

The Truth About Social Credit (Eric. D. Butler)

Available for purchase at <https://veritasbooks.com.au>

“The Truth About Social Credit” deals with the significance of the Curtin Government’s 1945 Banking Legislation, which some falsely claimed as a manifestation of Social Credit, as one of the first post-war steps to internationalize the nation’s banking system. The history of the past 50 years, and the current world crisis, affecting all nations, have increasingly confirmed my view that Social Credit offers the only hope of averting the eventual disintegration of yet another civilization.

Understanding The Financial System: Social Credit Rediscovered (Frances Hutchinson)

VERY FEW PEOPLE can say with any certainty what money is, exactly how the financial system operates, or why finance dominates policy formation throughout the social order. This has not always been the case. During the inter-war years of the 1920s and 1930s countless ordinary men and women conducted an informed debate on the flawed economic thinking, which led simultaneously to war, waste and poverty on an unprecedented scale. The worldwide Social Credit movement of this period gave rise to a practical political venture in the Canadian province of Alberta.

Major Clifford Hugh Douglas, M.I.Mech.E., M.I.E.E., consulting engineer, economist, author, and founder of the Douglas Social Credit Movement, was born in 1879 and died in 1952. Among other posts which he held in his earlier years were those of engineer with the — Canadian General Electric company;
Peterborough, Canada, — Assistant Engineer,
Lachine Rapids Hydraulic Construction;
Deputy Chief Electrical Engineer, Buenos Aires, and Pacific Railway;
Chief Engineer and Manager in India British Westinghouse Company;
Assistant Superintendent, Royal Aircraft
Factory Farnborough (GB).

During the First World War he was a Major in the Royal Flying Corps and later in the R.A.F. (Reserve).
After retiring from his engineering career, he and his wife ran a small yacht-building yard on Southampton Water for several years. The combination of beauty with functional efficiency in a successfully designed racing yacht had a special appeal for him.
When he lived in an old water-mill in Hampshire he used the water-wheel to turn a dynamo which lit and warmed the house as well as providing power for lathes and other tools. Later, when he moved to Scotland, many of his friends and followers remember helping to build his small hydro-electric-powered house, sited on the local burn which ran through his land. Since decentralisation of economic power was of the essence of his teaching, it should be put on record that he practised what he preached.

history of engineering.

One of his most interesting jobs, just before the 1914 War, was that of conducting preliminary experimental work and preparing plans and specifications for the electrical work on the London Post Office Railway, with later supervision of the installation of plant in what was to be one of the earliest examples of complete automation in the

Institutions exist to serve Individuals

Accepting this statement (systems were made for man, and not men for systems) as a basis of constructive effort, it seems clear that all forms, whether of government, industry or society must exist contingently to the furtherance of the principles contained in it. If a State system can be shown to be inimical to them it must go; if social customs hamper their continuous expansion - they must be modified; if unbridled industrialism checks their growth, then industrialism must be reined in.

That is to say, we must build up from the individual, not down from the State.
