

The Money Power vs Democracy - Introduction

...My warning that International Finance was plotting to destroy the British Empire was, unfortunately, well-based. The peoples of the British Empire played a major role in the defeat of Hitler's National Socialist Germany, but lost the peace. The British Empire and Commonwealth was broken up, not by superior force of arms, but by the use of Money Power and subversion. While the Second World War was still raging, plans were being advanced for the destruction of (The British Empire and Commonwealth) what was the greatest single international barrier to the establishment of the ultimate objective of the Money Power: The World State. The first act of surrender by the United Kingdom was acceptance of the Bretton Woods plan for the establishment of The International Monetary Fund and The World Bank. One of the principal authors of the Bretton Woods plot was Harry Dexter White, a top official in the American Treasury Department. White was subsequently exposed as a Soviet agent.

U.S. President Roosevelt, charged by Sir Winston Churchill as a man dedicated to breaking up the British Empire, was the tool of the International Money Power. As the creature of the financial groups who imposed the Bolsheviks upon the unfortunate Russian people, Roosevelt naturally gave the Soviet leader, Stalin, all he demanded. The result was a long series of retreats by the West in the face of the pressures of International Communism. Proof of the nexus between International Finance and International Communism has now been so thoroughly documented that it cannot be denied.

In his detailed studies published by Stanford University, Dr. Antony Sutton shows that the Soviet has, from the beginning been sustained and developed by massive economic blood transfusions from the West. The major evidence concerning these blood transfusions are outlined in Sutton's 'National Suicide'. Sutton followed this work with 'Wall Street and The Bolshevik Revolution'. The International Money Power is now openly financing both the Soviet Union and Communist China...

Centralised Money Power, mounting debt, taxation, rates and inflation, are being used to deprive individuals of control over his own destiny. The theme-song of the centralisers is 'Get Bigger or Get Out'. Nations are told that they must also amalgamate and form 'Common Markets'...

Centralisation runs contrary to reality and inevitably produces greater friction and chaos. And yet the dramatic technological advance and expansion of the industrial arts makes it physically possible to provide the individual with more real security and freedom than in the recorded history of mankind. He is being robbed of his rightful heritage.

How can the process of accelerating centralisation be stopped? Only when sufficient informed individuals learn how to associate together to use their social power to impose their will upon their political institutions, insisting that the policies of the Money Power be broken. It is certain that the formation of more political parties merely assists the Money Power to extend its control of the people. Putting marks on pieces of paper every few years, without doing anything else, only serves to help legalise the policies of the centralisers.

Major Clifford Hugh Douglas,

M.I.Mech.E., M.I.E.E., consulting engineer, economist, author, and founder of the Douglas Social Credit Movement, was born in 1879 and died in 1952. Among other posts which he held in his earlier years were those of engineer with the — Canadian General Electric company, Peterborough, Canada, — Assistant Engineer, Lachine Rapids Hydraulic Construction, Deputy Chief Electrical Engineer, Buenos Aires, and Pacific Railway; Chief Engineer and Manager in India British Westinghouse Company; Assistant Superintendent, Royal Aircraft

Factory Farnborough (GB).

During the First World War he was a Major in the Royal Flying Corps and later in the R.A.F. (Reserve).

After retiring from his engineering career, he and his wife ran a small yacht-building yard on Southampton Water for several years. The combination of beauty with functional efficiency in a successfully designed racing yacht had a special appeal for him.

When he lived in an old water mill in Hampshire he used the water wheel to turn a dynamo which lit and warmed the house as well as providing power for lathes and other tools. Later, when he moved to Scotland, many of his friends and followers remember helping to build his small hydro-electric-powered house, sited on the local burn which ran through his land. Since decentralisation of economic power was of the essence of his teaching, it should be put on record that he practised what he preached.

One of his most interesting jobs, just before the 1914 War, was that of conducting preliminary experimental work and preparing plans and specifications for the electrical work on the Post Office Tube in London, with later supervision of the installation of plant in what was to be one of the earliest examples of complete automation in the history of engineering.

Institutions exist to serve Individuals

Accepting this statement (systems were made for man, and not men for systems) as a basis of constructive effort, it seems clear that all forms, whether of government, industry or society must exist contingently to the furtherance of the principles contained in it. If a State system can be shown to be inimical to them it must go, if social customs hamper their continuous expansion - they must be modified, if unbridled industrialism checks their growth, then industrialism must be reined in.

That is to say, we must build up from the Individual, not down from the State.
