Black "Racism" in South Africa: Libtards Very Quiet on This One By "Jammers" Reed	4

THOUGHTS OF THE WEEK: "The looking to Nature for eternal laws is a way of ruling and being ruled. It has its concomitant in the social order in the neutralizing of the passion for liberty (another name for the spring of evolution) and the enthronement of privilege and stasis. The social structure that is "most measurable and definite, most amenable to the methods of what goes by the name of pure inductive science," is also the most tyrannous and fatalistic. In the Chinese Empire "an effort has been made on a grand scale and through a disciplinary regimen of ages to eliminate the infinite from history by squaring the soul to a mathematical definition of prudence and propriety. And China still offers the choicest extant laboratory for our savants of the newly invented science of sociology" (AI 44f.). A sentence of Douglas comes to mind. Christ said, "I came that you might have life and have it more abundantly" - that you might have life, that is, the totality — that you might take a general and effective interest in everything. Thus, says Douglas, quoting this scripture, "the aim of the human individual is ultimately a totalitarian aim, a statement which...is, in itself, the negation of the idea of the totalitarian state."

DAILY TOTALITARIANISM By Charles Taylor

Here is an interesting piece, which puts the case that the Chinese style "social credit" system is in place in the US. Now I know the League is a Douglas social credit organisation, and a mighty fine one too, but sadly the words "social credit" are now getting a bad new meaning. This could be a problem that may need addressing in the future. Anyway, in the present, daily totalitarianism:

<https://www.zerohedge.com/technology/thanks-tech-totalitarians-us-already-has-china-style-social-credit-system>

'While protesters in Hong Kong fly American flags and rip down security cameras, an even more insidious Chinese-style "social credit" system is solidifying in the United States [Hong Kong Protesters Wave U.S. Flags, Urge Trump to Take Action, by Owen Franks, Bloomberg, August 31, 2019]. The Trump Administration is considering an alliance with Big Tech to determine who is allowed to own guns [Power Up: White House ponders new proposal to identify links between mental health and violence, by Jacqueline Alemany, Washington Post, August 22, 2019]. The Main Stream Media wields more power than the state itself, blithely doxing private citizens it wants to destroy because of their political views. Finally, the mysterious purge (and equally mysterious re-establishment) of some Dissident Right YouTube accounts shows that political debate is being managed from the top-down. Every American can have his job, constitutional rights, and reputation destroyed by a power structure that is completely unaccountable—and it's being imposed on us in the name of "freedom."

Sadly, President Donald Trump seems oblivious to this attack. He's failed to defend those who defended him. He instead filled his administration with enemies eager to smear him in tell-all books [John Kelly told Trump his memoir would wait unless attacked, by Caitlin Yilek, Washington Examiner, September 4, 2019].

He's now taking this self-defeating principle outside his administration. Though Google and other Big Tech companies will do everything they can to prevent his re-election, President Trump is mulling partnering with them to gather data on "risk factors" in order to prevent mass shootings. This reportedly includes using data from "Apple Watches, Fitbits, Amazon Echo, and Google Home"...

(continued from previous page) ...[White House considers new project seeking links between mental health and violent behavior, by Jacqueline Alemany, Washington Post, August 22, 2019]. Only the most naïve can believe that private data or recorded conversations won't be weaponized against patriots. After all, an email, Facebook comment, or old tweet can already get you fired from your job—even a government job. Leif Olson's rehiring may not have been a true victory against "cancel culture," but we shouldn't lose sight of the casual cruelty that motivated the attack in the first place. Hurting people, rather than informing people, seems to be the only motivation of MSM journofa. We'll never know the story behind Jeffrey Epstein or what motivated the mass shooter in Las Vegas (remember that?). But journofa won't rest until they've doxed every Gamestop employee and pizza deliveryman who went to Charlottesville! Another example: "dozens" of Customs and Border Protection officers may lose employment or suffer lesser penalties after their comments in a private Facebook group were leaked [Customs and Border Protection moving to fire and discipline dozens of agents for Facebook posts, by Anna Giaritelli, Washington Examiner, September 5, 2019]. An unnamed "senior CBP official" proclaims that this isn't enough because they need to "change the culture" of the service.'

Apart from the tyranny of Big Tech, in Australia you are seeing the same form of social control with sweeping legislation pushed by your Liberals, who were supposed to be pro-freedom.

The changes to social security welfare payments, introducing drug testing, and a debit card eliminating cash are extremely worrying moves that put your country further down the path to the elimination of essential liberties, all pushed under the cover of supposedly helping people, when in fact, all that is being done is to further enslave them. Remember: freedom is something you don't think about having until it is lost. ***

NO, NOT EVERYONE HAS FORGOTTEN ABOUT THE 9/11 CONSPIRACY By Charles Taylor

The Epstein conspiracy, showing that the world's elites have a segment of their population who are sadistic paedophiles, has now dropped from interest to be replaced by other stories of doom, gloom and misery for us, while the Dark Lords continue to live on the fat of the land, our fat, and our land. Anyway, September 11 has now passed, and there were all those articles about remembering it. Sure, but some want to go further and investigate the whole shonky state of affairs:

<https://www.zerohedge.com/health/new-york-area-fire-commissioners-demand-new-911-investigation>

'September 11, 2001, was nearly 20 years ago, and after all this time, so many questions still remain about what exactly happened. It is not socially acceptable to question the official explanation that was given for the collapse of the towers and the other events of that day, but now these questions are being taken more seriously.

However, the rushed and poorly managed 9/11 commission report did not do an adequate job at investigating the crimes, which left experts in a variety of different fields with questions about the official story.

Many of these professionals belong to an organization called Architects and Engineers for 9/11 Truth, who have been pushing for a new investigation into the attacks for many years.

This July, they announced a major breakthrough in their fight for a proper investigation. According to a press release published on the group's website, New York Fire Commissioners who were closely involved with the events of that day, have called for a new investigation into the 9/11 attacks. On July 24, the Franklin Square and Munson Fire Districts voted unanimously for a new investigation, citing "overwhelming evidence" that "pre-planted explosives . . . caused the destruction of the three World Trade Center buildings."

The resolution was written by Commissioner Christopher Gioia, and received overwhelming support from Commissioner Dennis Lyons. "We have a memorial — a piece of steel from the World Trade Center with 28 holes where the nuts and bolts used to go. Every year on the 11th, we put a rose in each hole for the 24 Nassau County firefighters and four Franklin Square residents who died on 9/11," Commissioner Lyons said. When the vote was passed, the families of 9/11 victims showed up in the audience to express their support for the cause and their gratitude to the departments for making this issue a priority.

Commissioner Gioia said that he expects support from other districts throughout the city, and hopes that they will be passing similar resolutions in solidarity.

"We were the first fire district to pass this resolution. We won't be the last," Gioia said.'

Unlike people like me, these guys cannot be quickly dismissed, so hopefully some dirt will rise to the surface from their stirring.

The more dirt flung around now the better, since what we are living in, is Their system, played by Their rules, and it needs to be radically deconstructed.

UNIVERSITIES ...AAAAAAAAAAAAAH!!!!!!! By James Reed

Just to bring you up to date on the wild and woolly world of university litigation, truly exhilarating stuff, like mountain climbing:

https://www.theaustralian.com.au/higher-education/james-cook-university-ordered-to-pay-peter-ridd-12m-for-unlawful-dismissal/news-story/...

'James Cook University has been ordered to pay reef scientist Peter Ridd $1.2 million for unlawfully dismissing him after he publicly criticised the institution's climate change science. Federal Circuit Court Justice Salvatore Vasta on Friday handed down the penalty following hearings earlier this year. He ordered the Townsville university to pay Dr Ridd $1,094,214.47 as compensation for past and future economic loss because of the unlawful sacking, as well as general compensation for more than "three years of unfair treatment". JCU will have to pay a further $125,000 as a way of penalty. The judge lambasted the university, saying it had "failed to respect (Dr Ridd's) rights to intellectual freedom". The physics professor, who specialised in marine environments and worked at JCU for 30 years, on Friday lamented the ugly affair, saying it was "a fight that should never have started in the first place". "I have worked for 35 years on the Great Barrier Reef, and my genuinely held belief is that there are systemic quality assurance problems at Great Barrier Reef science institutions," he said. "I had a right, a duty, to say this...JCU have still not accepted this fundamental right despite the importance of the debate to the north Queensland region." Dr Ridd said that if JCU appeals, which it can do within the next three weeks, it would cast doubt on the institution's claim to uphold academic freedom. Having already spent more than $200,000 of his own money fighting the legal battle, on top of $260,000 accumulated through a crowdsourcing campaign, Dr Ridd said he would need to ask for further donations to fight an appeal. JCU is believed to have spent more than $600,000 in legal fees. "My lawyers say it is a landmark case so it is imperative that we continue the fight if necessary," Dr Ridd said. JCU has previously said it will appeal the decision and declined to comment further on the Friday's ruling.

"The university's position will be addressed in its appeal," a spokesman said in a statement. Dr Ridd was sacked last year after being censured three times for publicly criticising his colleagues and the university. He claimed the science regarding the effects of coral bleaching and global warming on the Great Barrier Reef was not subject to adequate quality assurance. In April, Justice Vasta ruled the dismissal was a breach of the university's enterprise agreement. In a scathing judgment handed down on Friday, the judge criticised the university for an "blatantly untrue" and "appalling" public statement it issued after the April ruling. The statement, quoting Professor Chris Cocklin, was taken from an email that had been sent earlier to JCU staff denouncing the judge's decision. "The email was a blatant attempt to undermine this court's decision and sow doubts about findings that had both vindicated the position taken by Professor Ridd and restored his reputation," Justice Vasta said. Justice Vasta described Dr Ridd as "scrupulously honest". "He is a person who does not make statements lightly and there is genuine conviction in what he says," he said. "The passion he has for his work and for the Great Barrier Reef is plain for all to see." Gideon Rozner, from the Institute of Public Affairs, which bankrolled some of Dr Ridd's legal fees, said the decision should force JCU to rethink its appeal. "The very fact that an Australian university is willing to force the weight of an entire administration backed by taxpayer funds to stifle an academic's freedom of speech sends a massive chilling effect to any academic engaging in public debate in Australia," Mr Rozner said. At a penalty hearing in July, Dr Ridd said his career prospects had been tarnished by the controversy.'

So, there you go. What exciting places universities are! It seems, in an article that is not on the net, that Paul Johnson argued something like this: "Universities? We'd Be Better Off Without Them," The Australian, September 18, 1991, p. 21. The article may be located by someone with more energy than me, or someone with a university research assistant, paid by a grant. Lovely.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To The Australian Although I support Brexit 100%, I'm not sure it is accurate of Jennifer Oriel to state that "no one can deny that Brexit represents the will of the British people" (Born-to-rule Remainers ignoring will of the people, 9/9). It certainly represents a majority in the 2016 referendum and may represent a majority of Britons today; but a large number of UK voters were and are against it. Thus we have the tragedy of a nation deeply divided on a very great constitutional issue. However, the first responsibility for the present chaotic situation undoubtedly rests with elements in the Remain camp including various powerful elites, through their failure to accept a majority preference. They deserve to lose. Let us hope they do, and without violence.

MELBOURNE (& SYDNEY) ARE NO LONGER AUSTRALIAN CITIES

By James Reed

You need to hear what we say from someone outside of our circle. Here is independent Australian film maker from the Dissent Right, Richard Wolstencroft, arguing that Melbourne, and Sydney are no longer Australian cities. He discusses the Asian demographics, with the universities being 60 percent and more Asian students, (so that the future elites will be primarily Chinese e.g. doctors, dentists etc.) and when locals are considered, majority Asian. The major cities are gone. And then there is Middle Eastern crime, which is so extensive that it has even taken over the former bkie gangs, making a Blade Runner kind of world.

<https://www.facebook.com/reportfromtigermountain/>

Many of us living in the green leafy suburbs, or in the country, may not be aware of this, not being confronted by stark realities every second of every day. I suggest a day trip to the city, maybe on a weekday, visiting the universities and spending some time there. Then the CBD, especially Sydney. Look and learn, as the title of the old magazine put it.

SOUTH EAST QLD WILDFIRES CAUSED BY DECADES OF DANGEROUS LABOR PARTY POLICIES

Thousands of hectares of wallum scrub and once open forest in the Sunshine and Gold Coast hinterlands and seaside suburbs were razed this week in what was a preventable inferno. Many homes and the historic Binna Burra Lodge in the Gold Coast hinterland were lost to wildfire. Where were the fire breaks? Where was the back burning in the days or weeks before?

The Labor state government's poor management record of forest and national park reserves across the state will see more of these dangerous conflagrations especially during long periods of dry weather.

The Deputy Premier, comrade Jackie Trad, a Green tragic, was quick to blame 'climate change' but she is bereft of any intelligence to know the widespread hot ember storm was caused by her UN-inspired policies of no firebreaks, no heavy machinery, no hazard reduction burning and no cattle grazing on any land...

BLACK "RACISM" IN SOUTH AFRICA: LIBTARDS VERY QUIET ON THIS ONE By "Jammers" Reed

The liberal press has reported on this, but the philosophical significance of the South African "racist" riots, is never detailed, for how could it be since it refutes their entire world view? Still, the bare facts are reported:

www.nytimes.com/2019/09/05/world/africa/south-africa-xenophobia-riots.html

'South Africa is facing a backlash after rioters in and around Johannesburg targeted immigrants from other African countries this week, torching their shops and leading to at least 10 deaths. Now, angry citizens and governments across the continent are lashing out at South Africa and its businesses, denouncing what they call "xenophobia." Africans across the continent once rallied behind South Africans in their struggle to defeat the apartheid government, which was finally replaced in elections held 25 years ago. Now, some Africans find themselves in the unfamiliar position of protesting the actions of the same communities in South Africa that they once stood with in solidarity. "The only time we've seen this type of cooperation of African countries in terms of backlash," said Tunde Leye, a partner at the Nigerian political research firm SBM Intelligence, "was in terms of support of the anti-apartheid movement." Anti-immigrant sentiment is a longstanding issue in South Africa, where the legacies of colonialism and apartheid run deep, and a political shift has not delivered meaningful change to many poor South Africans. Immigrants from countries like Nigeria, Mozambique, Somalia and Zimbabwe are often regarded by South Africans as competitors for jobs and social services. In South Africa, attacks on foreigners have become common, and they surged beginning Sunday when rioters stormed neighborhoods in and around Johannesburg, lighting fires and breaking into shops.'

While the liberals would like to continue to blame the legacy of apartheid, most of the people doing the rioting and killing were not even alive during that era. To do so as well denies agency to these people, which is "racist." So, yes, this is an example of Blacks revolting against mass immigration, showing that the narrative developed by the Left that only white super-racists oppose being swamped by migrants, is just plain false.
