buchanan or to nearby Nazareth. The groves of the dead village remain hidden in the valleys, bringing full, off-round, heavy and bursting pomegranates each year, but there is nobody left to pick the fruit.

Ref: <http://www.creators.com/conservative/pat-buchanan/islams-conquest-of-europe.html>

People from the Jewish settlement built next to the ruins are indifferent to the fate of pomegranates and of the peasants who planted them. In this kingdom of desolation amid bountiful red-fruit-laden trees, there is also a carefully laid Roman floor mosaic sometimes called the Mona Lisa of Galilee.

Its thousands of small stones of various shades form a proud elongated face with a straight nose, high hairdo and full lips and frame it with acanthus leaves. This mosaic always reminds me of our beautiful world, this delightful mosaic of small towns, green meadows, civilised megapolises, castles and cottages, rivers and streams, churches and mosques. Each piece of the mosaic is fine, precious and perfect.

I have seen lots of them and I love them all: the rocky, low-lying islands in the lucid and transparent Baltic where yellowhaired kids wave from the pier to passing boats; La France Profonde of Conque, a tiny hamlet in the Massif Central on the old pilgrim road to St Jacques, where a narrow chatty river skirts the hill, the slated roofs, and streets paved a thousand years ago; domes of Russian churches in the high grass on Oka River, where girls in flowery shawls listen to a melody; pretty voices of Suzhou girls reverberate in the temple courtyard among canals criss-crossing South China; baroque houses of Trinidad tobacco factors and the proud bearing of Cubans dancing on its streets; the superb bodies of tattooed Masai around a bonfire at Serengeti savanna. This world is lovely and its folks are very good.

This religion has been (was...ed) rejected by Christians. Love of Mammon is Avarice, one of the Mortal Sins; it was condemned by Christians and Muslims alike. But it did not vanish completely.

Two thousand years later, a grandson of the Trier Rabbi, Karl Marx, came to a revolutionary conclusion: the faith of Mammon, this 'week-day religion of Jews', in his words, became the real religion of the American elites. Marx approvingly quoted a Colonel Hamilton: "Mammon is Yankee's idol; they worship it not only with their lips, but with all strength of their body and soul. In their eyes, the earth is but a stock exchange, and they are convinced that they do not have other purpose on earth but to become richer than their neighbours". Marx concluded, "The practical domination of the Jewish spirit over the Christian world has achieved in North America its unambiguous, complete expression". This victorious Jewish spirit, for Marx, was based on 'greed and egoism, its confession was business, it's god - Money'.

Third World War

This beautiful and intricate set-up is threatened by the forthcoming hostilities, as this Third World War is not only against the Third World. This war started even before the first bomb fell on the rocky ground of Afghanistan. A million new refugees are on the road, creating great commotion and unsettling Asia. Without a doubt, sooner or later the refugee wave will hit Europe.

Hundreds of thousands of refugees already are on the move towards Europe and Russia. One can understand them: as the US bombed their homes, the defenceless population has no choice but to flee the target areas. No border controls will be able to withstand their hectic push. Pakistan will be first, but not last. As the US and Britain plan to turn their Crusade into a long war 'against terror', there will be more and more refugees, until, eventually, the fragile social fabric of Europe will crumble and collapse. Europe will be overrun, as was Roman Empire in its day, and it will face a stark choice: establish a system of apartheid and discrimination, or lose its identity...

Europe is too egalitarian: in New York, I saw a lift boy, an immigrant from devastated Panama, who actually lives in the elevator. You would not find such things in Europe, as Europe is not yet Mammonized. The new ruling elites do not care much for Christ or Muhammad, it is true, but they have a lot of religious feeling towards another old Deity, Mammon. This ancient god of greed was much loved by the Pharisees, some two millennia back, as we learn from the Gospel. Jesus told them: you cannot serve both God and Mammon. But Pharisees sneered at him, because they loved money...

These words of Karl Marx had a deep spiritual meaning overlooked by the Marxists. Until our days, the religious features of the Creed of Greed were not expressed. There were capitalists who thought of their own interest and promoted the common good, as Adam Smith preached. Things changed with advent of Neo-Liberalism. Milton Friedman manifested outing of Mammonites, adepts of the new/old faith. They differ from ordinary greedy folks, as they elevate Greed to the level of the jealous God that does not suffer other gods.

The traditional wealthy men would not dream of destroying their society. They cared about their land and community. They wanted to be the first among their own kind. They still considered themselves 'shepherds of men'. It is true that shepherds eat sheep, but they would not sell the whole lot to the butcher just because the price is right. The Mammonites see such consideration as a betrayal of Mammon.

As Robert McChesney wrote in his Introduction to Noam Chomsky's "Profit over People": 'They demand a religious faith in the infallibility of the unregulated market', in other words, a faith of egoism and greed unlimited. They are devoid of compassion to the people they live amongst, they do not see the local people as 'their own kind'. If they could eliminate local folk and supplant them with poor immigrants to optimise their profits, they would do it, as their brothers did in Palestine.

The Mammonites do not give a damn for the people of America, but use them as their tool to achieve world domination.

(continued from previous page) Their ideal picture of the world is archaic, or futuristic: they dream of a world of slaves and masters. In order to achieve it, the Mammonites strive to destroy the cohesion of social and national units. As long as people stay on their land, speak their tongue, live among their own kith and kin, drink water of their rivers, worship in their churches and mosques, they can not be enslaved. But if their lands are flooded by masses of refugees, their social structure will collapse. They will lose their great advantage, the feeling of belonging together, the feeling of brotherhood, and they will become an easy prey for Mammonites...

Afghanis are wonderful folk, sturdy, independent, self-reliant. They are informed by their mountains, and as all highlanders, they are stubborn and conservative. Fear of American bombs would push them into the lowlands of Holland and into the cities of France, and they will unwillingly but irreversibly change the land they enter.

This process is going on for quite a while. As the global policies of the Mammonites deplete the poor countries of the Third world, pump out natural resources and incomes, support the nasty quisling rulers, destroy their nature, more and more people are forced to join the stream of refugees to Europe and the US. This threat is acutely felt in Europe..."

ON THE MAMMONITES from Wallace Klinck, Canada

Here is the recent interview of Comer lawyer Rocco Galati by Amanda Lang concerning Comer's current legal case vs the Bank of Canada:

here:<https://youtu.be/4ZuIKXXtQN0>

I have posted the following comments to this YouTube interview:

"Comer has been around for many years. You might find the biography of its founder of considerable interest. He is recorded as having studied Marx, Lenin, Engels, Trotsky, et al. and had a long revolutionary history. Indeed, he apparently stood guard over Trotsky's body at his funeral in Mexico after Stalin's assassin had murdered him.

http://www.thestar.com/news/2008/05/17/toronto\_revolutionary\_93\_girds\_for\_one\_more\_battle.html

"Comer's objective is to have the state-owned Bank of Canada issue interest-free loans for public projects rather than having them financed by selling interest-bearing Government Bonds in the financial markets as is the current practice.

I believe that their ultimate aim is, as with most other "monetary reformers" such as Bill Still, e.g., to have all money creation in the hands of the Government and allow the banks to be on-lenders of savings of depositors only. They see the creation of money by the banks and the interest they charge as the great economic evil.

If the State is responsible for the issue of all money then the State will dictate the terms upon which it is issued. The State will be in a position to activate or suppress enterprise and initiative. As a young Russian told me some years ago while shaking his head: "I don't know—we work, but nothing seems to happen." That is to be expected in a centralized State administration which has full-employment rather than efficiency as its primary social policy and economic goal.

Banking's bogus claim to community's real wealth

The central "evil" of banking is not its creation of money, i.e., credit, but its bogus claim to ownership of the money it creates to monetize the community's real wealth—which latter it does not create. The "accountancy" department has seized control of the enterprise.

"Such centralized or "command" administrations emphasize State enterprise as a means of keeping the population working. Full-employment was quite naturally the central policy, ruthlessly enforced, of both the communists and the fascists. Indeed, it is promoted as a desideratum to be achieved by so-called Finance-Capitalist nations.

Finance-Capitalism and Communism have certain common origins and hence they have in this respect a common policy. They have their philosophy or metaphysical base, which is in direct opposition to that of Christian philosophy and policy. They both worship work, not just for its results but as an end, of and for itself. This idolatrous policy of making an end of a means is sinful in terms of Christian belief because it necessitates a perversion and misuse of resources, and, instituted by the State, can only result in tyranny through the centralization of external power to the detriment of individual immanent sovereignty.

From an economic standpoint it suppresses abundance not only of goods and services but also of leisure. We are discussing here the radical difference between the materialist Doctrine of Salvation through Works and the Christian Doctrine of Salvation through Grace. The first leads to enslavement; the latter to genuine individual freedom.

It should be noted that the Communist Manifesto called for the centralized control of credit and the national socialists called for, and implemented also, the centralized control of credit.

Analysis of the Price System:

Comer as such does not enter into an analysis of the price system and appears to be concerned more or less primarily with production, to the neglect of distribution and consumption. Social Credit asserts that the primary problem in the modern economy is not production, but rather distribution and consumption. C. H. Douglas demonstrated that in any given time-period there is a larger flow of costs and prices than there is a flow of consumer income by which to liquidate these costs. This defect becomes more pronounced as we automate our economy and capital charges grow relative to wages salaries and dividends.

Critics ask if this is true, how is it that goods do get sold and the economy does carry on in the (unstable) manner that it does? It is because excess financial costs are transferred to the future as a charge against future production. We borrow against our future in order to live in the present when, in fact, the physical costs of everything we make are entirely paid when a product is completed for final use. Social Credit considers this policy to be entirely irrational (unless from the perspective of a banker!), having various destructive effects upon society.

Comer appears not to recognize this problem, nor to have any policy by which to correct it. Their primary concern has been interest charged on state debt whereas Social Credit is concerned more fundamentally with an appropriation by the banks of the communal capital.

Comer confuses cause and effect. Also, they have a confused and seemingly undifferentiated way of talking about “interest-free” and “debt-free” money—two very different concepts. Comer’s policy appears to have a narrow ideological component without being a comprehensive empirical and scientific approach to financial accountancy and economics, per se.

At best their approach to monetary reform is incomplete--and dangerous at its worst. It does provide a service in bringing attention to the unnecessary financial burden placed upon nations by the conventional practice of financing State capital projects through the public sale of State securities, but this is only a small part of the overall problem. Comer seems to offer no solution to the increasing problem of income distribution in the age of labour displacement by automation and artificial intelligence.

MASS MIGRATION: CREATION OF CHAOS AND “USEFUL IDIOTS”...of the West

An essay that smacks of realism not utopianism! Hungarian, Adam Topolansky, spells it out for the gullible westerners. The Hungarians experienced the reality of ‘liberalism’ leading to communism therefore they are not as ‘utopian’ as are westerners. Adam Topolansky writes:

“Western ideologues’ demagoguery regarding the European immigration crisis is rehashing an old phrase: “useful idiots of the West”. This phrase was originally coined by Vladimir Iljich Lenin who allegedly referred to Westerners, who unintentionally contributed to the demise of their own civilization through their self-defeating guilt complexes and false reflex mechanisms, thereby promoting the cause of internationalism, i.e., socialism and communism. Lenin and Stalin used the term “polyezniy idiot” or “useful idiot” to describe sympathizers in the West who blindly supported Communist leaders.

A New York Times article from 1948, on contemporary Italian politics, documented usage of the term in an article from the social-democratic Italian paper L’Umanita. The French equivalent, “idiots utiles”, was used in a newspaper article title in 1946. A similar term, useful innocents, appears in Austrian-American economist Ludwig von Mises’s “Planned Chaos” (1947).

A 2010 BBC radio documentary titled Useful Idiots listed among “useful idiots” of Joseph Stalin several prominent British writers including H. G. Wells and Doris Lessing, the Irish writer George Bernard Shaw, the American journalist Walter Duranty, and the singer Paul Robeson.

One thing is for certain these “useful idiots of the West” are once again at their “best” during the European immigration crisis. Their guilt trip and false reasoning are fast chipping away at western civilization. They are typically driven by pathological altruism, believing that they know best how to run the lives of all people throughout the world.

But who are these useful idiots?

Are they naive ideologists? Or perhaps undercover agents? Or just humanitarian idealists and peaceniks who constantly ignore the facts? Or perhaps all three at the same time? Today, the term can be applied to brainwashed liberals and leftists (usually college students, well-paid middle-class professionals and well-to-do idealists) who are not necessarily idiots, rather just misinformed, naive, and ignorant on account of being indoctrinated by massive liberal/socialist propaganda, the dominantly liberal mass media and public education.

These useful idiots of the West are currently destroying European civilization by encouraging and demanding permissiveness and openness regarding the mass immigration wave that is invading Europe. There is a witty Hungarian saying: “más szerszámával verni a csalánt”... in English translation: “beating the stinging nettle with someone else’s biological tool”... There’s a similar Russian proverb: “it’s quite easy to sit with a bare ass on a hedgehog, if it’s someone else’s ass.” In Britain, there is also a wislet expressing this notion “They have us doing their donkey work”... or “next time do your own donkey work”.

As long as Hungarian pensioners receive 10-15 dollars a day retirement money to live on after 45 years of industrious work, none of these useful idiots should tell the Hungarians how they should “adequately” care for illegal migrants. Migrants cost Hungarian taxpayers circa 20 dollars a day and that does not include the damages they whip up and the additional expenses they generate for the taxpayer (traffic pile-ups, travel chaos, extra law enforcement, not to mention pillaging, stealing property, etc.). Hungary is not Luxemburg or Norway! Hungary is a vulnerable and less affluent country, working hard for the last 25 years to close the gap between Soviet-instilled eastern misery and western European American-style pompousness.

A national security concern: It is a national security concern for Hungary or for any other country for that matter to have hundreds of thousands of illegal migrants barge in illegally who refuse to follow the legal code and refuse to even be identified.

Are these useful idiot liberals completely off their rockers? Or is this a conscious misinformation campaign on their part to attack nation loving citizens across Europe? Is this another opportunity for them to undermine the European nation state? Of course, it is. It is modern warfare.

The formula is simple: unleash millions of migrants onto the European continent and this will sufficiently destabilize homogenous nation states and subvert nations throughout the continent, which will prepare the grounds for an international global agenda of unrestricted free markets, a global financial system and a centralized global dictatorship to control all nations.

These ‘armchair’ preachers:

Typically, these useful idiots are armchair preachers who sit in comfortable recliners thousands of miles away not being directly affected by the acute exigency of illegal migration in Europe. Nothing is too cheap or too vulgar for them. They insinuate, deceive, brainwash mainstream media and the general public and twist the facts on a daily basis. They are once again on a feeding frenzy trying to demonize the Hungarian government, which is a vendetta that has been a favourite pastime of American liberals for years now, fired up by Hungarian opposition agitators on the East coast of the United States. The names of these rabble-rousers are well known to Washington and Budapest insiders: Eva S. Balogh, András Simonyi, László Bitó, Tibor Purger, Gábor Halmai, Kim Lane Scheppelle, George Soros, Ákos Kertész, Ágnes Heller, László Bartus, etc. These people are conducting partisan warfare with the increasingly reddish, surrealistic assistance of the State Department to undermine and topple the Hungarian government. Fortunately, the Hungarian people have a keen sense of deciphering who is for them and who is against them.

When these useful idiots criticize the Hungarian government for not doing enough to make life “comfortable” for illegal migrants, they are preparing our own demise here in Europe. Since the illegal migrants break dozens of laws, while screaming for “justice”, their useful idiot western caretakers cry for tender loving care and thereby act as accomplices or accessories to criminal behaviour, which in itself is punishable by law. Their primary goal is to create chaos, which is their natural state of modus operandi.

Liberal elite and the mass exodus they have generated

It tends to be a favourite tactic of the liberal elite to create chaos when their influence seems to be stagnating or eroding. Out of this chaos, they can then push their agenda through at ease. The migration crisis is a part of this chaos strategy that has been devised from Washington, Brussels, Berlin, London, and Paris first to de-stabilize and subvert middle eastern regimes, fueling internal conflict, arming rebels and maintaining a war-like situation, just like Orwell predicted in his visionary work “1984”. The next step is to unleash millions of migrants onto Europe to destabilize nation states.

How interesting that the United States has granted asylum to only 1,500 Syrians so far, while American liberals foam in the mouth educating us in central Europe that these people are fleeing to save their lives and demand entry of millions of these migrants to Europe. What they forget to mention is that it was Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and her smart power politics that failed miserably in the middle East and uprooted the status quo in Syria, followed by the arming and funding of ISIS, which is now the root of all evil and is forcing people there to flee. How hypocritical can they get even opening their mouths criticizing how certain European countries respond to this mass exodus that they have generated?

Way to resolve the chaos is clear:

Turmoil, discord, anarchy, pandemonium, ataxia, clutter, entropy and mobocracy are various forms of tactics they use to create general confusion and disarray, thereby weakening a ruling regime that they dislike. This is what they have been doing vis-a-vis Hungary. Whatever their chosen subversive tactics may be, the creation of chaos is always essential to liberal globetrotters. Once we know this, it is clear that the way to resolve this or any other chaotic situation internationally is to first confront and push back the liberal elite. This can be achieved by a concerted effort between nations and a uniform strategy. Communications may be the key to making the first step in this direction. The rest is God's work.

The fact that these bleeding heart liberals are idiots is beyond dispute. The only question is: how are they useful and to whom? Based on every rational logic, they seem to be useful to those who want to dismantle and unravel western civilization. As renowned Hungarian author Sándor Márai said: "after every totalitarian period in history, there comes a period of Byzantin pompousness and self-righteousness, which will ultimately defeat itself."..."

BRITAIN'S LABOUR PARTY DITCHES ISRAEL LOBBY

"What was not so long ago unthinkable has come to pass." Thus the Jewish Chronicle's verdict on the election of hard-left pro-Palestinian Jeremy Corbyn as leader of Britain's Labour Party. It was a typically astonished reaction to the news that, for the first time in decades, there would be a British party leader who was not in the pocket of the Israel lobby.

Two Jewish shadow cabinet members, Ed Miliband and Rachel Reeves, have already led an exodus of senior resignations from Labour's front bench, of those not prepared to work for Corbyn. Virtually all of them are members of Labour Friends of Israel. Rather than settle anything, it seems Corbyn's election will trigger a civil war in Britain's main opposition party.

There has been a palpable shock amongst Jewish commentators on both left and right that this could have happened. For months former Blairites like David Aaronovitch and dyed-in-the wool Conservatives like Lord Finkelstein have been united in their position that Corbyn would be a disaster for Labour and Britain. Although Nick Cohen did the definite anti-Corbyn hatchet job. The decision was unanimous - Corbyn was bad for the Jews.

One wag commented that Jewish journalists are so quick to trot out a heart-rending tale of their own refugee family's flight to Britain. Now they have got a refugee-friendly politician who would flood Britain with refugees in a moment, if he could, and all they do is offload on him. What is their problem, he asks disingenuously...."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE CHRONICLE, Toowoomba.

How refreshing and encouraging to read Tara Miko's editorial (T.C. 16/9/15). It was honest, accurate and transparent, but re-enforced by Jay Nauss's letter beside it.

Our voting dilemma arises from the confusion between genuine democracy and ballot box democracy, which our politicians are very diligent in keeping us confused about!

Our original and genuine democracy was where the membership chose and elected the executive and then directed the executive to execute the membership's policy. But more importantly the same membership could vote an errant executive out, to be replaced from their membership by a more membership compliant executive.

For over a hundred and fifty years all of our community organisations prospered and delivered what we were capable of doing for ourselves, to make the most successful nation in history. And still people from other nations are clamouring to come here! Then gradually these organisation disappeared as government agencies replaced them, together with policy making.

Ballot box democracy is a democratic mechanism, (like cars & aeroplanes) controlled like all mechanisms by people. The problem arises when somebody else, besides the electors, chooses who we can vote for.

All totalitarian regimes, including the Soviet Union have democratic ballot boxes, but you only have a choice of voting for a red, green or white communist!

Our world is not threatened by terrorists, gangsters, dictators, holes in the ozone layer, global warming or even Prime minister's, but by the unseen people who finance and so control their policy and activity. There is still nothing new under the sun!

J. Brett, Toowoomba

TURNBULL'S TURN TO TURN BULL by James Reed

I am always pleased to write a political obituary when an Australian Prime Minister is sent to the political graveyard. Tony Abbott's demise as Prime Minister was predictable and yet The Australian of September 14, 2015 felt that the challenge would be in weeks when in fact it happened on that very day. Things move fast even in a decaying "Rome".

James Reed's iron law of politics is that each Australian prime minister gets worse. This is because they stand, not like Newton on the shoulders of giants, but rather on the shoulders of political dwarfs before them. Abbott, although writing a 1990 article about the changing face of Australia, had long abandoned such concerns by the time he was assigned the task by John Howard of dealing with the Pauline Hanson issue. He was the ideological successor of Julia Gillard.

Recently we have seen Abbott and his Trade Minister refusing to negotiate with Labour on the China free trade agreement over the foreign workers issue. No talks with "racist" Labour (The Australian, September 11, 2015, p.6). This is the ideology of the free trade slaves of a colonised state. The China free trade deal is a completely un-Australian document which essentially permits Chinese workers to flood the nation.

Labor and the unions are right to be concerned. Further, given the massive imbalance of power in the Australia-China relationship, the weakness of our leaders and their lunar globalism, and China's buy-up of urban and rural lands - as well as the likelihood of the coming US/China war just around the corner - we are justified in being concerned about China. This is not "racism", it is just survival. Alternatively, such "racism" is justified. Abbott's lunar globalism, and with Hockey, his welfare cutbacks, made him one of Australia's most unpopular prime ministers.

But, I am sorry to say, Malcolm Turnbull will be even worse. He will continue Abbotts globalist economics along with all the politically correct ideologies of Labor - which is not to say that Abbott did not do this as well. Turnbull, in short, will be worse - dare I say - then even Shorten.

As far as "solution time" at the end of the article to leave readers with hope, I think it is time to accept that the "Australia" that we knew - Traditional Australia - is dead. But the seeds of rebirth, after a period of chaos and collapse lie with us and we should keep our eyes on the blue skies in the horizon, beyond the bushfires that are now set to burn through the political landscape of what was once "Australia".
