THOUGHTS OF THE WEEK: “Marshall “Aid” to China Marshall’s prestige was so great upon arriving in China that he succeeded in persuading Chiang Kai-shek to sign an armistice. January 10, 1946. The armistice proved a godsend to Soviet policy. At that moment there were no Chinese Communists in Manchuria, which Russia occupied under the Yalta agreement. Russia therefore planned (a) to send as many Chinese Communists as possible from North China to Manchuria to be armed with equipment and munitions taken from the Japanese; (b) to retain its Russian army in Manchuria until it could be replaced by Chinese Communists properly equipped. On April 14, 1946, Chinese Communists, well armed, broke the armistice and attacked Chang-chun in Manchuria. Marshall, furious, unable to touch the Communists, took it out on the nationalists—he stopped all military supplies to Chiang’s armies. At the beginning of the summer, 1946, endeavouring to force Chiang to admit Communists into his Government, he instructed the State Department to refuse further export licences for munitions to China. From the summer 1946, to February 1948, the Chinese Government did not receive a single cartridge for its American arms, during which period the Communists got all they needed from Russia and were able to occupy vast tracts of territory. In September 1946, Marshall deliberately broke the American contract to furnish aircraft, munitions, and supplies for a period of three years, since when neither bomber nor fighter has been delivered against the contract. Chiang, nevertheless, persisted in refusing to admit Communists into his Government.

12 June 1947. Marshall returned to the USA to become Secretary of State, embittered equally against Chinese Nationalists and Communists and equally blind to the mortal danger facing China, as also the fact that a Japan alongside a Communist China could only survive by becoming a Russian satellite. Truman always under Marshall influence refuses to see that the independence and integrity of China is the key to US. Pacific security.”

A PART OF CHINA By James Reed

The first Chinese-born lawmaker to be elected to Australia’s Parliament has come under attack over her links to a Chinese foreign influence network. Gladys Liu, who was born in Hong Kong in 1964, was elected to the conservative government in May elections to represent a Melbourne electoral division with a large population of ethnic Chinese voters. She has come under media scrutiny recently over her membership in organizations overseen by the United Front Work Department of the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee, which exert influence on important individuals, organizations and governments outside China. Concern is growing about China’s influence in Australia, which last year banned covert foreign interference in domestic politics. Australian Broadcasting Corp reported Tuesday that Chinese government records indicate that Liu, who migrated to Australia in 1985, was a member of two provincial councils of the China Overseas Exchange Association between 2003 and 2015.

That association reported to the State Council, China’s chief administrative authority, when Liu was a member, but has since merged with the United Front Work Department.

(continued from previous page) She told Sky News television later Tuesday that she “cannot recall” being a member of those provincial councils. “If I can’t recall, I cannot be an active member of that council, can I?” she told Sky News. “I can tell you that I have never been a member of this council.” But in a statement Wednesday, Liu said she held an “honorary role” in the council she had referred to — Guangdong Overseas Exchange Association — in 2011. But she said she no longer had any association with that organization. “Unfortunately, some Chinese associations appoint people to honorary positions without their knowledge or permission. I do not wish my name to be used in any of these associations and I ask them to stop using my name,” she said. “I have resigned from many organizations and I am in the process of auditing any organizations who may have added me as a member without my knowledge or consent,” she added.

Opposition lawmakers on Wednesday accused Liu of making misleading statements about her past links to “Chinese Communist Party propaganda arms.” She has also come under fire for failing to condemn China’s military grab for contested territory in the South China Sea. Asked in the Sky News interview if she agreed that China’s efforts to take over most of the South China Sea were unlawful, she replied, “I definitely put Australia’s interests first.”

She said Wednesday that during the interview “I was not clear and should have chosen my words better.” “We do not take sides on competing territorial claims but we call on all claimants to resolve disputes peacefully and in accordance with international law,” she said of Australia’s policy on the South China Sea. Damien

Kingsbury, a Deakin University expert on international politics, said the controversy surrounding Liu raised national security concerns. “She’s certainly seen to have a link to an organization that is associated with intelligence-gathering operations and that would have to be very worrying,”

Kingsbury said. I simply cannot see what all of the fuss is about here, since Australia is part of China, so of course our new leaders, elites and future prime minister, may have a “Chinese connection.” The critique above smacks of assimilationism and ignores the majesty of multicultural Asia, Asia, Asia, diversity and our beatific Chinese destiny, as we eternally atone for the infinitely evil, evil, evil white Australia policy, genocide against everybody, including mother Gaia, global warming, discrimination and intolerance towards transgressing dolphins, and alphabetically challenged cyborgs on other planets in distant universes and white privilege radiating throughout the cosmos, causing all matter of quantum mechanical racist effects.

Did I forget anything? Did I forget anybody? If so blame my white privilege. In fact, what we need is to bring back the 14th century fanatical religious practice of the flagellants, who had a morbid mortification of the flesh, only make it for white flesh, and base the cult around the universities. Guild-ridden socialist students and obese Leftist academics could go on city parades of self-inflicted whippings, to atone for the guilt of having white skin. The ageing boomer academics may need to use wheelchairs and use their white student slaves for the whippings, not being the people they were in the heady days of 1968. It would be a small start on the road of transinfinite guilt. ***

CHINESE-STYLE FACE RECOGNITION COMING HERE By James Reed

Soon the government will be able to recognise your beautiful face everywhere, maybe in places where you have not even gone, such as crime scenes:

<https://www.9news.com.au/national/a-current-affair-facial-recognition-technology-australia-surveillance/ee91eacf-1c6c-4a1d-bba9-0d400984217c>

‘Privacy advocates have issued a warning about a new proposed government facial recognition database, saying: “This changes the nature of the world we’re in.” Dubbed “The Capability”, the system would match images of people captured on CCTV with their driver’s license and passport photos. The database could be shared with government agencies, police and anti-corruption agencies and, in some cases, private organisations.

“They’re going to use this database with face recognition to be able to pick people out so you’ll be able to take CCTV footage and be able to automatically identify people,” Professor Toby Walsh, from the University of New South Wales, told A Current Affair. “The government hasn’t shown itself to be too competent at looking after our data and if bad actors are out there they could use that data for whatever purposes.” Professor Walsh is an expert in artificial intelligence, and told A Current Affair the technology is similar to surveillance software used in China.

The cameras are the back-bone of the country’s “social credit system” which awards or deducts points depending on a citizen’s behaviour. If a person’s rating gets too low, they could be prevented from doing everyday activities like catching the train or flying.’

It only makes sense to install the same type of system China is using here in the colony, as we are a part of China now. I suppose that freedom will be like sex, something nice one used to have in a world long gone. You think back: did I know freedom or was it all just a dream? ***

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To The Australian Ann Rennie rightly praises traditional teaching styles ("Teachers: thought leaders and influencers", 17/9) when she notes that in the past (more often, alas, than in the present) "deep knowledge and passion for a subject was passed on by well-educated, erudite and occasionally eccentric enthusiasts." These old-style teachers had permanent tenure, were respected by parents and society as a whole, and were not handicapped by having to spend hours and hours on unnecessary clerical work and "professional improvement" courses. An important aspect of their carrying out of their roles was humility. Another was recognition that, while all roads lead to God (not to Rome, thank you!), there are different roads by which individuals can travel. They were not fanatics, misusing the classroom to engage in facile indoctrination into simplistic ideology and rude activism. How can we return to that Golden Age? One essential is courage. Teachers opposed to declining standards in their profession and their supporters in wider society must outspokenly contest the factors that have led to the corruption of the education process. The defence of intellectual freedom is paramount.

THE OBLIVION AGENDA By Brian Simpson

Mike Adams has a new site devoted to the global conspiracy to kill us deplorables off, the "oblivion agenda":

<https://www.naturalnews.com/2019-09-16-new-site-oblivion-agenda-globalist-agenda-for-annihilation.html>

Nothing beats a grand conspiracy linking it all together: "This lecture series, which is strongly rooted in science and scientific explanations, covers:

- The terraforming of planet Earth via deliberate pollution of the skies through two programs: SCoPEX (funded by Bill Gates) and Stratospheric Aerosol Injection (SAI).
- The planned collapse of all global food webs by dimming the sun and impairing photosynthesis.
- How the SCoPEX project would drop lead on all food crops and water sources across the planet, resulting in the mass poisoning of humanity (which is the goal).
- Why Earth has cosmic value to non-Earth civilizations.
- How the annihilation of human beings is already under way and being accelerated through both "soft kill" and "hard kill" vectors.
- How it's all being justified as a way to "save the planet" and stop "global warming."
- The promotion of cannibalism by left-wing globalists, insisting that humans will need to eat corpses to save the planet.
- The existence of Faster-Than-Light (FTL) technology and exactly how it works to travel faster than the speed of light without violating the laws of physics.

- Why the speed of light is not a constant (and how the NIST cheated by defining it as a constant).
- How vaccines are engineered to cause infertility, spontaneous abortions and death.
- How the food and water supplies are laced with chemicals to interfere with cognition in order to dumb everybody down.
- The end goals of terraforming planet Earth, and a detailed reverse engineering of the type of exobiologicals who would be compatible with the terraforming end points. (Hint: It's not us.)
- Cosmic economics, including competition, territory, conflict, logistics and the harvesting of energy from pulsars.
- Understanding FTL travel, the value of energy, the pace of empire expansion, the importance of "space lanes" and other details about the reality of a complex universe filled with life.
- How Earth can easily detect FTL travel from non-Earth ships. And why those ships would almost certainly resemble asteroids and space rocks."

The bit that interests me as a science teacher, even more than our threatened annihilation, which we know anyway, is the stuff about faster than light travel, which is something Big Al's theory of relativism, sorry, relativity would preclude, so I am keen to see how that one plays out. ***

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor of Stock Journal,

Minister Simon Birmingham is negotiating a Trade Deal with the European Union as reported in the Stock Journal Sep 12. The Minister has noted some gains likely with reduced tariffs. I do hope he will negotiate from a position of strength where he can promote our sought-after leading products known to be so clean and green. Also from that position of strength, he can delete any reference to the EU having any favoured access to purchase our real estate, which has been evident in other Trade Deals. With the current dilemma over water in the Murray Darling Basin, he should also remind potential EU investors that our water resources are not for sale.

Yours etc Ken Grundy

IN PRAISE OF “ABNORMAL” COUNTRIES By Peter Ewer

Russia, who is bravely standing against the maelstrom of modernist madness, has been criticised for being an “abnormal country.” Yet, in an age of near total insanity, this surely a moral victory, being an inversion of foul is fair and fair is foul:

<https://www.rt.com/news/468423-pentagon-russia-normal-country/>

‘It’s better not to be a “more normal country” if that means being as prone to invasions and coups as the United States, top Russian ministers have said, firing back at bizarre remarks by a new Pentagon chief. It would be “great” if the West “could get Russia to behave like a more normal country,” Mark Esper, the newly appointed defense secretary, was reported to have claimed while visiting Paris this week.

That remark did not go down well with Moscow, however. “If he said so, he called upon us to act as a normal country [as such] and not like the United States,” Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov told a press briefing in the Russian capital, where he and Defense

GREENS KNOW By Viv Forbes

Greens know that Australia could not electrify our cities, farms, mines, refineries and factories, nor power our road, rail, air and sea transport with just solar, wind, hydro and batteries. Yet green activists, their adoring media, their tax-funded academics, their subsidised green “industries” and their vote-seeking politicians keep babbling about “zero emissions”.

Greens know that Australia could not feed itself without farmers, graziers and truckies using electric and diesel-powered pumps, tractors, harvesters and trucks to produce food and deliver it to the cities every day. Yet they tax and vilify diesel and make electricity more expensive and less reliable. And they lock up productive grasslands and open forests thus producing pest-ridden “parks” and “protected” vegetation infested with feral animals and invaded by inedible and fire-prone eucalypt weeds.

Greens know that we need more water storage just for today’s population. Yet they continue to sterilise potential dam sites, delay new dams, and waste conserved water on “environmental flows”. At the same time they boost water consumption with more tourists, games, immigrants and “refugees”.

Greens know they need a crisis in power, food and water to achieve their goal of centralised UN control of all aspects of our lives. Thanks to the many fools and quislings in Federal, State and Local governments, and in tax-funded academia, education and bureaucracy, this sinister hidden agenda is well advanced.

And all of this will provide ZERO climate benefits. Maybe the Greens are just the old reds in Green uniforms? ***

Minister Sergey Shoigu had a face-to-face meeting with French counterparts. Otherwise, we should have been acting like the US, bombing Iraq and Libya in blatant violation of international law... We should have supported coups, violent and anti-constitutional, like the US and its closest allies did in February 2014 [in Ukraine]. What's more, if Russia followed Washington's instructions, then “we would have spent millions on intervening in the affairs of other countries as Congress has done by authorizing $20 million for supporting democracy in Russia,” Lavrov stated. On his part, Shoigu also said that normalcy has a different meaning for Moscow then. We will probably remain [an] abnormal [country].’

Let us hope that Russia can stick it out against the moral decadence of the West, and remain an “abnormal” country, given what “normality” now means. ***

TARGET FOR THE WEEK

We frequently publish a specific Target for actionists but we realise most actionists do not wait for the suggestion; they take the initiative and simply act on current issues. Please join those who just get on with it. Federal MP, Andrew Hastie from WA recently warned of the dangerous impact countries like China are having on our internal political affairs and many actionists wrote to him with support. This is very important to boost the morale of those bold enough to speak out as Mr Hastie did. It also shows that we have a positive side to us. He wrote back to one actionist, saying in part, ...“Many people like you engaged with my position in a reasoned and thoughtful manner. Some commented without reading it or chose to misrepresent my arguments. Others demanded silence. But you joined thousands of people across Australia who have backed me up. For this I am most grateful.” -ND
