THOUGHT OF THE WEEK: “The Monroe Doctrine, originally enunciated by President James Monroe in 1823, was used to take Manifest Destiny a step further when, in the 1850s and 1860s, it was used to assert that the United States had special rights all over the hemisphere, including the right to invade any nation in Central or South America that refused to back U.S. policies. Teddy Roosevelt invoked the Monroe Doctrine to justify U.S. intervention in the Dominican Republic, in Venezuela, and during the "liberation" of Panama from Colombia. A string of subsequent U.S. presidents — most notably Taft, Wilson, and Franklin Roosevelt — relied on it to expand Washington's Pan-American activities through the end of World War II. Finally, during the latter half of the twentieth century, the United States used the Communist threat to justify expansion of this concept to countries around the globe (Vietnam & Indonesia).”

VENEZUELA: LET'S CUT TO THE CHASE By Pepe Escobar

February 05, 2019 "Information Clearing House" - Cold War 2.0 has hit South America with a bang – pitting the US and expected minions against the four key pillars of in-progress Eurasia integration: Russia, China, Iran and Turkey. It's the oil, stupid. But there's way more than meets the (oily) eye. Caracas has committed the ultimate cardinal sin in the eyes of Exceptionalistan; oil trading bypassing the US dollar or US-controlled exchanges. Remember Iraq. Remember Libya. Yet Iran is also doing it. Turkey is doing it. Russia is – partially – on the way. And China will eventually trade all its energy in petroyuan.

With Venezuela adopting the petro crypto-currency and the sovereign bolivar, already last year the Trump administration had sanctioned Caracas off the international financial system. No wonder Caracas is supported by China, Russia and Iran. They are the real hardcore troika – not psycho-killer John Bolton's cartoonish “troika of tyranny” – fighting against the Trump administration's energy dominance strategy, which consists essentially in aiming at the total lock down of oil trading in petrodollars, forever.

Venezuela is a key cog in the machine. Psycho killer Bolton admitted it on the record; “It will make a big difference to the United States economically if we could have American oil companies invest in and produce the oil capabilities in Venezuela.” It's not a matter of just letting ExxonMobil take over Venezuela's massive oil reserves – the largest on the planet. The key is to monopolize their exploitation in US dollars, benefitting a few Big Oil billionaires. Read further here: <http://www.informationclearinghouse.info/51048.htm> ***

CANADA'S ROLE IN THE VENEZUELA COUP By Prof. John McMurtry

*A letter was sent today to the Science for Peace list-serve in response to the Science for Peace Statement on the Government of Canada's ongoing campaign to overturn the elected government of Venezuela.
Science for Peace is based in the Dept of Physics of the University of Toronto.*

What is most welcome in this statement is its expeditious issue and wide-lensed comprehension of the hypocritically self-serving role of Canada's state, major mining corporations and banks in the plundering of Latin American societies and interference in their internal affairs to ensure that it can continue on and grow against elected governments seeking self-determination. (now for the first time our foreign minister mendaciously publicly leading the alliance of the externally orchestrated oppression, exploitation and coup in Venezuela). This exact passage deserves verbatim support:

(continued from previous page) “Canada has, in recent years, supported the replacement of elected governments in Honduras, Guatemala, Haiti and now in Venezuela, and its relations with Latin America are problematical in broader terms. Canada provides a financial and legal haven for businesses that exploit labour and decimate the forests, agriculture, and watersheds in these countries. Canadian banks mire these countries in debt and buy up public utilities. Protests against Canadian mining companies in Mexico, Peru, Bolivia and Guatemala are met with police and military brutality. In addition, Canada needs to maintain a distance from the far-right government of Jair Bolsonaro in Brazil. Bolsonaro, among other policies, threatens our common future by opening up the Amazon, the lungs of the planet, to deforestation for profit.”....

GLOBALISM AS CORPORATE FASCISM By Peter Ewer

Here are some clearly argued comments, that refute the idea that globalists are freedom lovers, but shows instead that they are fascists, not the fake kind of “fascists” that the Left always identifies, but the real thing, live and wriggling:

<http://src.personalliberty.com/eview/324707/395018285/>

“There is a silent marriage between big government and big business. It's called fascism, or was in Italy. We have much the same thing in America. Big business has and will promote every ideology and philosophy known to man to disguise its madness for profits and government favors. All governments are fronts for monopoly capitalism (fascism). America is not a capitalist system by any stretch. This is obvious to any sober person. Government benefits big business. Big business benefits government. There's a revolving door between top brass in the multinational corporations and the halls of power in the District of Criminals. They run and populate the president's cabinet offices and the alphabet soup regulatory agencies. (For evidence, go to the membership roster of the Council on Foreign Relations and see how many names you recognize from government, and study the bios of those you don't.) In return, government policy is crafted and designed to enrich and favor big business.”

This is seen very clearly in the internet censorship scenarios, discussed elsewhere at this site, and also immigration policy, which is dictated by the big end of town, solely to keep up profits of local elites. To fight this will require a total transformation of society, especially of the economic and financial system, as advocated by the social credit movement, working in line with a comprehensive attempt to perform CPR to our cultural institutions, which are now in advanced stages of cardiac arrest. It is not going to be easy, and work should have started on this, maybe 1,000 years ago. But, better late than never.

POLITICAL CORRECTNESS IN NEW ZEALAND By Bruce Bennett

New Zealand may be considered as a bug out location for the elites, but the land of the long white cloud is still being put through the wringer of political correctness and the war on Whites. Captain Cook, watch out, they are out to cook you!

<https://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/2018/10/02/>

captain-cook-statue-removed-new-zealand-mountain-maori-protests/

“A statue of Captain Cook will be removed from a hill in New Zealand following protests by the local Maori community which says its ancestors arrived there long before the famous British explorer. The council in Gisborne on the North Island said it will relocate the statue, which was erected in 1969 but has been repeatedly defaced by vandals who have daubed it in red paint, stolen its sword, and once covered Cook in a painted white bikini and sandals.

Critics have described Cook, who landed in the area aboard HMS Endeavour in 1769, as a “murderer” and “crooked Cook”. Leaders of the local Ngati Oneone tribe say historical records show that Cook’s crew shot nine of their people, killing six. They say Cook’s arrival was eventually followed by European settlement, which led to their dispossession and the demise of their culture. Meredith Akuhata-Brown, a Gisborne councillor, said the council voted unanimously to move the statue, which stands atop a local ancestral hill known as Titirangi, to a museum as part of the 250th anniversary commemorations of Cook’s arrival. She said it might be replaced by a statue of Raikaitane, the Maori chief at the time of Cook’s landing.

“It's significant because James never climbed Titirangi... and so for local iwi [tribespeople] it's been a massive disappointment that he's maintained that space for as long as he has,” she told Radio New Zealand.”

Fine, but if one is going to play the “we got here first” game, shouldn’t there be a debate about the fate of the Moriori?

“A small Polynesian tribe enslaved and almost wiped out by Maoris were celebrating yesterday after hearing that they are entitled to compensation from the New Zealand government.

The fate of the Morioris, about 200 of whom survive on the bleak Chatham Islands 540 miles east of Wellington, has been regarded as one of the darkest secrets in New Zealand history. Many European New Zealanders cling to a long-held belief that the Morioris were driven to the Chathams from the mainland when the Maoris arrived from the Pacific islands around AD 800. Historians disagree over the theory, with some claiming it arises from concerns about growing Maori claims and the legitimacy of European land ownership. But it is beyond dispute that in 1835 a Maori tribe seized a ship in Wellington harbour and sailed to the Chathams after word reached them that the Morioris were pacifists and would not put up a fight.

Many Morioris were killed in the massacre that followed and the survivors were enslaved. Their lands were occupied by the warlike Maoris. By 1870 there were only 100 Morioris left and the then Native Lands Court officially assigned 97 per cent of the islands' land area to the invaders, the Ngati Mutunga and Ngati Tama tribes. The Morioris received only the remaining three per cent.

Tommy Solomon, the last full-blooded Moriori, died in 1933 and by the middle of the 20th century it was wrongly believed that the tribe was extinct. But a handful of descendants took a case to the Waitangi Tribunal - a judicial body set up to hear Maori traditional land grievances against European settlement which yesterday upheld their claim for compensation.

The tribunal said that after the 1835 invasion the Morioris were housed inadequately, forced to undertake "extreme labour", brutalised and gratuitously killed by their Maori overlords. "In 1862, Moriori elders made a plea to the government for relief, listing the names of 226 killed and 1,366 who, they wrote, had died of despair, but the government did not respond."

The report continued: "Despite the difficulties of distance, it was feasible for the Crown to have intervened. The continued survival of the Moriori as a people is now at risk as a result of the loss of people at this time." The recommendation for compensation will now go to the government.

Maui Solomon, one of the claimants, said after hearing the tribunal's ruling: "I feel the emotions of my ancestors. It is a vindication that we were not conquered. You can't really conquer the spirit of a people." Another of the claimants, Denis Solomon, described the report as "a beacon lighting up our future."

"It confirms what we have long known, and it corrects the many hurtful myths about the Moriori people that we have lived with for generations," he said. Evelyn Tuuta, a spokesman for the Ngati Mutunga Maori tribe, said: "I wouldn't wish what happened on anyone."

But put in context, she said, such practises were "custom at that time and occurred throughout the country. I'm quite sure that what was done then was appropriate, although it is totally inappropriate now."

Perhaps the chattering class in New Zealand can discuss this once they have finished knocking over poor old Captain Cook? ***

A MODERN MANIA By Viv Forbes

Every society seems destined to suffer at least one episode of crowd madness. They range from the Dutch Tulip Mania in 1636, the British South Sea Bubble in 1720, hyper-inflation in the Weimar Republic in 1923 and in Zimbabwe in 2008, bank failures, booms and depression, and evil eras of murderous madness like those of the Bolsheviks in Russia, the Red Guards in China and Pol Pot in Cambodia.

Today we have a modern madness, less dramatic but more insidious, which is affecting the affluent West. It is the phobia about hydro-carbon energy which is now being blamed for every natural disaster, and the parallel religious worship of everything "green".

"Green Energy" is a relic from a bygone era when most people lived or worked on farms and relied on animal power, windmills, sailing ships, solar energy and biomass. Subsidising, mandating and promoting its use in modern urbanised industrial society is a con-trick worthy of the shady salesmen of past manias.

Weather-dependent "Green Energy" may suit remote or stand-alone applications, but is unreliable and destabilises electricity grids. It is destroying Australian industry and jobs and harming consumers, while disfiguring the landscape and having no measurable effect on global temperature.

Manias always end badly. Suffering electricity consumers forced to endure the costs of its unreliability will eventually revolt and we will abandon this modern "Green Energy" mania. But as Churchill said: "How much greater the cost, for each day's delay." ***

OLD SCHOOL FEMINISTS VERSUS TRANS-WOMEN By Mrs Vera West

There is an emerging contradiction between old school feminism, and trans-women.

<https://vdare.com/articles/fundamental-contradiction-will-feminists-submit-to-domination-by-transsexuals>

This has been seen in many cases of sporting triumph, but probably also in the academic rewards system. Feminists have held that gender is biological, when it suits them, namely when there is some supposed biological advantage to women, but mostly gender is seen as a social construct. On this view trans-women are perfectly legitimate.

UPDATE ON THE 5G HEALTH THREAT BY Mrs Vera West

I know nothing about computers, do not have a mobile phone, and will never send a text. I only recently got on email, Gmail or something, to keep in touch with grandchildren. It takes me about three hours to log in, typing with arthritic hands and a mind full of confusion. Why then should my brain, or what remains of it, be fried by the 5G, whatever that is:

“Experts are warning that superfast broadband known as 5G could cause cancer in humans, and the usage of 5G is nothing more than a “massive health experiment.” 5G could very well be a global catastrophe that kills wildlife, gives people terminal diseases, and causes the Earth’s magnetic field to change, according to shocking claims by a technology expert. Arthur Robert Firstenberg is an American author and an activist for electromagnetic radiation and health. In his 1997 book Microwaving Our Planet: The Environmental Impact of the Wireless Revolution, he claimed: “The telecommunications industry has suppressed damaging evidence about its technology since at least 1927.” Firstenberg has also founded the independent campaign group the Cellular Phone Task Force and since 1996 he has argued in numerous publications that wireless technology is dangerous. According to a report by the Daily Star, Firstenberg has also recently started an online petition calling on world organizations, such as the United Nations, World Health Organisation (WHO), and European Union to “urgently halt the development of 5G,” which is due to be rolled out this year. In fact, Verizon has activated the world’s first 5G networks in four cities in the United States: Houston, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, and Sacramento. According to the Firstenberg, wireless networks are “harmful for humans” and the development of the next generation is “defined as a crime” under international law, as he states it in the online petition.

When speaking to The Daily Star Online, Firstenberg said this 5G rollout is deadly. “There is about to be as many as 20,000 satellites in the atmosphere. The FCC approved Elon Musk’s project for 12,000 satellites

Now, I am not questioning any legitimacy here, but I wonder how this will all end? With the unrelenting attack upon manhood, what is there to stop every oppressed man suddenly declaring that they are now “female”? This can be done without any surgery, because gender is just in the social mind, a social construct. So, how will the system deal with this hypothetical?

I am finding these contradictions, “delicious,” and much more entertaining than women’s day time telly. *** on November 15th and he’s going to launch his in mid-2019. I’m getting reports from various parts of the world that 5G antennas are being erected all over and people are already getting sick from what’s there now and the insect population is getting affected,” Firstenberg stated.

“This could become a global catastrophe. When the first satellites were launched in the late 1990s for mobile phones, on the day they were launched people sensitive to these things got very sick. The mortality rate rose in the US by 5-10% too and there were reports that birds were not flying. People who realized this the most were pigeon racers who released their birds who then didn’t return,” he added. And that was when there were only 77 satellites, not 20,000.”

http://www.shtftplan.com/headline-news/5g-wireless-a-massive-health-experiment-that-could-cause-cancer-and-global-catastrophe\_02052019

But surely, if there are these health threats, wouldn’t 5G simply be shut down? No, this is different to censoring us. 5G will be big profits for a civilisation manically addicted to IT, social media and other computer nonsense, while our freedom is of negative value to the elites. I dare say, that the globalists will go for it, even if it roasted the planet, with them in the toast. Making a profit is much more important than long-term living, even though living in the longer term, would produce more profit! They would burn the planet to a crisp, just for five minutes warmth. ***
