Thought For The Week: A 'Problem' correctly stated is already half solved - CH Douglas

• A full Constitutional Review through a series of open public conventions attended by popularly elected representatives. Originating at the local government level, then the state and working through to conclusion at the federal level. - 'The Keys to Unlocking Democracy'

...A realistic examination of the essential Christian heritage requires not only a study of the fundamental ideas inherent in Christ's teachings, but also the results of those ideas as they have been applied throughout history. Traditional Christian philosophy has always insisted that God reveals Himself through history. And real history is not a series of disconnected events, but a continuous application of policies—economic, financial, political and social—rooted in philosophies. The ideas or beliefs men accept, even if unconsciously, govern their actions. But in an era when progress is measured by many in terms of technology, size and speed, the self-styled 'practical man' becomes impatient with any suggestion that ideas, that which cannot be seen, are of fundamental practical importance and should be considered.

The British diplomat and scholar, Sir David Kelly, has observed how, when a leading newspaper asked him for permission to reproduce one or two previously published articles, it explained how it did not want the one which in the first paragraph referred to the famous German philosopher Hegel, that this would discourage its readers, who would say, "Who the hell was Hegel anyway". It was Hegel's "dialectic", or the theory of development through the conflict of opposites, that was the source of Marx's philosophy of "dialectical materialism", the materialist interpretation of history. The Nazis and the Fascists took Hegel's thesis that the State is the Divine Idea as it exists on earth and that the individual can only realise himself through the State. The ideas of Hegel have therefore affected in this century the peoples of the whole world, and through the policies of the International Marxist movements continue to do so.

DOUGLAS SOCIAL CREDIT IS THE ANTIDOTEFOR CHINESE SOCIAL CREDIT: (the surveillance state) By Arnis Luks*Chinese Social Credit - the Surveillance State

While we experience the continuing expansion of the surveillance state intruding into every area of our personal lives, it's important to note the origins of this technology used over us. Facial recognition software, smart meters, the NBN, Internet of things, cameras and sound recording everywhere, all these devices for monitoring and state security were developed in the free West.

Stanford University Professor Antony C. Sutton's written record of the transfer of vast quantities of modern Western technology to the Communist nations catalogues more than '100 years of treachery' of an alien power operating behind-the-scenes of most national governments. Without a formidable foe the weapons manufacturing industry would fall into disrepair. Without this alien power's direct involvement Hitler would never have been; the Bolshevik revolution would have failed; Franklin Delano Roosevelt would never have been elected president of the United States. Such is the formidable record of Anthony C. Sutton's revelations available in our online library website: <https://alor.org/Storage/navigation/Library6.htm>

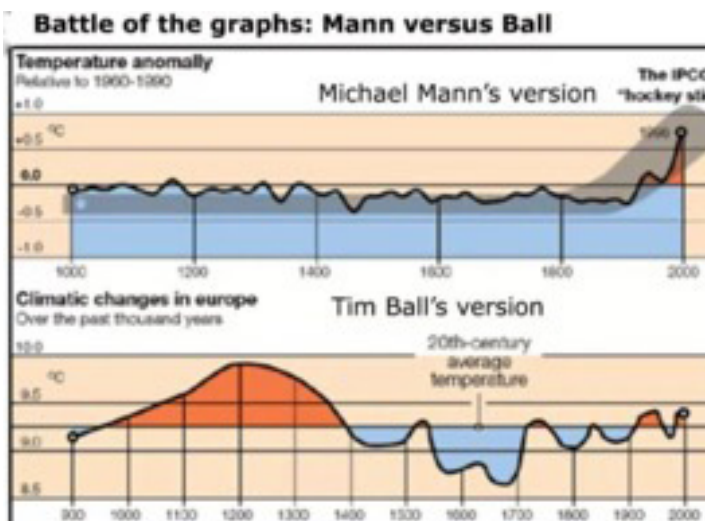

The surveillance state operates in secret. The bureaucrats monitoring everyone are never held to account, nor are the administrators nor politicians. The annual military parade in both China and Russia, display power of their military might; firstly over other nations, but equally important over their own people. The point to note is that the administration is all-powerful and the individual citizen is nothing. This Communist-Capitalist expression insists that all power originates from the barrel of a gun :- humanistic-determinism maintained by never-ending propaganda to the point where the people know it only as lies and misinformation.

History of Treachery: Fatal Courtroom Act Ruins Michael 'hockey stick' Mann.

Published on July 4, 2017 Written by John O'Sullivan

...As can be seen from the graphs below;

Michael 'hockey stick' Mann's cherry-picked version of science makes the Medieval Warm Period (MWP) disappear and shows a pronounced upward 'tick' in the late 20th century (the blade of his 'hockey stick'). But below that, Canadian climatologist, Dr Tim Ball's graph, using more reliable and widely available public data, shows a much warmer Medieval Warm Period (MWP), with temperatures hotter than today, and showing current temperatures well within natural variation.

Michael Mann's iconic hockey stick has been relied upon by the UN's IPCC and western governments as crucial evidence for the science of 'man-made global warming.'

Computer modelling regularly appears as the only 'substantial source of trustworthy news and information', but in fact is propaganda and misinformation. Computer modelling as a reliable 'method of prediction' appears at best suspect, if not outright fraud. The climate-model as presented by Michael 'hockey stick' Mann to the IPCC is one of deliberate obfuscation for a political agenda - the industrial deconstruction of the West.

"...Few people seem to realise the significance of the general ignorance of history and the insistence on "education on modern lines" for the young, as though this unhappy period through which we are living was the dawn of humanity and the birth of intelligence.... The memory of one lifetime, while far from being a reliable standard of values, does present a picture which is comprehensible. If enough of these pictures are available, the fact emerges that life as a whole presents certain features which recur constantly and can, broadly, be dealt with successfully in the light of previous experience of them. Obviously, to ensure the failure of civilisation, the sure and certain method is to deprive the living generation of the benefits of previous experience." – The Social Creditor, June, 1947

Annastacia Palaszczuk said the Doherty modelling predicted 80 deaths a day and 2,240 a month after six months. Is that correct?

Doherty Institute <https://www.doherty.edu.au/>

The predictions from the Doherty Institute appear so in error that even the politically correct (and all things international) ABC cannot sit comfortably any longer.

History of Treachery

Deliberate misinformation exemplified the calibre of those elites that lead directly towards the successful Dutch merchant led invasion into Britain 1688-89. The elites of 'then', as custodians of that wonderful Christian heritage openly embraced the merchant invasion against the best interests of the British people, being more aligned to 'mercenary' than a loyal subject.

Arizona Election Audit Confirms Biden's Win In Maricopa County, But Also Casts Doubts

<https://kjzz.org/content/1719314/arizona-election-audit-confirms-bidens-win-maricopa-county-also-casts-doubts>

Sidney Powell, Sidney Powell P.C. and Defending the Republic, Inc., File an Abuse of Process Counterclaim

Against Dominion Voting Systems

Powell: "The filing today demonstrates the great lengths Dominion (voting systems-ed) went to suppress the truth, intimidate those who spoke out against the company, and quash free speech. I am continuing to stand by my belief that the results of the 2020 (USA presidential-ed) election were rife with fraud through the electronic voting systems, and the truth will come out."...

Soul Searching for the American People

US President Joe Biden officially won Arizona by about 10,000 votes, but 23,000 voters had moved house, 10,000 potentially voted in multiple counties, 9,000 extra ballots appeared that were not officially sent. So there were at least four times as many dubious votes as Biden's theoretical victory margin. Bigger and possibly quite a lot worse than this was that: the Election Management Database and Files were deleted, subpoenaed equipment was withheld, and some logs were not preserved. The chain of custody was broken and machines (Dominion Voting Systems) that weren't meant to be connected to the internet, were connected. It's not that the US doesn't have free and fair elections, but that it's not even trying.

USA voters were defrauded of their rightful President. For most third world and communist nations voting is of little or no consequence. Voter fraud is problematic across all nations. The Maricopa County Audit "findings" offer no permanent solution to the fraud. It is simply – use the same voting computer-based system and we will put in place some more computer-based safeguards. Is there a realistic solution to state tyranny? Why is philosophy so important? What of voter fraud?

Policy emanates from a belief system, a philosophy. Eugenics is an expression of Darwinistic-Humanism, survival of the fittest: people of unsuitable genetics are simply euthanised. It is a callous and selfish perspective. In contrast, Christians have gone to the rubbish dumps of humanity and lifted the destitute, impoverished, poor and handicapped into a place of personal dignity.

A place of dignity does not compare with euthanasia.

Christianity is the only philosophy which places the individual above all institutions - government, industry and the church. “The Kingdom of God is within” is not a throwaway comment; but a profound statement of natural law that pursuing of this ‘kingdom within’ is the primary purpose of man’s ‘very being’.

“The general principles which govern association for the building of a Christian society are as capable of exact statement as the principles of bridge-building, and departure from them just as disastrous.”
(based upon a statement by C.H. Douglas.)

The basic family unit is an expression of hope that individuals coming together will cause an increase in the social (cohesion) credit. Families coming together as community the same. Communities coming together to form a township also. The purpose of any type of government or bureaucracy is to serve this desire of hope, that there will be a benefit, an increase in the social (cohesion) credit. The role of government in a Christian society is one of service towards the community, to benefit the well-being of every individual that comprises that community. 'Majority rule' serves the mob - the hypothetical majority, does not serve the individual at all. ‘50% less one’ lose out to ‘50% plus one’.

Electronic Integrity

Confidence can be lost within any electronic system that can be subject to interference, vagaries, and subterfuge. The smart meter in your home constantly sends a pulse out every few seconds that your smart appliances respond to. The smart meter is then able to (through the power lines) transmit information back to a central control room - power lines being a mechanism for transmitting data. The council street lighting can perform the same task. Should the street lights be equipped with a camera and microphone they could readily be monitoring every word spoken in your home. Speed (and other) cameras located at intersections and arterial roads are transmitting live data back to a central control room. Your computers and smart phones also fall into a monitoring device. Smart modems for the NBN can be accessed by central control rooms to provide real-time information and feedback. The surveillance state is all pervasive. The days of the bugged spy are over, but who monitors those that manage the surveillance state?

Electoral Integrity

The surveillance state is directed towards monitoring and controlling of the citizenry. Election results, cynically, can be predicted (polled) weeks out from the election assured that the surveillance state will continue unabated. Confidence in the actual 'as real' outcome is low to non-existent in this brave new totalitarianist world.

Voter Integrity – The Responsible Vote

The technology of the surveillance state could just as readily be redirected towards the good rather than ill. An open and public register of who voted and how they voted (open government) would eliminate both voter fraud and illegitimate government.

There is also a pressing need to allocate personal responsibility towards those who vote in favour of greater government interference (over the individual) to pay for this extended intrusion. Minding your own business has Puritan overtones and personal ramifications

The Responsible Bureaucrat

The accountability of the bureaucrat towards the electorate is minimal if not non-existent. Anyone who derives financial benefit from the public purse needs to be held to account by that same public. What owner of a business would not wish to exercise the right to hire and fire an employee. So it is with government and the bureaucracy. All must hold a degree of personal responsibility by their actions towards those they serve.

Michael Mann of hockey stick fame again, failed to provide access to the raw data and algorithms that were responsible in predicting imminent and catastrophic global warming. The IPCC and Western governments readily accepted this false narrative until only recently. USA presidential candidate Al Gore went around the world with those ‘hockey stick’ graphs and soon after bought a mansion on the seashore, despite declaring catastrophic sea-level rises. The unrelenting propaganda by the media of projected catastrophes continue despite this information being deeply flawed and demonstrably suspect to a court of law. Truth has no bearing on propaganda. All individuals on the public payroll need to be held to account to that same public who pay the taxes that provide their wages.

Hansard and the Party Room – Responsible Politician

William Cobbett was the originator of recording Parliamentary debates. After performing this task for 16 years ex-gratis, he sold the business to a fellow called Hansard. Parliamentary debates have been recorded ever since. With the establishment of political parties, the debates have moved from the Parliament where they were recorded, to the privacy of the party room - party room debates are held in private, not open to public scrutiny. The surveillance state is fully immersed within secrets not open for public scrutiny. Public servants were historically held to account by the parliament, but this is rarely the case. They, the public servants, are insisting that they are now the new public masters. Stating the obvious may appear simplistic, but it's important to build a case of where we have gone wrong so far. Through taxation the bureaucracy and politicians are meant to be working for us: the voting and taxpaying public. Through never ending legislation, has allowed the bureaucracy unnecessary and comprehensive control over us.

I came across a booklet titled The Christian and Modern Society from our website under author Ted Rock. Lesson one summarises that: we either build up from the individual, or we build down from dominating 'others'.

Christianity purports that the state only has legitimacy when serving the individual. Darwinistic-Humanism purports the opposite – the state as absolute. Which is correct: is the individual to be served by the state, or is the state to be all pervasive over every individual? Philosophy is important if we are to answer this question with a view towards our ancient freedoms.

Should there be freedom of choice to use the mRNA injection or not? This could be a life changing, even a life and death decision. The mass medication decision of this experimental injection regardless of the consequences to life and liberty, is an act of belligerent tyranny by a totalitarian regime. The Nuremberg Code forbids this. So does our federal Constitution - 'medical conscription'.

Local Government CIR

The former (Liberal) Premier of Victoria Jeff Kennett as an example, was instrumental in implementing Council Amalgamations, restructured under a dominant CEO and Mayor model, within an entirely additional Victorian Local Government Act 2020. Councils became a branch of the state government bureaucracy, administered predominately by the CEO and any public discourse managed by the Mayor. Councillors are significantly limited in their opportunity to openly discuss upcoming council legislation and policy. They are gagged.

The 390 page addition to the 1989 LG Act is typical within a totalitarian society. Representation, similar to the United Nations, the European Union, and National Cabinet, is unanswerable to the people with administration operating predominantly in secret by the managerial branch. This is deliberate to thwart the will of the people. Our third tier of government, being local government, is effectively 'no more'. It is lost and must be regained if we are to make any headway whatsoever towards freedom. This Local Government Act 2020, with 'timelines' and 'targets' being set by legislation, has hamstrung and representationally strangled councillors. Would Jeff Kennet have foreseen this massive intrusion?

Potential Within the Individual Candidate

Within the next 12 months some states will be called to elections three times. Being possibly the last effective elections we may have, places the local council elections in the foreground of freedom. Any freedom movement if it is to have any sort of lasting effect must come from a groundswell of public opinion - usually to the negative.

Should one successful Mayoral candidate and a few councillors whose political platform stands on the People's Law: Initiative and Referendum, or at least Veto win an election on this platform could turn the tide in favour of the people. The sweet fragrance of freedom could be in the air behind these brave souls. The people would start to regain their lost ancient freedoms without a violent revolution utilising their existing although somewhat weakened, Constitutional provisions available.

A Lone Police Officer Leads By Example

<https://www.michaelsmithnews.com/2021/09/covid-message-from-fmr-nsw-police-officer-alexander-cooney-to-police-in-australia.html>

I have just listened to a former NSW police officer, who presents the case that police are operating unlawfully while implementing covid tyranny. He chose to resign rather than continue so at least his one, lone voice could be heard. The frustrating bias I see in the article is that the Murdoch press (as the source of this article), is presenting itself as a viable alternative to our internationalist ABC. Both News services are biased towards totalitarianism – remember the same Hegelian philosophy of dialectical-materialism was behind both Marx and Hitler. Neither policy provided any real and lasting solution to this dilemma of lost freedoms.

Murdoch represents psychologically 'capital', and the ABC psychologically represents 'social responsibility'. The philosophy of Douglas Social Credit 'policy' is Christian and is the only policy expression from any philosophy that harnesses both 'capital' and 'social responsibility' placing both under a discipline of morality.

'Capital' should be limited so as not to exploit individuals or society, and 'social responsibility' should also be limited so as not to cripple capital. Modern monopoly capitalism has garnished the assets of the entire world unto itself. These assets, at least the fruit of these assets, rightfully belong to the people individually.

Manufacturing, which is now a community function rather than performed by individuals, has the potential to produce (with minimal direct labour) all the basic necessities of life. We have moved past the point of: "if a man shall not work you shall not eat" to the point where sufficient food is provided with less than 3% of the working population and substantial production for export. This statement of pessimism is no longer valid. The curse of 'Adam' is overcome with God's bountiful provision – the 5,000 are fed with what a boy had for himself (5 barley loaves and 2 small fishes). God the Son performed then with a miracle what occurs every day in our natural world with modern technology and 'hope'.
