Thought for the Week: Freedom Wears a Crown By J Farthing https://alor.org/Storage/Library/PDF/Farthing_J-Freedom_Wears_a_Crown.pdf

extract...The idea which we as a British people inherited was that the opinion governing a nation should be not only as fully informed as the High Court of Parliament is able to ensure, but as near to a right and true opinion as the reasoned deliberations of all the representatives of the people are able to make it. The opinion that finally prevails must primarily bare a reasoned reference to truth, or the most adequate expression of truth of which a given people is capable. But we in the name of a pure Canada are to destroy our traditional Constitution and affirm the majority-will as law. This abolishes parliamentary government, since the governing opinion need, and can, only be counted. The House of Commons becomes but a place where they count the majority, that is the number of puppets that hang on the strings of an all-determining dictatorial cabinet (or bureaucracy-ed).

In this political philosophy, questions of right or wrong are irrelevant. All is determined by the winning of elections. A government once elected, all that it does is justified by 'we won the election'. Make the greatest number the law of our national life and it follows of necessity that the appeal to number justifies not only all that follows, but all that precedes an election. It matters not a whit how an election is won, since the end will retroactively justify the means. This is the high heritage bequest in this country and to his own party by the late William Lyon Mackenzie King (former Canadian PM-ed).

A Canadian Liberal (Nth American description of socialistic-ed) is now a person who scorns to engage in any political thinking or discussion as a means of arriving at the opinion which ought to govern. His concern with opinions is first to accept them as they are; then to label them red or blue or pink; and then to count them. And since it is only the largest number among labelled opinions that can be said to count, number becomes the sole consideration and all that relates to opinion. So it is possible to say that Canadian government is now based on 3 principles:

That a Prime Minister has the absolute right to effect the death of a parliament as soon as it threatens to oppose his will; or, in other words, that the will of the Prime Minister is absolute as against the will of all other representatives elected by the people.

That any and every question can be for all time answered and settled by the majority vote in any single election; or, in other words the majority-will in any election completely determines without further question, right and wrong, truth and error.

That on one day in every four or five years the government presents a four- or five-year accumulation of all such questions and issues to the people, and in doing so asks them to decide whether they do or do not wish to receive any further monthly cheques from a bountiful cabinet.

Our national affairs are now in fact determined by the secret deliberations of ministers who present to parliament and people only a tiresome succession of faits accomplis, all to be justified by counting votes on a single day in every 1,825 (5 years-ed). Such are the ideas on which our national life is now based and from which we are henceforth to derive our distinctive character as a people: ideas which are but progressive expressions of the idea of absolute power. Having been bilked of our Constitution as a democratic people, and being now far gone in the process which is uprooting all sense of authority in our national life, we are left with only the bare and arid fact of power based on absolute will.

A majority vote: that is what we have the moronic audacity to call democracy. Deny the ideal of democracy and with it goes the sense of loyalty; the sense of constitutional authority; enshrining in detail the sense of tradition and of history which nourishes respect for such an authority. Thus having so destroyed our Constitution we destroy all truth and principle belonging to the fabric of our corporate life. We are left nothing to revere but the idol of power based on appeal to mere opinion or will. So long as it is the will or opinion of the greatest number, it is sacred, no matter what it may be. Power is freed from respect for authority; opinion from concern for truth; will from principle; and the life of a people in the present from all that comes from the past to inspire and to guide it to the future. Propaganda in the service of power leads all opinion to a national worship of the new golden calf; the greatest possible number.

At first, the merely bigger quantity or majority number was made the absolute for us, and then - hard on its heels - the biggest. That is now to be the ruling idea to inspire the youth of this land and to give us our distinctive character as a people; as it has already become the distinctive trait of our pure-Canadian cultists*.

CAN THE AUSTRALIAN COUP D'ÉTAT BE LEGITIMISED? By Arnis Luks

News reports are indicating that Labor will preference Liberals throughout the State of Queensland. Some are inferring that this will be consistent across the nation. Like the farmer and the sheepdog, they appear to work separately but are actually working together for a common objective.

Pauline Hanson One Nation 'are suggesting' preferencing Labour in front of "wet" Liberals – preferencing against those who would be more naturally aligned with the Communist Party of Australia rather than a traditional conservative or traditional labour grouping.

We are all Communists now comrade!

The political vote for the major parties has gone soft so to speak. The public are beginning to wake up. This charade every three years at the federal level, of mass propaganda, misinformation and downright lies in order for the public to adjudicate to determine government for the next three years has been shown to be the farce that it is, a gross misappropriation of political power by powerful vested interests using propaganda campaigns.

Stalin's quote (by his former secretary Boris Bazhanov) is appropriate: I consider it completely unimportant who in the party will vote, or how; but what is extraordinarily important is this - who will count the votes, and how?

The important emergence of the 'cross-party enquiry into covid' cannot be over-emphasised as to its ground-breaking strategy and political significance. The role of Parliament has been subverted by the party-room where actual debates do take place (only within the governing political party) and not recorded in Hansard for later scrutiny. Further, the National Cabinet is an unconstitutional, unrepresentative and unaccountable entity, with unelected bureaucrats advising each first Minister, and a massive, to the tune of AU$3.8Billion, team of spin doctors in the bleachers ready to carve out a new and acceptable narrative to cover any potential gaffes or perceived public resistance.

Election Integrity

The HS Chapman Society, historically chaired by Amy McGrath, was the more recent custodian for the integrity of elections. Those politicians who achieve the position of representation in this coming parliament could do no better than to immediately hold a public cross-party enquiry into the integrity of the just held 2022 federal election while the iron is still hot, but certainly Endless boasting of our mounting wealth and increasing power and importance in the world is fast becoming the theme and substance of our national story.

The inner idol is the idol of the number, but the cult is the cult of importance; the cult of national bombast. It replaces the old traditional patriotism of the Canadian people rooted in a deep felt sense of the meaning of our corporate life...end

* pure-Canadian cultists - French Quebec separatist movement within the first 6 months. While not all anomalies will be captured, the importance is to place the integrity, or lack of, of the election into the public consciousness.

The United States Presidential election 2020 was a fraud; the 2022 French Presidential election was a fraud; the 2020 Queensland State election was a fraud with foreign actors designing, implementing and controlling the Queensland Electoral Commission's software. The probability of a valid election result for our 2022 federal election is at best 'remote'. Do you remember PM Malcolm Turnbull recommending we go to fully electronic voting as he was being shown the door? He knew the truth of these things.

PHON Animations

The Pauline Hanson One Nation animations; which the electoral commission insist be removed; may still be available for consideration on foreign websites. The only criticism I hold towards the latest animation was that it depicted the culprits as being from the left, when in fact it is across the board. There has never been a cross-party enquiry into the validity of the electoral roll even though this or similar has been called for for the past 30 years. The price to pay is too great, not in dollars but in power. All majors turn a blind eye to this accepted work practice of electoral fraud.

Multiple voting, or dead souls, or postal-voting-interception or software fraud have each affected the integrity and validity of the end result. The ballot dumps and electronic fraud exercised in the USA is not beyond our own elections. John Perkins - Economic Hit Man - identified election fraud by rigging of elections as SOP standard operating practice/procedure for vested interests in order to place their puppets in power. Foreign agents have this down to a fine art and we are naïve to think otherwise.

The Role of Parliament

The 'King in Parliament' historically described the government of the day as being three separate but interconnected bodies of political powers. The lower house - the House of Representatives being the people's house. The upper house - the Senate being the state's house. The King - being the current monarch's representative The Governor General. This is the constitutional government of Australia, and Australia's States. What is being presented as our government is a hotch-potch of bureaucrats, first ministers and $3.8 billion worth of advisors and spin doctors. At times parliaments have even been shut down by the first minister. The chambers of discussion and debate, as an integral part of running government, and the government constantly being held to account 'in the parliament', these chambers having actually been padlocked shut. For the past 2 1/2 years representative government of The King in Parliament has not existed in Australia.

We had a coup d'état and did not know our Constitution had been subverted by a foreign power-WEF, WHO, UN.

The people's house; the House of Representatives, is purported to represent the people, with the majority of elected representatives able to form government. As was depicted in recent media articles, representatives do not necessarily reside within the electorate and may even reside interstate. I have questioningly observed representatives whose interests and philosophy are foreign to the Australian way of life, and even noted persons acting in the interests of foreign powers while holding the highest offices in the land. Sam Dastyari was not an exception. The discussions within the lower house are 'orchestrated events', conducted around the show of hands for legislation, and occasionally to endorse the actions of the Executive by the validating of the existing majority government. Very, very little of genuine debate takes place in our muzzled House of Representatives.

Covid Enquiry

Recently, several cross-party representatives held an enquiry into the covid policy. This is the closest thing I have witnessed this past 2 1/2 years of effective representation. Congratulations on their delayed but very welcome effort. This demonstration of representation stands out in an avalanche of misinformation/ censorship. Media reports were minimal, but fortunately alternative media proved suitable as a viable alternative. No doubt, as overseas governments are now attempting, even these viable media-alternatives as sources of reliable information will be pursued and government attempts will be made to suppress their welcoming voice of sanity with a barrage of censorship laws, & journalist licences. Facts are facts. The bureaucrats and elites controlling our government, will attempt to suppress any alternative media sources to censor any unwelcome information being released to the public, actively conspiring against the best interests of the people of Australia - again.

The States' house; the Senate, is purported to represent the states equally with 12 seats of which 6 will be vacated each election unless a double dissolution occurs, with 2 other seats allocated for the minor territories being contested every election. The primary function of this house is to take into account the interests from each state's provincial perspective, with further input allocated from the territories. The Senate must review all legislation and is able to offer amendments to be returned back to the lower house for consideration.

ON TARGET

An important power of the Senate is in regard to the annual appropriation bill (the budget), which can be withheld to cause, by demonstration of lack of confidence in the government, an election. Historically the Senate elections could also be held separately from the House of Representatives. These separate elections divested power away from the people's house and the first minister, towards the states house. Even though our Constitution is only 122 years old, a lot of this important information of the traditional separation of powers is deliberately withheld and placed down the Orwellian memory hole.

Finally, the third branch of our federal parliament is the 'King', represented by our Governor General. No legislation (bill) can come into effect without this royal assent. A lot of modern ""emergency"" legislation now includes: "the Crown shall be bound by this Act". Those who control the majority political party, our bureaucracy and the elites vying for total power wish to circumvent by silencing this third tier of government - the King. These are important facets to the jewel we call Limited Constitutional Monarchical Government.

New Agriculture Bill in Victoria Gives The Andrews Government Control of Food Production and Abolishes

Property Rights - Stephen Andrew MP PHON QID

...The Bill threatens the country's food security, particularly when viewed in the context of global food shortages, which we are told are just around the corner. Anyone who thinks I'm exaggerating the danger here, should take a look at yesterday's news out of Northern Ireland. Sheep farmers have been told that a million sheep must be culled in order to meet the government's internationally-set emissions target.

There is also a massive concern around property rights overall, with the dangerous precedent set by the Bill. Because there is nothing in the wording that restricts the new laws to farms. This means the government can also enter private homes, seize owners' pets – even kill them - and destroy any vegetable gardens or domestic chickens it finds. Exactly as is happening right now in China...end

Federal Election Voting

I was able to produce a pseudo ballot paper for my electorate in the lower house. Working through from two perspectives simultaneously, placing the sitting member last, and also allocating preferences in order of how to vote based on the fact that Australia as a nation is under full attack by subversives. Once viewed from these two perspectives simultaneously I was able to easily fill in the pseudo lower house ballot paper.

Looking again from similar perspectives simultaneously for the Senate pseudo ballot paper, I chose to rely on my own deliberations rather than from somewhere else's 'how to vote' cards. I needed to fill in at least 12 spaces below the line as I saw fit; or alternatively 6 spaces above the line.

Above the line follows the party's choice and not my own. I chose to fill in at least 1-12 below the line starting with a candidate most likely to do the best for our Nation and State. I did not allow any bribes - pork barrelling - of taxpayer funds being spent in my electorate or state, to interfere with my thoughts, but chose to look at this opportunity to express my political-will via the vote, in regards to "who personally" was best for my State of SA.

All the majors were immediately eliminated as their collusion across covid, international treaties and selective pork barrelling has demonstrated for 50 years that they hold no, none, nada loyalty towards the Australian Nation, nor it's peoples. We are fighting for our very survival as a nation due to their treacherous behaviour denying with their mouths what they are constantly doing with their hands - gas-lighting if you like.

A couple of stand-out candidates have surfaced this past 2.5 years, of who will as individuals, receive my first and second preferences. Those within that grouping are placed into a standby mode for now.

In Queensland Senator Amanda Stoker has been placed 3rd position on her party ticket - deliberately I believe, however I would give her the next preference if I was in Queensland as she has been a stand-out for family and traditional values in spite of her tenuous association within the Liberal party. Is there such a stand-out person in my state of South Australia? I could not find even one within any of the major parties, but could consider others on the ticket who have shown some resolve this past 30 months towards freedom of choice and lifting all Covid restrictions. This exercise has been fairly thin on the ground with the SA Senate ballot paper, in my view.

This Age of Oligarchs

What about Clive you may ask? In my mind I did the mental gymnastics of changing the name Clive Palmer to George, or Bill, or Gina, or Andrew, or now Simon Holmes à Court, and immediately realised that we are being influenced by just another oligarch to the tune of some $100M which immediately excluded his team from further consideration. I see him as spoiler against Pauline in Queensland, as I see similar with Mr X in SA. They are playing us like competing English football teams.

Ironically, in 1996 Graeme Campbell and the Australia First team were making significant inroads into the public political consciousness in Queensland. I was there supporting that team. Pauline was created out of thin air through a massive media campaign led by oligarch media tycoon Rupert Murdoch to counter the Australia First momentum. Estimates of $100M worth of free advertising redirected political energy of that time away from Graeme towards Pauline (who was at some stage managed by the two Davids). History is important.

An oligarch has established, trained, and resourced the Azov battalions in Ukraine (his own army) which have been shelling the Donbass Russian speaking peoples for the past 8 years. Oligarchs run Russia, China, and now more so here in Australia. How much power is too much power in the hands of one person? Gates-WHO Schwabb-WEF

I then started to score each remaining party/group based on what I knew about their history, how their association was structured, internet searches of their policies, and in the case of the Nationals (even though Pauline may be working out an election deal with them); I hold a different view, that they having actively enforced the 'get big or get out' * mantra leading eventually to the Lima Declaration, both under their then leader Doug Anthony which decimated both our manufacturing and farmers. Also remembering; (Sir) Robert Sparkes Queensland President of the Nationals, campaigning against the establishment of a State Bank of Queensland in defiance of the Queensland parliamentary processes where those things were to be debated and resolved. This was a clear demonstration of the machinations of political parties whereby they (the leadership of the party) control policy, rather than the people's representatives in the parliament.

Once all this information is placed into a template of 'civics' (how things have been developed to work) I realised how off the mark we have been mis-directed. This also gave me an opportunity to see where the pendulum lay for every other candidate or group of candidates. I then shared my remaining preferences, by, first being placed last, and, last first across each grouping or groups to minimise forceful people who managed to achieve the first spot of their group. I managed to fill in 21 squares before my vote would become void, which should nicely keep out the majors and allow a freedom-friendly minor to have a voice in the State's house.

This is my thinking that took a full hour or so to argue out in discussion with others, to ensure it would achieve effective representation within the Senate, and those who have caused such chaos not being given any political oxygen. My form of putting the sitting member last for the State's house, the Senate!
