Thought For The Week: His Royal Highness The Duke of Edinburgh. 1921-2021 - Rest in Peace

A life well lived, His Royal Highness leaves us with a legacy of indomitable spirit, steadfastness and an unshakeable sense of duty. From all of us who serve today and who have served, thank you.

Our prayers and thoughts are with Her Majesty as she faces the trauma of a future without her life-long husband, partner and support of over 73 years.

A NEW SET OF RULES By Arnis Luks

This year marks the Centenary of the formation of the Royal Australian Air Force. There are media articles eulogising the bravery of our servicemen at those times of greatest peril. Australians have always boxed above their weight in individual bravery.

The threat of 1914 and again of 1939 was of a looming dark age being imposed by a dictatorial power. The multiple fronts of COVID 19, the war on terror and global warming are also threatening of a similar looming dark age by other dictatorial powers over arching the entire planet. Alternative media outlets are reporting of plans to trigger more crisis such as monetary collapse and mutant variations of other pandemics ready to roll out.

Karl Marx while in London, in a secret note sent to the Socialist International in Geneva 1870, mentioned that England would never move to revolution of its own volition, that it was necessary that foreigners would have to make it for them.

Eric D Butler's excellent booklet titled "The Fountainhead Of The Socialist Conspiracy", and also EDB's complimentary video "The Fabian Idea Throughout History", both build the case that the present looming dark age has been imported onto the West by agent provocateur's, secret societies such as the English Fabian Society and its associated organisations within western nations, our own education institutions following the ideas of the London School of Economics, and also willing stooges, who pursue policies they would never have thought of, had the Fabians not put the ideas there in the first place.

The work of the Fabian Societies in alignment within our own Conservative government and upper levels of our bureaucracy, needs to be understood in light of the purpose and design behind Cultural Marxism, which ultimately is world government, or if you like, an entirely planned society administered by technocrats.

Confused Messages - Cognitive Dissonance

In a recent email Andrew Hastie highlighted that the Australian Defence Forces' core business is the application of lethal violence in the defence of our values, sovereignty and interests. Hastie also mentions being personally honoured in serving the current defence Minister Peter Dutton.

Peter Dutton is recently pictured in the media with Australian Defence Force military personnel, under the caption "We've got your backs", in a campaign directed towards our diggers. This is while some of Australia's most decorated servicemen are under investigation and potential prosecution in the form of an obscure court that will take international witness testimony via video link up of events in a selected theatre of war not on Australian soil, essentially lawfare against our own combatants - a one sided view of the conflict - absurd.

All must be treated equally before the law. These conflicting and mixed messages showing the utter humbug of our leaders. Any show trial of a selected theatre of war in a foreign land would be subject to a very selective type of international law.

Australian law only has jurisdiction in Australia administered equally to all

We witnessed the humbug of “war-crimes” trials during the 1990s, of a selected theatre of war only against the vanquished. No question of atomic annihilation and deliberate genocide of the vanquished came into question during those trials, nor investigations – no equality before the law, but selective theatres and only the vanquished.

Modern Warfare

As a culture, we are physically and technologically capable of annihilating life on earth. Our service personnel are given tools of enormous lethal capacity to execute a military function in a foreign land. That there are atrocities that occurred from all sides is not at all surprising and must be expected. The function of killing another human being is not normal. Less than 2% of any population are naturally capable of executing this task. Our service personnel are deliberately brought into a psychological state of warfare for each deployment where they are able to perform at this level of violence towards another human being.

Sir Peter Cosgrove was concerned that repeated deployments could have contributed to the alleged war crimes in Afghanistan, here:

<https://www.abc.net.au/news/2020-10-27/peter-cosgrove-concerned-over-repeat-deployments/12807732>

Writing in the English Sunday Express, on 28th November, 1920, H.G. Wells said: “Big business is by no means antipathetic to Communism. The larger big business grows the more it approximates to Collectivism. It is the upper road of the few instead of the lower road of the masses to Collectivism.”

A strong voice on the inquiry into alleged crimes in Afghanistan, Sir Peter said vicissitudes between tours of duty in war zones and time spent at home were part of several systematic factors that were having a detrimental effect on Australian troops.

“I theorise that getting yourself up for the operational tour, coming back, getting to acquaint yourself with your loved ones, getting to practice some level of normality — and then, before you know it, you’re wanted for the next operational tour of duty, and here you go climbing the mountain again. This, to me, is a great stressor.”

However, Sir Peter denied the systematic impact of frequent tours reflected a failure of military leadership, despite 55 separate incidents being investigated by the Brereton inquiry, along with two inquiries into war crimes allegations launched by the AFP.

Senator Jacqui Lambie demands a Royal Commission into veteran suicides

<https://www.2gb.com/senator-jacqui-lambie-demands-a-royal-commission-into-veteran-suicides/>

The Queen is the head of our armed services, not our politicians. Politicians are ministers to the Crown. Our loyalty as any type of bureaucrat, politician, minister, public servant or citizen is to God, Queen and Country - in that order.

I, (name), swear that I will well and truly serve Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Second, Her Heirs and Successors according to law, as a member of the (insert Royal Australian Navy, Australian Army, or Royal Australian Air Force) ... and that I will resist her enemies and faithfully discharge my duty according to law. SO HELP ME GOD!

Extract from On Target Vol. 56 No. 43 Nov 2020

The hidden masters above governments pursue policy leading to war but fail to be acknowledged and held to account as a direct consequence of their pursuit of this policy, with great trauma being inflicted on both the combatants and the enemy. All wars are bankers wars, to control another’s resources and balance the national debt. The war on terror was for oil resources, nothing more. If major nuclear powers actually went to total war, they have the capacity to literally and actually destroy the planet. We need to find a better way to resolve issues.

We need a royal commission to hold those personally responsible for initiating wars to account, and equally as important, to respond adequately to our returning servicemen and women, who are all in some way deeply injured. This places the correct emphasis of the barbarity of war and the false pursuit of war crimes against our conditioned soldiers acting as agents of the (abstraction) state, when the real perpetrators and beneficiaries of war hide in the shadows remote from accountability. (End of Extract)

Cultural Marxism

With so many mixed messages, the deciphering of the purpose is not straightforward. The news cycle is continuously depicting the “alpha” male as abhorrent. Yet the alpha male is more likely to be capable of defending the family and equally importantly the community. The deconstruction of this role model is deliberate to weaken the resolve of aspiring alpha males, further compounding the mixed messages directed to our service personnel and our young males looking for that role model to mimic.

The discussion around combat ‘flight suits’ for pregnant fighter-pilots further confuses this argument by placing the pregnant female as equally capable of performing the “alpha” male role in the theatre of war. The nature of the female is of nurture and protection whilst rearing the young. The natural release of hormones during pregnancy further discount the ability to perform adequately in a full combat role. This is a double deconstruction.

The traditional family unit is deliberately rent asunder sending us back towards pre-agricultural times.

Traditional Role Models

In an obscure 1900 work by Edward Jenks titled "A History of Politics", presents the case of the pre-agricultural peoples not appreciating monogamy, nor polygamy. Capt James Cook observed this first-hand with the more than casual sexual activity between his crewmen and the Tahitian and Māori women.

The traditional family unit, when looking back to ancient cultures, has been an evolving arrangement. Regressing back to random mating (cultural marxism) across a suitable generation is an entirely foreign concept to our modern understanding and yet was practiced in front of Cook by a peoples who were at the early stages of agricultural man. An ancient saying from Africa is "it takes a village to raise a child", places an entirely different emphasis on our appreciation of ancient cultures. The children of cross-tribe mating did not have a biological father present, but rather the tribe. Read further here: https://alor.org/Storage/Library/PDF/Jenks_E-History_Of_Politics.pdf

This all makes natural sense if you consider the loss of viable genetic material in times of extreme duress such as war, or physical isolation causing inbreeding in an island community.

The Dangers of a Woke Military By Shaun Rieley - April 5th, 2021

Extract

Standing militaries always sit uneasily, even paradoxically, within a liberal democracy: They are essentially authoritarian institutions, but they are established and maintained by liberal democratic governments charged with the task of defending political and individual liberty. While liberal democracies emphasize individual rights, inclusivity, and equality, military effectiveness requires exclusivity, group identity, and hierarchy.

To reinforce the collective and hierarchical nature of military institutions, and to facilitate the formation of group identity, the armed forces make use of thick symbolism: uniforms, rank insignia, unit insignia, customs and courtesies, personal grooming standards, and the like. Meanwhile, liberal democracies tend toward a suspicion of tradition and the thick social symbolism it requires.

Until recently, this paradox went mostly unremarked in American society. While the liberal left of the 1960s viewed the military with suspicion, even revulsion, an earlier generation of progressives saw little tension in "making the world safe for democracy" through the use of military force. And in any case, the paradox seemed unresolvable.

Liberal democracies, like all political communities, need effective—exclusive, cohesive, hierarchical—militaries to defend them against aggressors, regardless of the tension with the broader society.

The primary political problem to be addressed in this was how to ensure that a standing military did not become dangerous to the liberties of those they were to protect, especially guarding against the threat of military coups and imposition of martial law.

The question is of ancient pedigree: In The Republic, Plato discusses the difficulty of creating a warrior class that is effective at repelling enemies and yet is gentle toward friends and fellow citizens. And the question caused much debate during the framing of the American Constitution as well.

In Democracy in America, Alexis de Tocqueville pointed out that the love of equality which defines democracies tends to render any inequality present in society unacceptable, particularly as conditions become more equal. As conditions have become more equal in American society, even inequalities previously thought of as natural, and therefore intractable, have become offensive to Americans who are insistent on leveling all distinctions.

Tocqueville also pointed out that, while the commercial disposition of democratic societies will generally render them less war-like, democratic armies will tend to become more desirous of war given that the equality of social conditions offers fewer opportunities to distinguish oneself. The military service—and wartime service in particular—remains one of the few sources of genuine honor in democratic societies.

In recent years, the idea of military service as an obligation of citizens—and specifically male citizens—to contribute to the common defense has become obscured. Instead, it is increasingly seen as just another job that one might choose, or not. I suspect it is not coincidental that this mirrors the approach to the wars that the military has been asked to wage over the past two decades. There is no reason to ask the country at large to sacrifice for the war effort because the wars are optional: Primarily ideological rather than existential, they may be fought, or not.

War fighting has therefore fallen on a small percentage of the overall population. This has resulted in an growing divide between those who serve or have served and society at large. In many cases, this divide has become a kind of hero worship: Military service is revered precisely because it is the kind of thing that most people do not, and would not, choose to do.

Viewed this way, it follows that excluding anyone from any aspect of service—such as, for example, limiting combat arms roles to males—amounts to denying them the opportunity to earn distinction.

VALE PRINCE PHILIP, DUKE OF EDINBURGH

10 June 1921 – 9 April 2021

The Australian Monarchist League tonight mourns the passing of His Royal Highness Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, who has died aged 99 at Windsor Castle.

Ever since he knelt before the Queen and swore to be Her Majesty's "liege man of life and limb" at her Coronation in 1953, the Duke worked tirelessly as a steadfast, principled patron of the people of Great Britain, Australia, and all of the Commonwealth Realms.

The Duke's commitment to the armed forces, informed by his years of active service in the British Royal Navy, was profound.

The Duke was a Companion (Military Division) and later a Knight (General Division) of the Order of Australia, as well as holding the honorary military positions of Admiral of the Fleet of the Royal Australian Navy, Field Marshal of the Australian Army, Colonel-in-Chief of the Royal Australian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers, Colonel-in-Chief of the Australian Army Cadets and Marshal of the Royal Australian Air Force.

The Duke was a beloved husband of 73 years and a loyal consort of 69 years. He was a father of four, a grandfather of eight, and a great-grandfather of ten and family was of the utmost importance to him.

The Duke served as a patron of more than 800 organisations, devoting enormous energies to causes close to his heart, such as the environment, industry, sport and education.

Over 775,000 young people aged 14-24 have participated in the Duke of Edinburgh's Award in Australia since its establishment in 1956, together with the youth of more than 130 countries around the world. Its values of responsibility, engagement with community, and perseverance are a lifelong gift.

THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH'S AWARD

His Royal Highness was the longest-lived male member of the British royal family and his time as royal consort exceeds that of any other consort of the British royal family. Alongside the Duke's royal commitments, His Royal Highness was also known for his enjoyment of polo, carriage driving, flying, painting and good humour.

It should be noted that the Duke only retired from his royal duties on 2 August 2017, aged 96, having completed 22,219 solo engagements since 1952.

This is a time of deep sadness for Her Majesty the Queen, HRH Prince Charles and his siblings, as well as their children and grandchildren. Australians join with those mourning around the world in remembering the Duke with gratitude for his lifetime of public service. Our thoughts and prayers are with the Royal Family and all those who mourn at this time of grief.

(continued from page 3) Combine this with the rise of identity politics, and this denial of opportunity is seen to extend far beyond the individuals immediately effected; it impacts anyone who might happen to identify with them as well.

This seems to be the rationale, for example, behind the Pentagon's official press release responding to Carlson, which asserts that "the American military works best when it represents all the American people." On this account, the military is, first and foremost, an egalitarian and representative body, rather than an exclusive and hierarchical one.

But we are entitled to ask: Is this true? Could viewing the military as a representative body, and members of the military as representatives of their respective identity group, make for a more effective service? The short answer is: No. An effective military is not identical with a representative one, and neither does the military exist to be a representative institution. In fact, the opposite is closer to the truth.

Carlson's comments effectively highlight the tension between the social requirements of an effective military and the democratic social ideals of inclusion and equality. He was attacked for comments drawing attention back to the military's purpose for existing: to defend the country and its citizens from existential threats. When this end is subverted in favor of ideological pursuits disconnected from the realities of warfare and statecraft, the military does risk becoming less effective, because priorities are being assigned based on a rationale other than the fighting and winning of wars. The Sacking of Christine Holgate and Australia's Financial Independence

Our PM as "Alpha" Male - not!

October 22 2020 The Australia Post chief, Christine Holgate, has been stood down and the board put on notice pending an investigation into how the organisation spent $12,000 on Cartier watches as a reward for four senior managers.

Scott Morrison moved on Thursday to stem the damage from revelations in Senate estimates hearings earlier in the day, saying he had taken immediate action because he was "appalled, it's disgraceful and it's not on".

Morrison said Holgate, a former chief of the Blackmores Vitamin Company who joined Australia Post three years ago, had been instructed to step aside during the investigation. "If she doesn't wish to do that, she can go," he said.

The communications minister, Paul Fletcher, and the finance minister, Mathias Cormann, later issued a statement saying Holgate "will be standing aside from her position" while the investigation is carried out over the next four weeks.

Last year in an act of political vandalism our Prime Minister destroyed the career of an outstanding CEO Christine Holgate. To understand why she was sacrificed I needed to study "The Fabian Idea Throughout History" video and associated booklet "The Fountainhead Of The Socialist Conspiracy".

CEO Christine Holgate was outstanding in her performance of turning Australia Post back into a viable and profitable Company. This was not part of the Internationalist plan. Australia Post was meant to be sacrificed in the 'debt for equity swaps' towards international control, being previously run-down.

An important aside of this treachery is that Australia Post under her watch also became a viable alternative 'banking' arrangement, which would be one step away from becoming a 'viable bank'.

Our Prime Minister was simply doing the bidding of his masters, the money power, against the best interests of the Australian people. Treachery is not limited to one brand of politics, but is prevalent across the whole body politic including the upper levels of our bureaucracy.

I believe there is zero chance of redemption through political parties and will continue to advocate, if you have confidence in any particular political candidate, is to encourage them to resign from their political party and run as an independent in order to effectively represent (the custodians of every political seat), the electorate.

I note the Tasmanian Labor Party are virtually conceding defeat a month out of the 1st May 2021 election, by their internal turmoil and deliberate exclusion of electorally sound (traditional labour) candidates in favour of 'woke' candidates, essentially placing Tasmania as a one party state alongside WA.

The result will be the same as WA but with the political party roles reversed.

Sanjeev Gupta's Whyalla Steelworks could be sold off or forced to seek a government bailout to avoid closure if new court action instigated by Switzerland's Credit Suisse to wind up the 56-year-old South Australian manufacturing plant is successful.

Obscure Rules That Are Not Meant To Be Understood

The control of our body politic by the financial witch-doctors causes our politicians to fear an abstraction rather than look to the real, the natural world. Within the iron-triangle, approximately 400 km north of Adelaide, are vast reserves of iron-ore, copper, gold, uranium and coal. In that same area is a willing population prepared to work.

Historically we had a power generation plant fired by locally sourced coal, to provide the energy to produce sufficient quantities of steel products to satisfy the needs, firstly of the entire state, and extending into the nation, and further to supply the Whyalla shipyards, to build the ships needed to transport what was produced around our own coastlines.

Vladimir Ilyich Ulyanov (Lenin) berated those of his colleagues who criticized large corporations, saying that their formation and growth are to be encouraged as essential to the historic amalgamating development of the ultimate communist (Marxist) world state.

The People's Bank

Christine Holgate provided a solution, a permanent resolution of the readily available mineral reserves and the public-will that only needed a dedicated bank. Our Prime Minister is doing the bidding of the Socialist International and the IMF to destroy our infrastructure and to weaken us as a people to bring Australia into the New International Economic Order, the great reset and world government - treachery at the highest level.

Treachery Foretold

Jeremy Lee in his two booklets: "Upon That Mountain" and "Australia 2000, What Will We Tell Our Children?" presents the historical argument from the 1970s, that world government can only come about by world banking. Issued only from the World Bank, Special Drawing Rights are now surfacing in online discussions from the IMF, World Bank and more recently the 1913 Federal Reserve of the USA Act: (Amended 2018), as the latest financial tool of the World Bank issuing credit to nation states (from thin air - ex nihilo as debt).

Nations will not be able to mobilise their people, in this instance within the iron-triangle in Australia, to build the necessary infrastructure to ensure viability and security of our steel production, shipbuilding and power generation, unless the IMF issues their new layer of credit - "Special Drawing Rights" - ex nihilo as debt. An entirely fictitious and abstract arrangement - voodoo.

We are capable of doing all these things ourselves including providing the finance as was done by our own historical Commonwealth Bank of Australia during those perilous years of 1912 - 1924. We did it then, we can do it now. Where are you political candidates with a spine?

The Community's Real Credit

In his masterly work "Credit-Power and Democracy" CH Douglas advocates a practical solution for the mining industry in Scotland. In the first instance to achieve their project is the need for a bank directed specifically towards the project. A 'mining bank' responsible for the issue of credits directly to the industry to cover the costs of establishment and ongoing production, and secondly the issuing of further credits, via a National Dividend, to ensure sufficient spending power in the hands of the community to purchase the products of that industry.

Finance is simply a tool of measure as weight or length or mass are also tools of measure

In an address during the 1930s to Canadian Albertan's, CH Douglas presented the case again, that the significant needs in Alberta might firstly be for 'sealed roads', that they need look no further than the enormous reserves of "Tar Sands" in their prairies to the north. These "Tar Sands" were the principal resource to establishing sealed roads across the Province of Alberta. What is physically possible must be made financially possible. So it is so for our iron-triangle.

A New Way To Think With A New Set of Rules

The most vital benefit of the work of CH Douglas, was the correct explanation of the purpose of production - being for consumption, not for releasing spending power. If we choose to exploit a natural resource, the purpose of production is being available for consumers. Unlike the current economic system of pursuing profit at all cost, Douglas clarified the natural law, the canon of the economic system. Production is only there for the purpose of consumption.

He clarified what was and currently is obscure. We work to earn wages to buy the things that are already produced.

The word clarification denotes making things clear and more readily understood. In a water-treatment plant the 'clarifier' settles the mud (held in suspension) to the bottom of the tank so the water becomes clear. And that is what Douglas has done, he has clarified, made clear and more easily understood, the purpose of production being for consumption.

A problem correctly stated is already half solved

If we are pursuing production to achieve a balance of payments then the obscurity is within the financial system. Why do we have this anomaly that brings the balance of payments into question in the first place? If the financial system was self-liquidating then there would be no issue with a balance of payments. But our financial experts and economists (witch doctors espousing satanic voodoo) keep our thinking on the subject skewed and of course cognitive dissonance is readily utilised to ensure clarity is never achieved.

Cognitive dissonance being a manipulating tool of language whereby a word appears to mean it's exact opposite causing dissonance to the listener – gay marriage, marriage being a sacrament before God of the joining together as one, of one man and one woman in holy matrimony for life. Gay and marriage cannot resonate in this situation as the purpose of holy matrimony is the pro-creation of new life by consummation, a natural impossibility for gay people.

By accepting this perversion of language we subject ourselves to this dissonance of the meaning of words

Safe schools is another term that readily comes to mind for our young. They are subject to indoctrination and brainwashing in these very institutions of development and instruction - not safe at all.

Australia is well capable of producing all the needs of its people's within our own borders. Why should we have to export in order for us to enjoy the abundant fruit of our own labour, modern technology and the material plenty?

Douglas has given us a new set of rules that clarify the financial / economic situation correctly. He has uncovered the designed flaw in the existing financial system to monopolise power in the hands of the few.

Douglas has undone this pursuit of power by advocating the distribution of the National Dividend as the rightful inheritance to all, in order to balance the two (finance and economics) systems in equilibrium.

He has done a great service to crystallise our thinking

As Copernicus presented the case that the Earth actually orbits around the Sun and not the other way around, Douglas has clarified the purpose of production, and the twisted role the financial system has subsumed the economic system in order to control society.

He has undone the satanic financial/economic voodoo, the black magic, the cognitive dissonance and obscurity of the two (currently integrated) systems to make it clear that they need to be operated separately, but balanced.

The question for this age is whether we have the personal resolve and political will to actually insist that these new rules be adhered to by our governments.

An entirely new narrative of abundance with its own set of rules based on the natural order, the Canon

ACTION TARGET

Readers are encouraged to be very active by advocating a responsible vote at elections. A responsible vote is cast by an elector who is willing to accept responsibility for the policies he seeks. Do not vote for the Councillor who wants to build a huge swimming pool unless you are also willing to help pay for it. At every level of government; seek the candidate who will be accountable for his actions by reporting back to voters during his term in office. His report may contain success and failure but at least he can report his performance.

It is important to maintain contact with your MP during the term as new issues arise and one very important one now is the urge to establish a 'vaccination passport' which will be necessary to enable many things like for example, air travel; banking; sporting events and supermarkets etc. This dictatorial policy will divide the community. The community must be responsible (there is that important word again) for their own health and they should be left to choose their preferred method to stay healthy. Some will choose to be vaccinated. Others may prefer to simply practice good health. Some may use some of the many alternate medical services available.

The cry for all to be vaccinated to stop the spread of a disease is without foundation because those who have received the jab are meant to not get the complaint from any sources including the non-vaccinated people.

Resistance to the draconian measures is growing but it needs much more help so please contact MP's; write to papers and generally talk about the need to maintain freedoms. - ND
