BY HIS FRUITS YE SHALL KNOW HIM!

We print an article on page 59 by an acute observer of Canadian affairs resident in Alberta, because it provides an important background without which it is impossible to appreciate the movements which take place on the Alberta stage. With the personal anecdotes which are so pungently expressed we are, of course, not concerned.

A key to Mr. Aberhart's position may be found in the provisions which Mr. Aberhart laid down for prospective candidates for the Legislature. It will be noted that these are really concerned with methods of getting certain results which, by the very fact that they, the results, are not specified, prominently, were evidently regarded by Mr. Aberhart as of less importance than the methods.

This shows clearly that Mr. Aberhart saw himself as an expert—an assumption supported by the fact that he puts forward as part of his motion platform an "expert" plan. Largely, however, by calling for expert advice, Mr. Aberhart withdrew from his first position, which was obviously a false one, but instead of calling for the assistance of Major Douglas, the duly appointed Adviser to the Government of Alberta, during the very critical early period of his Government's existence, Mr. Aberhart sent no invitation of any kind to Major Douglas until December 10, or practically four months after he had come into office, and this despite the fact that Major Douglas was available and willing to carry out his duties as expert adviser to Mr. Aberhart who professed to aim at the introduction of Social Credit in Alberta.

Not merely did Mr. Aberhart not seek the advice of the best expert for his declared purpose, but he went to the other extreme and called in the worst possible expert in the person of Mr. E. J. Major, the acknowledged apostle of that "sound" finance which is the antithesis of Social Credit, and who, moreover, declared that he did not know anything about Social Credit and did not want to.

Mr. Aberhart's present position is thus seen to be completely unjustifiable, either on the claim that he is an expert or on the claim that he is not an expert.

It is important to notice that the question as to whether so-called "Social Credit" Government in Alberta has failed because the Provincial powers are insufficient, has not arisen. Had Mr. Aberhart been Prime Minister of Canada and had he, in that capacity, pronounced the same views, and taken the same advice, the result would have been exactly the same. He would have "deemed it essential not to shake the confidence" of Wall Street and Lombard Street.

We believe that Mr. Aberhart's refusal of the Loan Council was due to the pressure of the people of Alberta. There can be no little doubt that it will be only the continued pressure of the people that will establish democracy and achieve the results of freedom.
The League of Nations

The League of Nations

The League of Nations, founded in 1919, aimed to prevent war by promoting international cooperation and collective security. It was a precursor to the United Nations. The League was dissolved in 1946.

The League of Nations

The League of Nations was established after World War I to prevent future conflicts. It focused on promoting international cooperation, collective security, and the peaceful settlement of disputes.

The League of Nations

The League of Nations was a significant international organization that addressed issues such as disarmament, economic reconstruction, and human rights.

The League of Nations

The League of Nations played a role in various international events and decisions, but its effectiveness and impact were limited.

The League of Nations

The League of Nations faced various challenges, including limitations in enforcement and lack of member states' commitment.

The League of Nations

The League of Nations' dissolution marked the end of an era of international cooperation and collective security efforts.

Social Credit

Social Credit is a political and economic philosophy that advocates for the endowment of households with an economic right to the returns of their labor.

Social Credit

Social Credit was developed in Canada by Albert Savoie and has influenced various political movements and parties around the world.

Social Credit

Social Credit principles have been adopted and adapted by various political parties and movements, influencing policies and systems.

Economic Factors

There had also been a drive for increased production, which had resulted in a rise in prices. In cutting basing cost and loss and in an rising real wages for miners, it would not have been possible to do so. The rising cost of living had contributed to the increase in prices, which in turn had led to increased costs for the miners. This had resulted in a decrease in their real wages, which would have negatively affected their purchasing power and living standards.

Economic Factors

The rise in prices during the post-war period was partly due to the increased demand for goods, which led to a shortage of supply and subsequent inflation.

The Rise of Social Credit

The rise of Social Credit in the early 20th century was a result of economic and social conditions, which led to the development of this economic philosophy.

The Rise of Social Credit

Social Credit gained momentum during the economic challenges of the early 20th century, particularly in the wake of World War I.

Social Credit

Social Credit is a political philosophy that advocates for the distribution of wealth through the establishment of a social credit system.

Social Credit

Social Credit has been associated with various political movements and parties, aiming to address economic and social issues through a comprehensive system of economic reforms.
DOUGLAS ON PETITIONS

To Petition or to Demand?

In answer to a question about a Petition for Justice in Westminster, Mr. Major Douglas said:

I think the question may be put thus: Is the petition method - it is so framed as to ask for the reference to the High Court of Justice of whether or not the present financial system is the cause of poverty and unemployment? is it an effective method of getting the financial system changed?

The questioner interjected that the petition had been drafted by lawyers in such a way that it was to demand an application to the High Court of Justice to determine for the guidance of the Government whether or not certain things were done which were in conflict with the policy of the Government.

There are two things involved.

We will go the idea for the moment that there is nothing impossible to this machinery by which the people can exercise their will, that this is the machinery which should be employed, and that to use other machinery is obviously to bring upon yourself the suggestion that you do not believe the constitutional machinery for the purpose of exercising your will is any good to work.

If that is so, then the first thing to do is completely to abolish Parliament.

Mr. Asquith.

In one or two cases we have no other machinery but the ordinary machinery of British human beings, to live as freely and as possible, to enjoy what nature, science, and art have placed at our disposal, to do what we like with as few yoke races and limitations and taboos as possible.

But the majority of us have to earn our living, we have to sell our goods and services of some kind in order to gain money which is a claim on other goods and services.

Owing to the fact that modern machinery is also used in the manufacture of goods and services, every thing with an ever-decreasing amount of human effort is done, and it is therefore inevitable to depend upon employment, getting a living has become a very grim business.

In view of these facts to be told that the effect of a financial system that permits people to live as freely and as possible, is hurtful, towards destruction, and that it prevents individuals and nations to benefit only at the expenses of other and that market is made good, impossible and to batttle peace from the earth.

First Things First

The Book of Proverbs mentions three things as being great evils "for which the earth is disdained," and one of them is "a servant when he reigneth." We have permitted trade which should be a servant to rule over us, and the earth is indeed disdained. It is hurrying, towards destruction, and the farmers, the workers, the tradesmen, are finding their proper places, to put first things first, recognizing as a fact that this serves humanity and fosters life.

We point out that the so'ution of all the troubles enumerated above, is hurtful to the earth, and that we shall not demand work for all, involving, as it involves in this power age, making mases of things for which mankind must be found, nor 'sacrificed," a trade war leading inevit信息发布了。
ALBERTA BACKGROUND

The province of Alberta received worldwide publicity as a result of the election of the Social Credit Policy. Since the Alberta government received 48 of the 66 seats in the legislative assembly, there was a demand in the world. Credit Government in the world. Since the Alberta government has for its chief doctrines, the Rapture, the Tribulation and the bodily ascent of the shell game. It has always burned with ambition to be a liberal education, in the Huxleyian sense, that term would be understood in England. Of that province, were readers of the British, the isolation of the people was long apparent to those who were aware of his superiority knowledge or ability to his own. He is, however, a true interpreter of the Bible. That he has been put over by an old line politician, Aberhart was peeved. He was known in that regard, Aberhart was peeved. His work will, of course, go on, and I feel confident will be well done, but it is not to be taken lightly. I have no doubt that he will be associated with him, and I am under no delusions as to the loss that I personally suffer, because of the Social Credit Movement in general has sustained in its early and untimely death. The world is full of people who will do anything for you except what you ask them to do. Perhaps the best way is to stop and think about it. Bennett did what he was asked to do, with conspicuous success. This quality of reliability seems to be allied to a special form of 'selflessness'..."
THE UNWISDOM OF THE LEARNED

An Engineer gives his view of the withdrawal of Major Douglas from Membership of the Institutions of Electrical and Mechanical Engineers

A NYBODY built above the average size physically is made in this world to go about this earth to serve the press-almanac many hard knock. It seems to be asking too much of mankind to urge the provision of baths, beds and buses large enough to accommodate those who are the outsize in humans? It seems to be asking why so much suffering on the outsize in humans? It seems to be asking why sunblinds of shops, and similar erections so clearly what many of them think about it. Their creed is that Man is here and that he is being asked to do about it.

THE MONEY-MINDED

When I was starving and had nought to eat, I was jumping for joy. When I was clothed in rags and blue with hunger, I was gambling on the horses. When I was homeless, wandering in the west, I was at the end of my tether. When I and my beloved longed to wed, “The only way,” said Victor, “is to marry a woman.”

ECONOMIC LEAGUE’S ACTIVITIES

The report of the Economic League, of which Lord Gainford is president, submitted at the annual meeting in London yesterday, shows that the past year was one of record activity.

The aims of the Economic League are to arouse a general public interest in the study of economic questions, to search for the principles of private ownership and to refuse unconomic domination. The League is underwritten by a number of financial organisations.

The Economic League adopts the technique of attacking Social Credit in the guise of sweet reasonableness. Incidentally the League is supported by the men of business, who think that the credit which belongs to Industry and Trade, and that our industries are being subsidised by the State, and that the demand for homes was met;—

Mr. Addison Perry-Keene, cost comptroller of the Austin Motor Works, recently stated that their production per week was 122 hours. To-day the company could make 400 cars what it could have done in the old 18-hour week.

Obituary

Social Crediters in Glasgow have lost an old and faithful stalwart in the death of Mr. John B. McTavish, O.B.E., who succumbed, on April 7, from an attack of bronchial pneumonia.

He was one of those who early embraced Social Credit principles. Although he worked quietly in his own way, his influence has laid most stones.

CORRESPONDENCE

Another Bone to Gnaw

I was amazed to see the following in the columns of S. W. Alexander, City Editor of the Sunday Express, of April 19:

Here is another bone that readers can gnaw over the week-end. I think the joint in question has become too much like the intransigent.

Their employee list shows great profit, and their idea in life is safety first. Banking in England is well conducted, and even in the great depression there was never any likelihood of bankruptcy.

But it might have been a good thing if there had been some risk. It would have caused trouble, but no more trouble than caused by the issue which had to be taken by industrial concern and consumers of Government bonds. The public demands the bonds at any price.

I wonder if he knows he’s running the risk of the sack?

BOOK REVIEWS

The Home Market*

The aim of this book is to assemble together all the essential statistics which the planners of advertising campaigns find so useful when drafting their publicity and market schemes. For markets as a whole, the book is convenient and handy. The tables of statistics are presented very attractively in colour diagrams.

There is, however, no table showing the rate of flow of money into consumers’ purses related to the rate of flow of prices into the market. Apart from the actual goods themselves, these two flows and their aspect to consumers, distributors and producers alike, constitute the more important facts about which information can be given in regard to the subject of markets.

War Finance†

This is an interesting book. The author develops the case for the proposition that the accumulation of money in the midst of plenty is due to the financial policy followed by the Government during the war. He argues, quite reasonably, that the raising of huge war loans, and the inevitable high interest charges, was an unnecessary act.

The historical part of the book is well documented and supported by pictures, not all flattering to politicians or bankers. Students will find ample evidence of the creation of credit by the banks and the loans made to “approved customers” on the security of the stock market. The book is not, of course, a criticism of the bankers, but a study of the law as it stands to-day.

We Will Abolish Poverty

Elector's Demand and Undertaking

1. I know that there are goods in plenty, so poverty can be quite unnecessary.
2. I want, too, national dividends distributed to me and every Briton so that we can buy what we need, and to vote consistently against the present Member of Parliament here won't undertake this, I will vote to defeat him and his successors until this policy prevails.
