THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: Why is it that the principles of the Marxists, best seen on university campuses, and the global financial elite so perfectly coincide? How do the bits and pieces fit together? Both support open borders, one on grounds of “anti-racism,” the other on grounds of profit maximization. Everything the Leftoids do, such as seeking diversity, smashing the traditional family, and creating a Balkanised population, enslaved to a usurious debt economy, benefits the financial elite. One would have thought that Marxist would be opposed to such an elite, above all else. Yet, their fanatical, insane, mouth-foaming anti-racist mania prevails over all else. So, the Left must be no more than useful idiots doing, consciously, or unconsciously, the bidding of their financial masters. - Charles Taylor: Cultural Marxism: Philosophy of the New World Order - blog.alor.org

THE GREAT AMNESIA THAT IS POLITICAL OPPORTUNISM by Michael Ferguson

Chris Mitchell (“Amnesia Suits the Politics of Today’s Media Generation,” The Australian, September 5, 2016), notes that the crop of today’s progressives in the media are “publicly contemptuous of everyday Australians, those people who make up journalists’ audiences.” But do everyday Australians primarily watch, say, the ABC and SBS? I doubt it, or at least not the ordinary people I know. The chattering class who vilify us produce their self-reinforcing bs for members of their own class to maintain group solidarity, as the sociologists would describe it.

Still, Mitchell makes some good points: Then Prime Minister Julia Gillard, was opposed to same-sex marriage right up to 2013 and no “progressive” accused her of “hate speech.” But oppose same sex marriage now, and feel the might of the courts dropped upon you. Why, the Marxist cubs will bash you and the system will do nothing about it, or, almost nothing.

Yes, there may be a “culture of forgetting,” but I think this has always been part of the psycho-political warfare that the ruling elites play. Consistency over time becomes politically problematic, so the easiest option is to just ignore what was previously said and press on regardless. And that’s really easy to do if you are the chattering class, owners of the means of production of bs.

It is somewhat ironic to read Chris Mitchell’s piece published in The Australian on September 5, 2016, and to also see Caroline Overington’s “Share the Love, Share the Joy and Allow Our True Colours to Shine Through,” The Weekend Australian, September 3-4, 2016, p. 19.

She says “The fear campaign against a same-sex marriage plebiscite is driven purely by political selfishness.” Yes, as in war time or in the opening of the Sydney Olympics, “Australians young and old will come marching. Arm-in-arm, hand-in-hand, with children in tow, they will come out to get this done.” All the polls say that the “no” side will be defeated, she says. “Yes” is about social justice “because it’s our duty as human beings to do what we can to ease the suffering of others.”

What! They didn’t argue that in the 1970s; in fact, then, conventional marriage was seen as oppressive. Oh, she votes, and so do zillions like her.

That is why it is important to vote “No” and to tell everybody, even your cat if it votes, to vote “No.” Say “No! No! and more No!” to the Caroline Overington’s of the world.

Without arms-in-arms, and without hand-in-hand, we must get this done.

THE FACE OF ECONOMIC COLLAPSE BY JAMES REED

An article in The New York Post, “These are the Signs of an Economic Collapse,” is one of many articles appearing in the mainstream media, speculating about the long-anticipated big economic breakdown, one to dwarf the last GFC. The article gives a check lists of the signs that a crash is coming:

“What does the beginning of an economic collapse look like? Do you see grocery stores closing? Do you see other retailers, like clothing stores and department stores, going out of business? Are there shuttered storefronts along your Main Street shopping district, where you bought a tool from the hardware store or dropped off your dry cleaning or bought fruits and vegetables?

Are you making as much money annually as you did 10 years ago? Do you see homes in neighborhoods becoming run down as the residents either were foreclosed upon, or the owner lost his or her job so he or she can't afford to cut the grass or paint the house? Did that same house where the Joneses once lived now become a rental property, where new people come to live every few months?

Do you know one or two people who are looking for work? Maybe professionals, who you thought were safe in their jobs? Friday's anaemic jobs numbers tell that tale. Did your high school buddy take a job at the local convenience store because he could not find work in sales?

Is the pothole on your street getting larger instead of getting repaired? Is there more than one street light out in your town?

Don't be fooled into thinking that the stock market is any indication of the health of an economy. Is the town pool closed this summer much more than usual? Have you seen a situation — any situation — and said, “Jeez, it wouldn't take much money to fix that” — but it hasn't been fixed?

You may have witnessed many of these situations, but you tell yourself it can't be an economic collapse because the stock market is at an all-time high.

Does that mean all is well? No, this is what a 21st century economic collapse looks like in the beginning.” Clearly, we can see these signs all around us.

This article goes on to point out that across the West the gap between the haves and have-nots is growing exponentially, and that there is a growing sense of fear in communities.

Indeed, in Germany savers are deserting the banks and buying safes to store cash at home.

ON TARGET

Burg-Waechter, Germany's largest safe manufacturer has had a 25 percent jump in sales in the first half of 2016, compared to the same time last year. One reason is that the European Central Bank is attempting to control inflation by forcing interest rates below zero, so that savers will now be charged fees on deposits. But, as in Japan, this trend has been going on for a number of years, indicating that people are getting scared of the financial system.

Earlier in the year, an article detailed that the shipping industry has begun a great slow-down: “People are Afraid these ‘Zombie Ships’ are the First Sign of Global Economic Collapse”.

<http://www.businessinsider.com/people-afraid-zombie-ships-first-sign-of-global-economic-collapse-2016-1?IR=T>

The article says: “The shipping industry is facing its worst crisis in living memory as years of rapid expansion fuelled by cheap debt have coincided with an economic slowdown in China.

“We are now at the stage where people are struggling to remember an era when it was this difficult, we've gone through what it was like in the '90s, the '80s and the '70s, so expressions like ‘living memory’ start to apply,” said Jeremy Penn, the chief executive of the Baltic Exchange in London.

The Baltic Exchange has set shipping rates for more than 2 1/2 centuries, and the situation its members now face is grim. “Ship owners are facing the tough decision of whether to just drop anchor and hope it gets better,” Penn added. Ship owners had financed fleets with 60 percent debt and 40 percent equity, and have found that the 40 percent equity is now worthless.

These elements, all put together, come to support the view that an economic crash of dimensions rivalling the Great Depression, is coming.

I have recently looked through one of the world's leading global investment strategists, Barton Biggs (1932-2012), who in his book, Wealth, War, and Wisdom, (John Wiley, 2008), also predicted that a collapse would occur:

“People with wealth should assume that somewhere in the near or far future there will be another time of cholera when the four Horsemen will ride again and the barbarians unexpectedly will be at their gate. By definition, the next Black Swan will be some form of total breakdown of civilized society and the social and financial infrastructure as we know it.” (p. 331)

Biggs went on to adopt a survivalist approach to the coming collapse.

By chance I came across a letter to the Editor of the Stock Journal from a Mr KG from Naracoorte. He highlights that this pending economic collapse does not have to be. In fact it is currently being driven by manipulative men and could just as readily be redirected to the good. 100 years ago Australian business leaders and politicians, who were loyal to this country, set about establishing our Commonwealth Bank. Funds were made available, by the then sole director Sir Denison Miller, for significant infrastructure projects and also the war effort. What was physically possible became financially possible. I present the letter in full for your interest.

Dear Editor, Mr Tony Mahar's support for Foreign Ownership (Stock Journal 25/8/16) is a view unfortunately held by some senior business leaders and politicians. It is particularly unfortunate in Mr Mahar's case since he heads the National Farmers' Federation, an organisation with rank and file members expecting their leaders to promote, protect and nurture their industry and assets.

Around the world, most countries either severely restrict or even prohibit the sale of farmland to foreigners. The Japanese economy has been declining for twenty years and yet I would not be able to buy any of their land. So why is Australia needing to assist the economy by eagerly displaying the "For Sale" sign?

THREE CHEERS FOR LOYAL CHINESE AUSSIES! BY JAMES REED

"If you don't like this country's values, and think of another place as your country, then go back there!" Strong words indeed. But before professional ethnics reach for their magic section 18 C ultimate nullifier weapon, consider that these words are a quote from John Hu, a Chinese Australian and founder of the Embracing Australian Values Alliance. (The Australian, September 5, 2016, p.2)

Have ye of the multicult released the cock on your hair trigger section 18 C gun yet?

John Hu may be just the man this torn and bleeding country needs. He will be able to challenge things that Anglo critics have difficulties doing because of the political weapon of section 18 C. He has criticised political donations, noting that in the case of Chinese

WHAT A REAL "SAFE SCHOOLS" PROGRAM SHOULD BE LOOKING AT by Mrs Vera West

A Melbourne school for children with intellectual disabilities is under investigation after it dealt with one child by leaving him outside on a beanbag for an entire term, and that was a winter term! The boy's mother was unaware of her son's treatment.

Other children at other day care centres have been put inside lockable boxes! Some children had been left in their urine or had medications shoved down their throats. Whistle blowers have been sacked for lodging formal complaints.

I would have thought that any "Safe Schools" program should be addressing these ills before pursuing a gender

ON TARGET

It is over fifty years since foreign investors assisted with rural development. The foreign money now simply purchases assets of a going-concern like, for example, the Tasmanian dairies and potentially, the Kidman properties. These are fully developed and only require normal maintenance.

A glance at a map of Australia with flags indicating properties now owned by foreign interests is alarming to most of us and we must ask Mr Mahar and others like him; "How far should this idea of selling the farms, go?" "Is there a limit and when might it be reached?"

If the need for foreign money is to maintain a decent standard of living in Australia, then we need to check what other avenues are, or have been available. Firstly a check of the Reserve Bank Act will be very helpful. Among other things, the Act defines one duty of the Bank "...to ensure that the monetary policy of the Bank is directed to the greatest advantage of the people" in a manner which "will best contribute to the economic prosperity and welfare of the people of Australia." What more do we need!

Rather than continuing to display Australia as the nation of suckers in the eyes of the world, I appeal to Mr Mahar and others to arrange our parliamentary representatives to instruct the Reserve Bank to serve as it is meant to. KG, Naracoorte SA political donations, "they may donate on behalf of the Chinese government to influence Australian politics, to penetrate and control positions, for example, on the South China Sea – and some of the money may actually be coming from China. In China, business and government work extremely closely."

The Embracing Australian Values Alliance accepts the Australian values of freedom, equality, democracy and tolerance, which is a long stride forward.

Good work Mr Hu, but beware that the new class elites who prosper from social disharmony are not going to appreciate your plea for national unity.

agenda. But instead, we have news that a four-year-old preschool child has been receiving support with gender transitioning, and there are children as young as three being assisted with gender dysphoria.

There has been a spike of cases of gender dysphoria following the Safe Schools programme, and like everything else, it's all paid for out of your taxes!

THE FRANKFURT SCHOOL'S POISONOUS IDEOLOGIES LIVE ON

Basically, the Frankfurt School's task was to undermine the Judaeo-Christian legacy as swiftly as possible. To do this they called for the most negative destructive criticism possible of every sphere of life which would be designed to de-stabilize society and bring down what they saw as the 'oppressive' order. Their policies, they hoped, would spread like a virus—'continuing the work of the Western Marxists by other means'.

Carl Grünberg, the Institute's director from 1923-1929, was an avowed Marxist, although the Institute did not have any official party affiliations. But in 1930 Max Horkheimer assumed control and he believed that Marx's theory should be the basis of the Institute's research. When Hitler came to power, the Institute was closed and its members, by various routes, fled to the United States and migrated to major US universities—Columbia, Princeton, Brandeis, and California at Berkeley.

To further the advance of their 'quiet' cultural revolution the School recommended (among other things):

1. The creation of racism offences.
2. Continual change to create confusion
3. The teaching of sex and homosexuality to children
4. The undermining of schools' and teachers' authority
5. Huge immigration to destroy identity.
6. The promotion of excessive drinking
7. Emptying of churches
8. An unreliable legal system with bias against victims of crime
9. Dependency on the state or state benefits
10. Control and dumbing down of media
11. Encouraging the breakdown of the family

One of the main ideas of the Frankfurt School was to exploit Freud's idea of 'pansexualism' - the search for pleasure, the exploitation of the differences between the sexes, the overthrowing of traditional relationships between men and women. To further their aims they would:

- attack the authority of the father, deny the specific roles of father and mother, and wrest away from families their rights as primary educators of their children.
- abolish differences in the education of boys and girls
- abolish all forms of male dominance - hence the presence of women in the armed forces
- declare women to be an 'oppressed class' and men as 'oppressors'

Munzenberg summed up the Frankfurt School's long-term operation thus:

'We will make the West so corrupt that it stinks.'
