THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK: Whoops... The Law Society of New South Wales, in its wisdom, decided to issue a statement—back in August—that gave the impression all of its members supported redefining marriage.

That's the way things are supposed to work in the world of 'marriage equality':
the Central Committee decides your moral worldview.

However, we're not there just yet and the statement has backfired spectacularly. More than 250 lawyers forced a humiliating retreat. And now the Law Society of New South Wales has had to tell the truth: not only did the Law Society not ask its members their views about marriage, but the Law Society cannot guarantee legal freedoms won't be stripped, if marriage is redefined, because no one has the foggiest idea about what the actual law may look like. This is from the Law Society's embarrassing statement today:

In light of concerns raised with her that the press release held out that solicitors had formed a united view on same-sex marriage, the President wishes to state that they have not. There has been no survey or poll of solicitors on the issue...Lawyers have an obligation to question any adverse consequence of a proposed change to the existing law, in particular how it will affect the dignity and equality of all Australians and the impact on justice, fairness and other freedoms. This is made difficult, if not impossible when there is no available draft legislation containing the proposed change.

If the Laws Society of New South Wales has no idea what the impacts of 'marriage equality' will be, how can Australians have any idea what they are actually voting for? - - Bernard Gaynor, Qld

SOME SENSE FROM JOHN HOWARD By Mrs Vera West

John Howard is doing a little to redeem his disgraceful time as prime minister in his No campaign. The latest is a full-page ad in The Weekend Australian, September 30-October 1, 2017, p. 10, which gives a good summary of the threats of a successful Yes vote.

Most shocking for democracy, Labor and the Greens will not accept a successful No vote. There are no protections clearly forthcoming on religious freedom, and Howard mentions the disgraceful cases involving section 18 C, of the Racial Discrimination Act, as not engendering much confidence.

What a pity he did not do anything about this when he was on watch, but like Abbott, bowed to the ethnic/multicult lobby.

He notes, following the Safe Schools controversies, that education activists are "ready to introduce classroom material regarding gender issues unacceptable to the mainstream of Australian parents."

John, this is already occurring, but we have not seen anything yet, if they get the Yes vote up. Time to move kids out of schools and home school. Maybe even abandon Australia! Just kidding, we are going to fight to the bitter end, aren't we?

We are standing at the end of Western civilisation. This, and many other issues reported this week, when we join up the dots, form a frightening vision of the apocalypse. Yes, it has all been left go for so long, by good men who did nothing, or not very much, and now we sail into uncharted waters, with rocky reefs, everywhere. Sharks encircle the boat. Oh, it just sprung yet another leak. Got the mental image? Help!

It is not too late to do your bit in trying to save all that is worthwhile by telling the No side to all friends, family and neighbours, and getting them to do so as well. Otherwise, our culture will be changed, pretty quickly.

SENATE SPEECH BY Pauline Hanson 9/8/17 - AN OVERVIEW WELL WORTH A READ

I am well known for speaking up about immigration, but what isn't well known is that I am not anti-migrant.

In 1996, I spoke out about the high rate of immigration from Asia that would have put us on a trajectory of losing our Australian identity.

I support immigration when it is in the best interests of Australia, but we have made a mistake in accepting high levels of migrants from countries where democracy is unknown and accepting people who follow Islam and its political ideology.

One of the reasons we don't know enough about the extent of the problems with Islamic immigration is that political parties don't want to upset the Muslim vote. There is plenty of information collected, but it is not published and it is not available to senators like myself.

In hiding the evidence of high unemployment and high dependence on social welfare, the government hopes you won't discover the problems associated with Australian Muslim communities.

Despite the best efforts of Labor and the coalition, we have found some reliable information.

The unemployment rate amongst Australian Muslims is more than double the average rate and it is more than 50 per cent higher than the nearest other major religious group. The unemployment rate for Muslim women is higher than that of Muslim men, making Muslim women the most likely religious group to be unemployed in Australia.

This persistent high-unemployment level among Australian Muslims translates into high levels of income support in the form of payments made by the Department of Social Services.

I don't have enough time to go into greater detail, but in densely populated Muslim suburbs, Muslims are paid high levels of taxpayer-funded support in the form of disability pensions, carer pensions, carer allowances and other forms of income support.

Australian Muslims are a significant drain on the public purse, because of the rates of unemployment and dependence on social welfare.

You will not hear these facts from Labor, because Labor is muzzled in pursuit of keeping the Muslim vote it already heavily relies on. We looked at the electoral areas containing 10,000 or more Australian Muslims, using 2016 census information. Every one of those 15 federal seats is held by Labor, and 50.4 per cent of all Australian Muslims live in these 15 Labor seats.

It is the concentration of the Muslim vote, in a relatively small number of postcodes and electoral divisions, which gives Australian Muslims a much higher influence in Australian politics. What we know for certain is that Labor needs the Muslim vote to keep those seats in the parliament.

The reliance on the Muslim vote in turn gives Australian Muslims an important say over Labor policy, and that influence is increasing because of the high birth rates among Muslim women. In fact, the number of Australian Muslims doubled in the decade between 2006 and 2016.

The young age profile of Muslims in Australia means that Muslims will increase naturally at a greater rate than any other. The concentration of Australian Muslims in a limited number of postcode areas, together with the high rates of birth, means Labor is now firmly in the hands of the Muslim voter.

The demographic information is irrefutable. The only issue is how Australian Muslims will change the Australian Labor Party and Australia.

The Muslim vote has pushed hard for Labor to abandon its traditional support for Israel and they have kept Labor silent on the fate of Christians in the Middle East, particularly Maronite and Coptic Christians, who once made up 20 per cent of the Middle East and now make up less than 5 per cent.

In the lower house seat of Blaxland, in NSW, there are 50,995 Muslims, or 29.2 per cent of the population. In the Sydney seat of Watson, there are 40,903 Muslims or 23.4 per cent of the population. In Victoria it's a similar situation. In Calwell, there are 29,324 Muslims and in Werriwa there are 21,761 Muslims.

Labor has made a conscious decision to sell its soul for the Muslim vote. Every speech and every comment made by Labor is now made with reference to keeping the Muslim vote. Labor cannot speak out in opposition or act in government on issues affecting Australian Muslims because it fears losing seats in parliament.

The numbers are so finely balanced in the lower house of this parliament that the loss of this small clutch of seats would see Labor's chance of government end. Labor's dependence on the Muslim vote is frightening, because a small but fast-growing group, opposed to our way of life, is bending Labor to its will. And communities of Coptic Christians and Lebanese Maronites and other Christians know how that story ends.

The Muslim vote opposes same-sex marriage because the notion of sexual orientation is against the fundamental teachings of Islam. So here is Labor's dilemma: how does Labor get same-sex marriage passed, bury the hundreds of thousands of 'no' votes and not upset Muslims in Labor electorates? The best way forward is to let parliament decide, and then they will tell their Muslim voters they had to follow the party line—gutless!

It is common knowledge that areas with high concentrations of Australian Muslims are also areas associated with organised crime and acts of terrorism performed in the name of Islam. Labor knows this as well as any Australian, but it cannot speak directly, so it talks in riddles. Who can forget Bill Shorten talking to the cameras about combating extreme extremism and hoping those watching could see that he was like any one in a hostage situation. He was communicating in riddles, hoping not to offend the hostage takers—that is, the Muslim vote in Australia.

Australian Muslims take all the benefits that Australia has to offer, but Australian Muslims are underrepresented in the workforce and underrepresented in the Defence forces, instead preferring to fight for ISIL in Syria and Iraq. A federal investigation into the status of foreign fighters found 96 per cent had been on welfare benefits, including disability pensions, before leaving to fight overseas.

It's a disgrace that more Australian Muslims have gone to fight in Syria and Iraq than have joined the Australian Defence Forces to defend Australia. It is a disgrace our pension system is abused by Australian Muslims, and it is a disgrace the Department of Social Services is inept. It is undeniable that many Australian Muslims choose to be separate from other Australians living in communities.

THE SLOW TREASON OF BREXIT By Tom North

We knew it, it was only a matter of time.
The globalists elites do not take defeats lightly:

It will take so long to transition out of the EU, that by that time there will be more than enough “migrants” to ensure a new vote, and put those Brits right back in their place. Remember, Britain, like Australia and the United

WHY OUR SCHOOLS ARE IN CHAOS By James Reed

Before leaving teaching I clearly saw why students were doing so poorly, especially boys; political correctness and the trendy progressive agenda by Left wing teachers were destroying our youth, particularly by the actions of feminist teachers.

Now we again have the public angst of wearing the fact that the average Australian student is barely equal to the most disadvantaged of Singapore's students: The Australia, September 27, 2017, p. 1. In other words our students are absolutely hopeless at the basics, maths reading and science.

And, the sacred economy is going to suffer. Yet the corrupt corporate class continues to support trendy progressive issues, even though the longer-term consequences will be contrary to their economic interests.

ON TARGET

Many of them never leave these communities except when accessing government services and benefits and having holidays in their countries of birth.

One Nation supporters have a positive view of migrants when they are willing to become active citizens, to work and to make Australia a better place. However, we are not seeing too much of that from Australian Muslims.

It would be comforting to think the problems we have with Muslim refugees and second-generation Muslims will resolve, given time and money, but there is no evidence anywhere in the world that this will be the case.

We need to learn the lesson from other countries who have accepted high numbers of Muslims into their country. They have found that, as the number of Muslims rise in a country, the tolerance of those Muslims to others in that country falls. Then, Muslims demand special treatment, which is given for the sake of appeasement, but is never enough. The demands just keep coming—discussions to change the words ‘race’ to ‘people’ in Section 51(xxvi) of the Australian Constitution for the benefit of Muslims because they are not a race, they are a people.

There are no democratic Islamic countries in the world. If we don't ban further immigration from Islamic countries, our way of life will be lost and the freedoms we take for granted will be gone. ***

States, is on schedule to serve the elites by becoming non-white majority real soon:

<http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-3613682/RIP-Britain-academic-objectivity-Oxford-Professor-DAVID-COLEMAN-one-country-s-population-experts-says-white-Britons-minority-late-2060s-sooner-current-immigration-trends-continue.html>

Time to take to the streets in protest, Britain, while you still can! ***

Maybe the great deluded think that immigration will cure all, even apocalypses.

Schools have engaged in highly destructive progressive, actually, repressive politically correct brainwashing for decades. This has dumbed down an entire generation, along with every other force working to destroy us. It will be a task of Hercules to fight back against this, but perhaps Asianisation is our only hope.

Sack all of the largely White school teachers, because, after all, Whites have White privilege. Then replace them with teachers from Singapore and Asian.

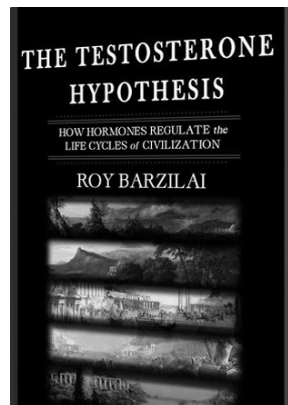

Long hard lessons in the basics, reading mathematics and science. No more social science nonsense.

Not only should this be eliminated from universities, being hopelessly corrupt, but we need to do the same to high schools. And soon. ***

TESTOSTERONE AND THE FATE OF CIVILISATIONS By Mrs Vera West

I have mentioned this book before, but have now finished it, looking at the Kindle version, which is much cheaper than paper: Roy Barzilai, The Testosterone Hypothesis: How Hormones Regulate the Life Cycles of Civilizations: <https://www.amazon.com.au/Testosterone-Hypothesis-Hormones-Regulate-Civilization-ebook/dp/B00WT870N6>

The book deals with themes dear to my heart, such as that Western Christian civilisation is collapsing all around us, yet little is being done to halt the decline.

free testosterone rates falling by as much as 50 percent in recent decades.

The book examines many theories of the fall, from diet, to polluted environments, to a general decline in health and exercise, and concludes that the full evidence is not yet in. However, the evidence linking the rise and maintenance of civilisations with the manly drives of testosterone are clear, and it is just as clear that the decline in this hormone corresponds perfectly with the rise of philosophies of leftism and political correctness, which are anti-West, and lacking in traditional manliness. Indeed, as I have documented over the years, traditional manhood is the one common enemy of all the Left, libtard and antifa ideologies.

All of this is grim, and if we cannot return to the testosterone mindset, Western civilisation is doomed, Barzilai argues. Unfortunately, after giving us all we need to know about hormones and how they create the drive to build civilisations, we are not told how to regain manhood. Thus, the last chapter of the book left me disappointed, although the rest of the book confirmed all that I have written on this topic. This topic has been discussed at many sites, but there is still no comprehensive plan about what to do. Hormone-disrupting chemicals in the water and the environment are particularly disturbing.

If Western civilisation collapses, then those who survive will have higher testosterone, beyond the mere “lucky,” so I suppose natural selection will have the ultimate answer. ***

NO HOPES OVER THE FAMILY LAW ACT By Mrs Vera West

Long-suffering men, don't get your hopes up over the suggestions of an overhaul of the Family Law Act. This Act was an early politically correct attack upon men and the family, and has brought untold misery to many; the brainchild of Fabian socialist Lionel Murphy.

The reforms are basically to save money and court time, so that disputes are solved faster: The Australian, September 28, 2017, p. 1. Yes, but so what if the initial basis from which this law starts is flawed? No fault divorce, said to be necessary for feminism and all that jazz, has been a disaster. Put reform of this law, on a long list of “things to do after the collapse.”

Here is what one lawyer, who was on the receiving end of family law thinks about it: <http://www.couriermail.com.au/news/opinion/family-court-robs-men-and-demeans-women-by-splitting-property-equally-when-a-marriage-ends/news-story/bebc7e9301d2c37d8a13db55836114c5> ***

PROTECTED ONLY BY TRACTORS By Tom North

By the time you read this, the results will be known, but they are likely to be negative. Catalan has conducted a “banned” referendum about independence from Spain, and the Spanish government has responded as any despot would do, seizing over 2.5 million ballots, as the Madrid Deep State uses the police to squash the referendum.

The High Court, surprise, surprise, ruled that the referendum was illegal, even though this essentially begs the question about the “legality” of such a decision, and legal body itself. As well, the court ordered Google to delete an app which Catalan separatists were using to publicise the referendum. There's free speech for you!

However, in a counter move, hundreds of tractors are being employed in defence of the polling stations. ***
