THE BEGINNINGS OF SOMETHING SOUND TO TAKE IT'S PLACE by Arnis Luks

With Y2K and 9/11 came world-wide psy-ops, psychological operations to cause the whole world to move in certain directions. The final result of the Y2K fear was a relative non-event, however 9/11 started a series of changes and wars that are still ongoing. Specific government departments like Homeland Security, the Surveillance State and Technocracy (Chinese social credit) have since come into being. The world police state is before us all, including Australia. Note: most of the surveillance technology emanating within the USA.

The federal ALP is now asking to recall Parliament to pass emergency legislation (that just happens to have already been prepared) to manage the perceived pandemic. I remember reading of the ancient forests tribes, (living, I think in New Guinea), who were so relieved to receive the Christian message. Their comments were telling: the 'good news' stopped the devils in the forest from frightening us. The witchdoctors no longer had a hold of them using fear. Several reports coming out of the New South Wales are already laying the groundwork for a triage mindset. That is: as the pressure for hospital beds becomes greater, the old and infirmed are to be dropped off the list - survival of the fittest.

In our online library are excellent resources to help understand what is going on, one titled "The Art of War" by Sun Tzu. Another titled "The Crowd" by Gustave Le Bon. A third offering is "The Enemy Within" by RJ DeJaegher. These lay the pattern of organisational infiltration and propaganda manipulation to achieve sought objectives. If you do not know what is happening you cannot resist it. Gilad Atzmon would refer to the current phenomena over the coronavirus as 'pre-traumatic stress disorder'. The 'event' does not actually take place but the fear is ongoing. Unfortunately a lot of 'conservative' websites are not helpful by propagating this same fear of catastrophic results 'not yet realised'.

While the world does not know what is going to happen over the next 16 days, Soviet president Putin is having plans put in place that will secure his virtually-automatic Soviet Republic presidency for the next 16 years. Such is the nature of war and psy-ops.

Douglas Social Credit (faithful dealings-ed) is the answer, what is the question? Devolution OR Revolution!

I note that the Australian Medical Association is calling for mass-medication via Fluoride in the water for NSW and Queensland councils who may choose otherwise. Nothing of course to do with fluoride being a sedative and only 1% of 1% being of any use to young children to reduce dental caries. Unmetered quantities 'for all' without any monitoring for adverse effects, nor adjustment of dosage to suit. Good science indeed! MSDS extract: Intake of more than 1.5 mg/L of fluoride can cause dental fluorosis, with amounts of greater than 4 mg/L possibly causing skeletal fluorosis. Symptoms include weight loss, brittle bones, anaemia, weakness, and stiffness of joints. Chronic exposure may result in adverse effects on the heart, central nervous system, circulatory system, kidneys, and skeleton.

COULD THE CORONAVIRUS BE A PLOY TO BRING IN THE CASHLESS SOCIETY?

By James Reed

I have been reading Brian Simpson's take on the coronavirus issue, and disturbances produced by the crisis. How are the elites to benefit from this crisis?

The WHO's warnings follow the People's Bank of China last month started disinfecting currency deposited at Chinese banks using ultraviolet light, before quarantining the bills for a week before releasing them back into circulation. Brits, and their fellow Europeans, should be increasingly careful as the virus spreads across Europe, the WHO warned, via the Telegraph:

"We know that money changes hands frequently and can pick up all sorts of bacteria and viruses," a spokesman told the Telegraph. "We would advise people to wash their hands after handling banknotes, and avoid touching their face. When possible, it would also be advisable to use contactless payments to reduce the risk of transmission."

Of course, that one of the world's major NGOs is seizing the opportunity to proclaim the virtues of 'paperless' money is hardly a surprise: the globalist push toward a 'cashless society' has been underway for years, having had its biggest successes in Scandinavia. Sweden has gone virtually "cashless", and in such a short time, they've already confronted the many drawbacks of relying exclusively on digital money."

So, bringing in cashless society could be one of many agenda items behind the coronavirus controversy. Read further here: <https://www.zerohedge.com/health/six-reasons-why-covid-19-fails-sniff-test> ***

WHAT WILL WE TELL OUR CHILDREN ? By David Smith

Have you ever considered that Australians will demand to be vaccinated for a virus that has been engineered to cause the panic we are now seeing; not only us Aussies but all peoples around the globe who are daily fed fear via their TV. Not only will they demand to be personally vaccinated, they will also demand everyone else do so as well. So if you had engineered this virus you would certainly make sure you had a patented vaccine up your sleeve to "cure or control" the virus.

History is replete with examples of control by engineered fear as the above example, shown by the renowned historian Nesta Webster who wrote extensively on the French and Russian revolutions. Mike Adams (Natural News) believes this is another plan by the globalists to control the world population explosion.

That there are other ways to sensibly provide for the entire world population without the pollution, without the want and disaffection so endemic in society is never given news space by the controlled media.

William Cobbett, the English historian, wrote in Rural Rides, "A most important matter it is, to put paupers in the way of ceasing to be paupers." He was writing about the social factors that were causing the dislocation of people from their homes and food supply. It is still going on today, our politicians using double speak. When they say decentralisation they centralise control further, they herd more people away from their rural homes and self-sufficient lifestyles into bigger cities producing all the miseries and friction that attend such close confinement.

The globalist elite have long been working behind the scenes to bring about the scenario we see today. Control, engineered by fear, also taking away our independent means of sustenance, CASH, coinage, to bring all under their control. "so none dare breath against their will" as quoted by me from Pope Pius XI in my poem "The Power of The Unseen Hand" in Dynoems.

I write this primarily because I am convicted of the statement that there are truths that can set us free, and for the guidance of my grandchildren. I write this because I know there are alternatives to centralised control.

Freedom means nothing if we are not able to speak our mind against popular opinion; it means nothing if we are not able to choose what enters our body. Health does not come from a syringe, never did. I believe it is as Christ said; "you don't get figs from thistles" and if we wish figs we must actively pursue policies that produce figs and demand accountability of our leaders for the results.

How are we to explain away the words He taught us to pray, namely that; "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven" if we are not meant to actively seek His will (truth and justice) here on earth. Where would we be today without the known history of men and women moved with compassion, to deliver those absolutes to humanity.

A while back on the news I saw our health minister Greg Hunt MP deny involvement with a Brisbane based Technology company, Ellume, who produced a flu test kit, who also happened to have made a large ($100,000 was reported) donation to the Liberal party. A spokesman for Greg Hunt said "Neither the minister nor his office has to the best of their knowledge met with Ellume.... Any such claim would be demonstrably false". The news report then showed Mr Hunt proudly shaking hands (in September 2017) with Ellume's product manager, holding their flu test kit in his (Hunt's) other hand.

Extract: The public relations counsel extracts from his clients' causes ideas which will capitalize certain fundamental instincts in the people he is trying to reach, and then sets about to project these ideas to his public... These instincts are utilized by the public relations counsel in developing ideas and emotions which will modify the opinions and actions of his public...

The action of public health officials in stressing the possibility of a plague or epidemic is effective because it appeals to the emotion of fear, and presents the possibility of preventing the spread of the epidemic or plague. Of course, the element of flight in this particular situation is not one of movement, but of a desire to get away from the danger...Pugnacity with its attendant emotion of anger is a human constant. The public relations counsel uses this continually in constructing all kinds of events that will call it into play. Because of it, too, he is often forced to enact combats and create issues. He stages battles against evils in which the antagonist is personified for the public...New York City, when it wants to reduce the death rate from tuberculosis, aligns its citizens yearly in a fight against the disease and continues the idea of combat by announcing the number of victims from year to year. It uses the terminology of warfare in these bulletins. Such phrases in this or other health campaigns as "kill the germs," "swat the fly," illustrate this point. The public responds to a battle in a way that it might not respond to a plea to take care of itself or to do its civic duty. ***

AN AGRICULTURAL TESTAMENT By Albert Howard

Extract: The bail system. The most spectacular example of humus manufacture in the soil underneath a pasture is that to be seen on Mr. Hosier's land on the downs near Marlborough. By a stroke of the pen, as it were, he abolished the farm-yard, the cowshed, and the dung-cart in order to counter the fall in prices which followed the Great War. He reacted to adversity in the correct manner: he found it a valuable stimulant in breaking new ground.

The cows were fed and made to live out of doors. They were milked in movable bails. Their urine and dung were systematically distributed at little cost over these derelict pastures. The vegetable residues of the herbage came in contact with urine, dung, air, water, and bases. The stage was set for the Indore Process. Mr. Hosier's invisible labour force came into action: the micro-organisms in the soil manufactured a sheet of humus all over the downs: the earthworms distributed it.

The roots of the grasses and clovers were soon geared up with this humus by means of the mycorrhizal association. The herbage improved; the stock-carrying capacity of the fields went up by leaps and bounds.

Soil fertility accumulated; every five years or so it was cashed in by two or three straw crops; another period under grass followed, and so on. Incidentally the health of the animals also benefited; the prognostications of the neighbourhood (when this audacious innovation started) that the cows and heifers would soon perish through tuberculosis and other diseases have not been fulfilled. (Mr. Hosier has done more than solve a local problem and provide evidence in support of a new theory. His work has drawn attention to the potential value of our downlands -- areas which in Roman and Saxon times supported a large proportion of the population of Great Britain.) ***

WHEEL OF HEALTH By GT Wrench Chapter VI

Extract: "There is no better illustration of the soundness of the views regarding the types of diet which succeed in inducing good nutrition than the experience of the non-citizen Indian of the United States. All who observed the Indians in their primitive state agree that most of them were exceptional specimens of physical development. With few exceptions, however, during two generations they have deteriorated physically. The reason for this is apparently brought to light by a consideration of the kind of food to which they have restricted themselves since they have lived on reservations.

"There is no group of people with a higher incidence of tuberculosis than the non-citizen Indian. As wards of the Government they have been provided with money and land, but have in general shown little interest in agriculture. They have lived in idleness and have derived their food supplies from the agency stores.

taken large amounts of milled cereal products, syrup, molasses, sugar and canned foods, such as peas, corn, and tomatoes. In other words, they have come to subsist essentially upon a milled cereal, sugar, tuber, and meat diet. On such a regimen their teeth have rapidly become inferior and are badly decayed.

They suffer much from rheumatism and other troubles which result from local infections. Faulty dietary habits are, in great measure, to be incriminated for their susceptibility to tuberculosis.

"Other classes of Indians, who have become successful farmers, have not deteriorated as a result of contact with civilization, except in so far as they have suffered from alcohol and venereal infections. The non-citizen Indian has suffered not because of contact with civilization, but because he has been forced into dietary habits which are faulty..." diets on which men lived healthily or in the last case, fell from a state of living healthily. ***

THE PYRAMID OF POWER By CH Douglas

“Since all experience of centralised organisation indicates that, while strong against external attack, (such as the Armed Services) it is most vulnerable to disruption from within (that is why strict discipline is necessary).

Now it may be emphasised that a centralised or pyramid form of control may be, and is in certain conditions, the ideal organisation for the attainment of one specific and material end.

The only effective force by which any objective can be attained is in the last analysis, the human will, (that is why heroic acts in the line of duty are recognised) and if an organisation of this character can keep the will of all its component members focussed on the objective to be attained, the collective power available is clearly greater than can be provided by any other form of administration.

But, every particle of available evidence goes to

TARGET FOR THE WEEK

Support for Julian Assange:

The Australian citizen from “Wikileaks” found information on happenings in the wars operating in the Middle-East and published them for all to see. Of course it was embarrassing for the US military and they were very angry at the information becoming public.

Julian Assange was not like a spy who discovers secret information and provides it to the enemy. He found the information and revealed it to everyone including the citizens in countries fighting alongside the US troops as allies.

His seeking refuge in the Equadorian Embassy followed by harsh time in a UK prison is well known. Now a Court is hearing a request for him to be extradited to the US to face up to 175 years jail. Justice is not likely to prevail.

More is at stake than Julian Assange’s future. What about freedom of the press? Do we have a right to know the things Julian exposed?

A few months ago Australian Security raided offices, homes and computers of a number of journalists, mainly in the ABC and Newscorp. Journalist across the board protested in the strongest terms at such action but they have not uttered a word to protest at Julian Assange’s treatment.

He is not an American citizen and should not face charges there. He is Australian and should be brought home.

Contact your Federal MP and Senators asking for them to act and bring Assange home. Action is needed promptly because his main court case in the UK is only weeks away. He deserves your support. ***

show that it is totally unsuitable as a system of administration for the purposes of GOVERNING THE CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH WHOLE PEOPLES LIVE THEIR LIVES, and that it is in opposition to every real interest of the individual when so used. CLEAR RECOGNITION OF OBJECTIVES IS VITAL

The necessity for a clear recognition of the differences between the application of the principle to the attainment of a single objective and its fundamental unsuitability in dealing with complex issues is quite vital, and an analogy from the experience of the war may emphasise the distinction.

During the early days of the First World War struggle, large numbers of men sacrificed position as well as comfort and safety by enlisting in the ranks of the various services, well content if thereby the defeat of Germany might be achieved.

The military organism is essentially and necessarily pyramidal in form, and as a result the “standardized” environment, in spite of the best of goodwill, was undoubtedly a serious hardship to many, and was only borne in view of the nature of the situation.

It is quite certain that the difficulties resulting from this factor grew with the length of the War and the consequence of the characteristics of the system; and that any attempt to crystallise the position, subsequent to peace, on the basis of war, rank, or even achievement, would be violently resented and eventually upset.

While, therefore, every advance towards the single command has been a military gain per se, it would be absurd to suggest that it has indicated an avenue to social reform.”

*And yet that is what our financial and political masters are attempting. The man who wrote the original article predicted the attempt would eventually fail because it goes against the nature of Man.
